Every man, woman and child benefits in some way every day from the fire-prevention activities of The National Board of Fire Underwriters, "America's Unofficial Department of Public Safety," maintained by 200 capital stock fire insurance companies. This work has also saved property owners much money on their insurance costs. As fire losses have been reduced, fire insurance rates have been reduced, too . . . an average of more than 40% in the last 30 years.

*CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. In addition to legal reserves, its policies are backed by cash capital and surplus funds set aside to meet not merely normal claims but also the sweeping losses due to conflagrations and other catastrophes. Its organized public services are national in scope. Its system of operating through Agents everywhere gives prompt personal service to policyholders.

ST. JOE AND SPENCERVILLE 5th AND 6th TOWNS TO ENTER SALVATION ARMY ANNUAL APPEAL

Under the able leadership of Mrs. Kathleen Scholes, of St. Joe Legion Auxiliary, as Chairman, St. Joe swings in as the 5th town in the DeKalb County Salvation Army Annual Appeal.

She will be ably assisted by an executive committe composed of Mesdames Laney Gee, Grover Curie, and Lehr Wilder. Other memberes of the committee are; Mesdames Arthur Lyon, Willard Hurni, Alice Copp, and Frank Bowman. Mr. Ed Storer, postmaster, will act as treasurer and Scout Executive Leslie Wilbern will circularize the town with information showing why there is an obligation, for what the funds are used, and the great good being accomplished by their use. The St. Joe campaign is set for the week of August 27 to Sept. 2, and the quota is $41.00. Here is one of those pathetic cases showing how much good is being accomplished by your funds.

Edith, a school teacher, came to our house to hide from friends. "I do not want you to think that I am bad. People might think so, but I cannot believe it." Well dressed and cultured, her story was that the man she loved was killed in an automobile accident before they could marry. She felt so helpless, friends sympathized but knew nothing of her grief. She resigned her position and came to Chicago. One evening, walking into an Army Hall, she confided in an officer who arranged for her to go to the Home. Edith is now boarding her baby and is employed as a governess in a nice family, combining her teaching experience with motherly love in training the little children of her employer.

Owing to the fact that impostors in Salvation Army uniforms have secured the funds which should have gone for the care of the unfortunate of DeKalb County in the Army's state institutions, the Salvation Army state headquarters is discontinuing tambourine collections and substituting in its place, the annual appeal, in which a person may contribute only once a year. The plan is efficient, saves time and expense, and Field Representative A. H. Christian from the public relations department, state headquarters, states "up in Wisconsin where I organized the annual appeals for seven years, the people would not go back to the tambourine collection method."

Spencerville enters the DeKalb County Salvation Army Annual Appeal as the 6th town under the dynamic leadership of Mrs. Ruth Baker, as Chairman, and a live wire Executive Committee composed of: Mesdames William Erick, Winifred Shook and Pauline Baumgartner.

Other members are: Mesdames Agnes Paschen, Audra Wade, Clyde Rectenwall, and Ruby Kraft. Mr. Clyde Rectenwall, cashier of the Farmers & Merchants Bank will act as treasurer.

The dates set for the campaign are August 17th to 24, and the quota is $36.00.

BAKER REUNION

The 23rd annual reunion of the Baker family was held Sunday, Aug. 6, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harris at Concord. A basket dinner was greatly enjoyed at the noon hour.

Those attending from a distance were: Mr. Jasper Nicholas and two daughters, from Lansing, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bouse, Pennville, Ind., Mr. William Knouse, Mrs. Hazel Barthemen and daughter from Antwerp, O., and many from Ft. Wayne, Spencerville, St. Joe and Concord. There were 85 present.

Mrs. Minnie Ulm read the poem which was sent to the St. Joe News last week by A. R. Wyatt, of Fort Wayne, about the "Sheep Skin Band," and was greatly appreciated by all, since it pertained to Dan, Henry, and William Baker, members of our family.

Election of officers was held. President, Mr. Orla Baker; secretary and treasurer Mrs. Ethelyn Miller-Baker. Our family, as a whole, want to send our sincere thanks to Mr. Wyatt, for the lovely poem.

Celebrates Eighty-first Birthday

William Church, of North Clark Street, Auburn, a former St. Joe resident, was pleasantly surprised on Sunday afternoon at his home, in observance of his eighty-first birthday. Forty-two friends and relatives came to his home to offer congratulations. The afternoon was spent socially and refreshments were served. Thoes present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook and family, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cook and son, Robert Cook, Carleton Wilmot, Frank Giant, all of St. Joe; Mr. and Mrs. Ira Church and family, and Mrs. Addie Pruit, of South Bend; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bartels and family, of Garrett; Mr. and Mrs. Ora Bassett, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Shaffer, Mr. and Mrs. William Graham and family, Ruth Church, and Mr. and Mrs. William Church.

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

An increase in receipts in the calf and sheeep pens brought the total receipts of this week's sale more than 100 head above last week. Hogs were generally 40 to 50 cents per cwt lower than a week ago. Veals were steady with deacon calves $1.00 per head higher. Lambs steady to strong and cattle slightly higher.

Hogs; 175 to 230, $5.70 to $5.90. Fat sows, $3.90 to $4.30. Veals, $10.75. Medium grade calves were a trifle lower than last week with select veals 25c higher. In the cattle department the bidding ran active with no change in prices, some medium quality heifers sold in a price range from $6.00 to $7.00. A truck load of pasture heifers selling by the head equaled from $6.00 to $7.00 per cwt.

Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Price attended the Dill reunion at Bippus, Ind., Sunday. Next week they expect to start on their trip West, visiting the San Francisco Fair and many other places of interest. Dr. Price has a brother, Will Price, living in Denver, whom they expect to visit also. They will be gone for three or four weeks.

HEART ATTACK CLAIMS LIFE OF MRS. MINNIE SMITH, 66

A heart attack, suffered Monday morning at 1:30, claimed the life of Mrs. Minnie Smith, 66, at her home one mile southeast of Newville.

Mrs. Smith had been ill since last Winter, but Sunday being the birthday of her only son, C. W. Smith, of Mongo, she determined to attend the celebration. In company with her husband, Charles, a well known melon grower, and other relatives, she spent the day at Mongo, returning to her home Sunday evening. She had felt unusally well and death came unexpectedly.

A grandson accompanied them home for a few days, and he remained with his grandmother while Mr. Smith attended the Chautauqua at Newville U. B. Church, Sunday evening. When he returned home Mrs. Smith was sleeping and in the night the family was disturbed by her illness, and before medical aid could be secured she had passed away. John Washler and wife were called and they did all they could to relieve Mrs. Smith.

The deceased was born in Defiance County, Ohio, and was married to Charles Smith, October 13, 1897. She is survived by the husband, and the son. A daughter, Hazel Bell, burned to death at the age of four, in 1905. Two grandchildren, a brother, John E. Davis, Lockwood, Ohio, and a sister, Mrs. Jennie Collins, Hicksville, Ohio, also survive. Two sisters preceded her in death.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Hicksville U. B. Church, with Rev. P. A. Hubartt, of Newville, officiating. Burial was made in Forest Home Cemetery, Hicksville.

The tool is in an historic old foundry at Tinker's Hollow, five miles from Conneaut, Ohio, and the story of its discovery is told by Elmer Wiley.

"When young Bill Tinker, whose father built the foundry, first started to work on the docks," the old man explained, "he had to be initiated into the ways of dockmen. They sent him after a left-handed monkey wrench—but he fooled them—he got one!"

Wiley explained that the wrench, now the property of the fourth Tinker generation, is of iron, measuring 14 inches. It differs from the conventional wrench in that the stem which regulates the jaws has a left-handed thread.

MELON PACKING TO GET IN FULL SWING TODAY

With the arrival of the sorting machinery over B. & O. Wednesday, the sorting and packing of cantaloupes for St. Joe River Valley shipment, will be in full swing today.

In order to care for the Monday deliveries to the packing tent, Al Fossmeyer, in charge of packing for the Gerrard Co., of Cincinnati, had to skirmish about and ship the melons to market by truck on Tuesday evening, made necessary by the delay in the arrival of the equipment.

Our growers have been very considerate by this first delay, and now we feel that things will move off nicely, and that the crop will be moved promptly from the packing tent, located east of the elevator.

In checking up on the Monday market, the Benton Harbor, Michigan, Cash and Carry, quoted crates of 16 small melons selling at 25c to 30c; 16 large, 65 to 70c. At Chicago terminals the wholesale market for 16 small selling at 35 to 40c; 16 large at 75c to $1. At Cincinnati the quotation was 16 small at 50c, and 16 large at 75c to $1.15.

The local raisers feel that the qaulity of the Valley melons will bring a higher price when sent beyond the trucking areas, and the quality of the delivery so far has exceeded the Company expectations along this line.

We quote a letter sent to Mr. C. E. Baker, County Agent, by John H. Barr, of the S. A. Gerrard Co., who has charge of the car lot shipment, which will show the keen interest of the company in this first shipping attempt for the Valley. It is as follows:

Dear Mr. Baker:

"We desire to thank you for your interest in the cantaloupe deal and we will be obliged to depend upon you to contact the growers until Mr. Fossmeyer gets under way.

"Mr. Fossmeyer has advised that it is quite difficult to determine accurately the cost of packing, not knowing the volume that will be offered. He proposes to use the Western standard crate which is 12x12x22⅛ inside dimension, attractively labeled with our Red Hat brand or another similar brand.

It is to be understood that the growers are to deliver to the packing tent fully matured melons which will be graded by Mr. Fossmeyer according to his best judgment as to number 1's, 2's and culls. For the services of grading, packing and loading, Mr. Fossmeyer names a tentative price of 35c per crate which is subject to a refund providing there is sufficient volume in the season to permit Mr. Fossmeyer to operate economically.

Mr. Fossmeyer will keep an accurate check of each grower's melons and report to each the percentage of number 1's, 2's and culls according to the pack. Mr. Fossmeyer will also advise us the complete manifests so that we can have the necessary sales information and likewise permit us to render account sales to the growers. This accounting will be handled as quickly as possible after the sales are completed.

We shall deduct from the price realized 35c per crate packing charges and 10% commission and in the event merchandise is sold delivered to any market, transportation charges including precooling. In the event we are obliged to consign, any commission charge for our agent will be absorbed by our 10%. However we should be obliged to deduct any incidental charge such as drayage, reicing, demurrage, applicable to that particular shipment.

We are extremely anxious to make this a satisfactory deal for the growers and while we are very much disturbed over general market conditions, we feel that this method of marketing will be preferable to the present haphazard methods that have been used in the past few years.

We believe it wise to acquaint the growers with the fact that it is to their advantage to leave the lower grades of melons in the field and thereby eliminate the competition of the poor melons with their better grades.

We realize that this is an experiment and will give it our wholehearted support and we certainly would appreciate the full cooperation of the growers.

You can rest assured that Mr. Fossmeyer is anxious to make a success and will do his utmost to satisfy the growers in his operations."

I've always wondered whether the absent-minded professor ever forgot to register?

It still holds true, a tight nut is a danger in the makeup of any automobile—or it's driver.

Almost every man likes flattery—even though it sometimes is short of his own opinion of himself.

Harry Kees was overheard to remark that at least you didn't have to locate a finance company before you bought the old horse and buggy.

Keep a package of paper picnic spoons in the medicine chest for measuring purposes. Throw away after using. This saves silver spoons from the stain which medicines cause. Furthermore, these spoons are more sanitary than silver spoons.

Whether the world is blue or rosy depends on the kind of spectacles we wear. It's our glasses, not the world, that needs attention.

What puzzles many a youngster is how their parents have lived this long without knowing any more than they do!

A sure way to make a hit with a woman, married fifteen years, is to tell her she dosn't look it.

The only product that never seems to exceed the demand for it is propaganda.

The vacation that some men had was in doing the things their wives had thought out for them to do during the winter.

One of the most appropriate showers for a bride is the "canned goods" surprise. What is a bride without a can-opener?

We are asked to believe the one about the fellow who pulled up the anchor and found a 24-inch trout attached.

Real presence of mind is in remembering the license number of the fellow's car that hit you.

Those who are interested in politics—and that broad classification must take in about 99 per cent of the population—are giving a good deal of thought to whom the Republicans will pick to run for the Presidency. That is a much more important question now than it was in 1936—no expert gave the GOP a chance to win then, but most of the experts think it has a fair chance now, if it can produce a pleasing candidate and platform.

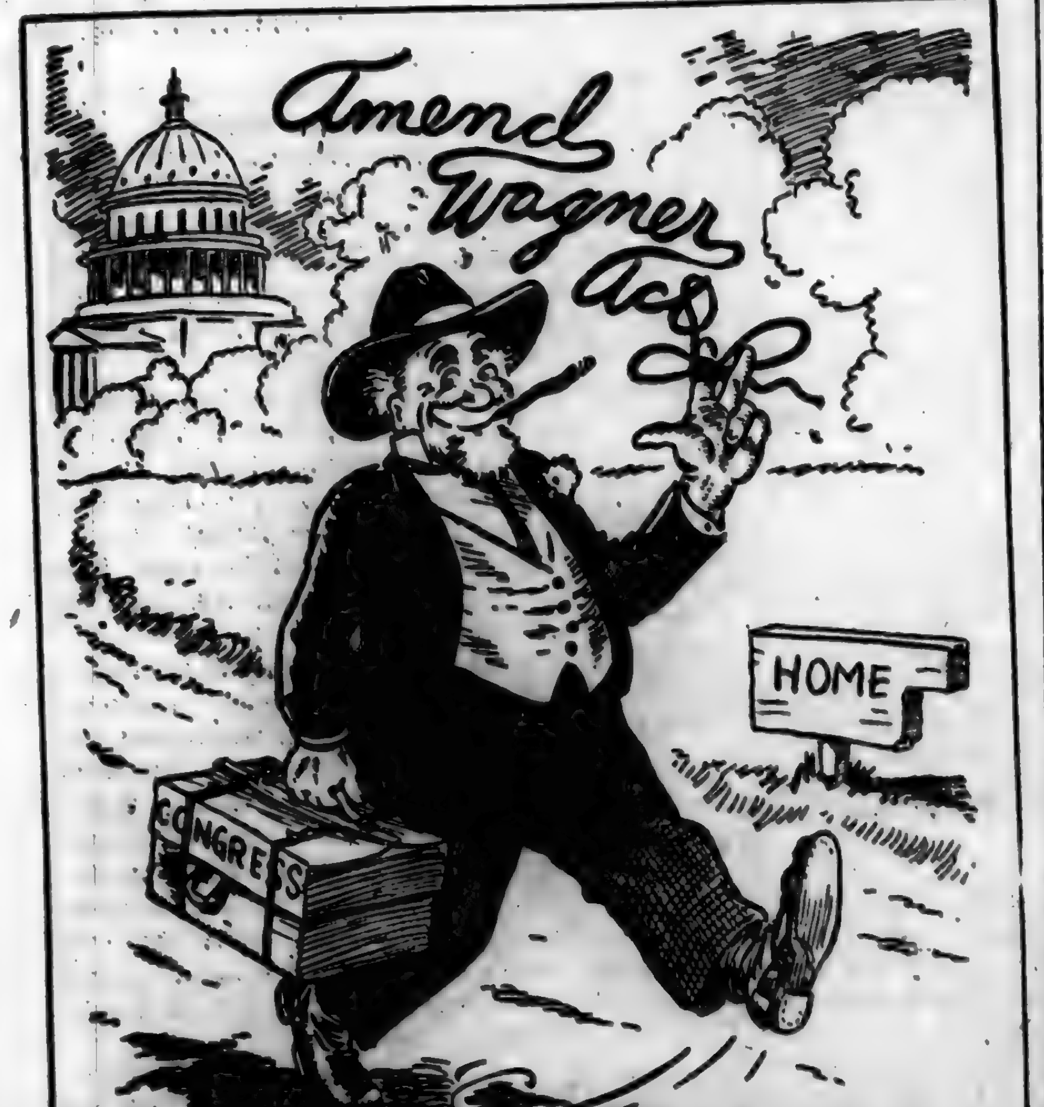
At the moment, going by recent polls, Tom Dewey, racket-buster extraordinary, is far in the lead—some 45 per cent of the Republicans queried by the Institute favor him. Vandenberg and Taft are running second and third. Then, far down the list on a percentage basis, came Hoover, Landon and Borah.

Interesting point is a strong increase in support for Vandenberg. Obvious reason for that are his victories in the last Congress. He led the successful fight against amending the Neutrality Act, and was a big factor in beating the Florida ship canal project. And he has long advocated denunciation of the 1911 U. S.—Japanese trade treaty—a step taken by the State Department a few weeks ago. He was also much in the public eye because of his activity in support of various amendments to the social security act.

Of course, public support doesn't necessarily assure a candidates nomination. Both parties are still dominated by political machines which think much of their power and perpetuation and little of public desires. The machines aren't so powerful as in the twenties, when dying Boies Penrose had no difficulty in forcing the Republicans to nominate obscure Senator Harding, but they still control a lot of jobs and they are a force to be reckoned with. However, if a candidate for either party's nomination is able to enlist enough public enthusiasm the machines don't like to take the risk of fighting him.

Keep your eye out for a political explosion in England before very long. Chamberlain supporters have lost by elections recently and the Premier's last vote of confidence in the Commons was one of the smallest on record.

LEST HE FORGET



LABOR DAY

The celebration of Labor Day holds a most important meaning for all Americans. It is the acknowledgement that it is honorable in our country to work with one's hands. This is not so in many foreign lands where there is a class distinction so pronounced that the laborer for hire and employer who hires are in two distinct and separate classes. Almost every American has a part in labor at some time or another, and the average American is the American laborer.

Of course there is a labor problem in this country. For the conditions of labor alter from year to year and such a large organization as is the labor group needs to change in its various responsibilities. New leaders come and go, discord and divisions arise in its ranks. It is the hope of all that such difficulties will iron themselves out and we can continue to respect the purpose of this labor. There have been times when exceptional cases have arisen to cause citizens to disapprove tactics of labor. In order to win a point, violence is not necessarily wise. As a whole, labor and its employers are on a firmer footing, a clearer understanding exists between the two. We wish that the common gain for both will be felt and the steady, strong leadership of such a force as labor will call forth wise and seasoned heads.

FAIR TIMES

In almost all such communities as ours folks are busy with plans for state and county fairs. There is great concern over live stock, poultry, farm and home products, various 4-H club projects. All is under way to make each fair the biggest and best ever! The usual exhibits for prizes in canning and preserving intrigue and tempt the stomach of us all. The handwork is always beautiful, while the livestock is one of the fairest points of any fair.

Perhaps the most successful feature of any fair is the social time. Many faces of friends appear at the yearly fair, not seen at any other time. It may mean a family reunion or community home coming. It brings and renews associations of other years. Everyone enters a fair week with pleasure and support.

There have been many things which have changed in our day, things which would puzzle a grandfather or his father, perhaps, but they would still feel pretty much at home at the fairs. Old friends like pigs and horses, fat cattle and pumpkins, patchwork quilts and apples would greet them today as yesterday. There may be popcorn and peanut stands crowding the bandstand but that is the same always! It is indeed good to have the institution of the county fair remaining as many other American institutions pass from the picture.

TO SEPTEMBER

We bid goodby to warmer days and come into September with a satisfaction after months of hot sun. The sunshine of September is softer and more kind as it filters thru the leaves. The early morning fog lifts on gardens busy with their blooms. Petunias are lovely in color, zinnias hale and hearty looking, marigold heads are golden and so heavy they droop with their weight. Asters are softer in hue and a true indication of Fall. Phlox are sweet to see but sweeter to smell, and the butterflies attest to the loveliness of it all. Bees hover close to the clover and we watch our step as we walk on the grass. The sight of a sunflower may be uninteresting and plebian to some, but it is a decoration that hides many a sore spot in the land. Clouds seem lazy and wooly as they slowly pass across the sky. Life is still and soft and oh, how sweet, in September.

AGAIN THE AUTO:

The harvesters of the great western states have not the need of calling the nation to send hands to help reap the grain. In the days of old when it was mighty hard to reach the fields of the west, there was need of extra help and many a request was made to idle labor. Today we have the men and boys who go into the cherry, cotton, peach and wheat section, and in many cases they become too numerous. Many families are supported in this way. It means that with the auto as their means of transportation and living inexpensive by camping out, the helper can go a longer distance and save money as he earns it. The old cry for help from those lands whence cometh our bread, has been answered by the automobile.

THE GREAT DESTROYER

Fire, the great destroyer, has been in fine fettle this Summer.

Fire, raging and uncontrolled, has made black and barren and ugly, thousands of acres of the nation's finest forest land. Fire has turned pleasant homes into smoking piles of debris. Fire has ravaged factories, and added men and women to the long rolls of the jobless. Fire has marched irresistibly through farms, killing livestock, razing buildings, and ruining crops.

A few of these fires may be unavoidable. But they are very few indeed, and so rare as to be hardly worth mentioning. Eighty per cent of all fires, say the experts, could have been prevented. They need never have occurred. But they did occur—because someone was thoughtless, someone was careless, someone was ignorant, someone took a chance.

Back of all these fires, great and small alike, lies the human element. A cigarette butt tossed from a speeding car—a camp fire not quite extinguished—a clean-up job left undone till tomorrow—a vacant lot left to dry, untended weeds—these are the things that make fire, this year, last year, next year.

There can be no recompense for the fires of the past—unless it is in a general campaign to prevent the fires of the future. It can be done. It's up to us—each of us, as an individual, holds the weapon that will destroy the great destroyer.

Bill's no "big shot"... but he has a bodyguard

Bill Smith, a mechanic, doesn't realize that there is an enemy that stalks him day and night . . . nor that he is protected by an ever-watchful "bodyguard." That enemy is fire . . . the bodyguard is the constant fire-prevention work of 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies. Let's follow Bill through a day, and see the many ways this "bodyguard" works to protect him . . . and you, too.

The cooking appliances used in preparing Bill's breakfast, and the train, trolley, bus or automobile he takes to work, all have been made safer because of scientific tests and safety standards established by these fire insurance companies.

By sponsoring better building laws, by obtaining the co-operation of architects and builders, by systematic inspections, these fire insurance companies help to make and keep safer the factory where Bill spends his working hours.

The same "bodyguard" works to make Bill's children safer at school. (These fire insurance companies created the Self-Inspection Blank for Schools, encouraging fire drills and inspection.)

Even when Bill and his family are asleep, his "bodyguard" is on the job. His town's fire alarm system, fire-fighting equipment, water supplies, etc., are periodically checked by fire-prevention engineers.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY INSURANCE
Standard protection

Let us protect your home, business and other property with dependable, economical capital stock company fire insurance.

Every man, woman and child benefits in some way every day from the fire-prevention activities of The National Board of Fire Underwriters, "America's Unofficial Department of Public Safety," maintained by 200 capital stock fire insurance companies. This work has also saved property owners much money on their insurance costs. As fire losses have been reduced, fire insurance rates have been reduced, too . . . an average of more than 40% in the last 30 years.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. In addition to legal reserves, its policies are backed by cash capital and surplus funds set aside to meet not merely normal claims but also the sweeping losses due to conflagrations and other catastrophes. Its organized public services are national in scope. Its system of operating through Agents everywhere gives prompt personal service to policyholders.

THE WRINGER IS STARTED

It took Congress a long time to awaken to the fact that our debt-breeding fiscal policy was leading the nation rapidly toward bankruptcy. But, judging by the session which has recently closed, the majority of the lawmakers finally awakened.

The action of Congress in sharply reducing appropriations all aolng the line, and in flatly refusing to pass more radical "emergency" legislation, has earned that body the gratitude of the thinking people of this country. It has encouraged business, and given the advocates of common sense, who were long routed by the free spenders, a revival of optimism. And, to some extent, it has cleared away clouds that obscured the future.

All tihs will be true, of course, only if succeeding congresses hew to the same line. And, in addition, they must go farther. It is not enough to reduce one year's deficit, as this Congress did. Deficits must be eliminated, and government outgo brought sharply in line with income. It is not enough to refuse to levy new taxes—after a definite program for orderly retirement of today's national debt has been put into effect, means must be found for cutting existing taxes.

So the economy activities of the last Congress must be regarded as a work just well started. The finish is far in the future. Infinite patience, labor and courage will be needed to return this country to honest fiscal solvency. Wringing the water out of our national financial structure won't be an easy or pleasant job—but it must be done.

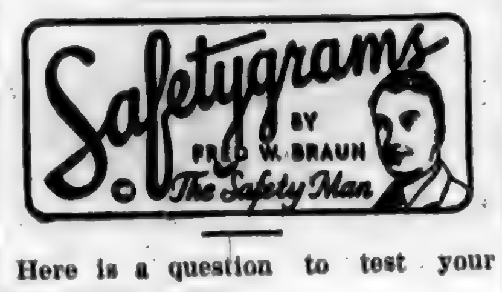
AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

The receipts of livestock were very light in all departments except veals. In the hog department there were no top weights in the offering. Hogs in a weight range of 240 to 275, $5.75 to $5.85. There were order buyers in the yard ready to pay up to $6.10 for the more popular weights. Fat sows, $3.80 to $4.20. Boars, 350 to 650, $1.80 to $2.00. Light boars, $6.25 down. Veals, select, $10.90. Good calves, $9.50 to $10.25. Young butcher heifers $7.50 down. Fat cows mostly $5.00 to $6.00. Thin cows $3.00 to $4.00. One Guernsey bull in fair flesh, $6.00.



Here is a question to test your night-driving sense.

How fast do you drive at night and still see as far as it takes you to stop?

A. 20 miles an hour.
B. 35 miles an hour.
C. 50 miles an hour.

The average headlights show clearly for 100 feet. You cannot drive faster than 35 miles an hour, if you want to stop in that distance. At 40 miles an hour you are overdriving your light or continuously driving blind 15 feet.

"It's Smart to Drive Carefully."

State Fair Courtesy Program Explained By Exposition Manager

H. G. Templeton

Anticipating an Indiana State Fair attendance of more than 400,000 that will eclipse last year's record paid attendance of 385,620, Harry G. Templeton, manager, today outlined a courtesy service to the state fair visitors, a large portion of whom come from outside Marion county and from other states.

For months, according to Mr. Templeton, the Fair Board has been planning an agricultural and entertainment exposition September 1-8, inclusive, that will exceed any in past years. For several weeks the Courtesy Committee of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, has been organizing to extend hospitality on a 100-per cent basis during the full week of the event.

The slogans of the Courtesy Committee are, "All roads lead to the Indiana State Fair," and "Service with a smile. Ask Me."

Mobilization of every filling station attendant, drug store employee and others in Marion County into a great army of information dispensers, each identified by a lapel badge is being effected. Large posters displayed on business establishments will indicate that directions and other information is available there for the asking.

The Courtesy Committee will have thousands of pocket folder maps showing all the main highways leading into Indianapolis and all the main city thoroughfares leading to the State Fair Grounds. A new addition this year is a map of the fairgrounds showing all the parking spaces and buildings.

The folders also contain Indianapolis traffic rules and regulations which, if followed, will enable all strangers to reach the fairgrounds rapidly and without mishaps.

The Courtesy Committee also suggests that you ask for a copy of one of these maps and use it as your guide during your stay in Indianapolis. Likewise the committee desires to serve in any other manner possible. This service is free, and you are asked to seek it from a member of the Courtesy Committee.

Mrs. Barbara Mavis, of Auburn, mother of the family has been in Defiance since Thursday, when her daughter had the first serious attack. No change has been noticed in the condition of Mrs. Bouten.

YOUNG GIRLS MAKE TRIP TO CHICAGO

Several of our girls from this community, Joyce Fusselman, Bernadine Wade, Evelyn Kline, Mary Virginia Campbell, and Stella Hart, had the pleasure of taking part in the Chicago music festival that was held in Chicago at Soldiers Field on August 19.

Mr. Roy Goeglein, accordion teacher, Carl Andrews, assistant teacher, Don Butler and Harold Miller, also of the Wayne Music Co., of Fort Wayne, made this trip possible for these young ladies as they are part of one of his classes of accordion players.

They chartered a bus at Fort Wayne and left Saturday morning at about 7 o'clock and returned on the same bus on Sunday morning at 4 o'clock. They visited several places of interest in the city before playing at 8:45 Saturday night, which was broadcast from WGN Chicago Tribune Station. A few were lucky enough to listen in and hear the program. It was one of the largest music festivals ever held, there being 8,000 musicians taking part. Every state in the union being represented.

GORRELL FAMILY REUNION

The Gorrell family reunion was held Sunday, August 21 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rugman. The attendance was usual there being 111 in all. A basket dinner was served at the noon hour with Nina Kees giving a prayer of thanks. The business meeting was opened by the singing of America. Election of officers was held and old officers were retained by acclamation. Aaron Gorrell, president, and Flossie Widdifield, secretary.

The entertainment consisted of readings by Nina Kees and Nelda Kees, several accordion solos by Joan Gorrell, cornet duets by Dean and Betty Kees, and songs by Billy and Richard Chorpenning. The reunion will be held next year at the park in Cedarville, Indiana.

Friday, September 1, will mark the opening day of the squirrel season for sportsmen in twenty-three counties making up the northern zone, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said Monday. The season opened in the remainder of the state August 10.

Our Weekly Amateur Contribution, Send in Your Lines

"My First Little Ford"

In the Spring of nineteen hundred six
I felt an urge to learn new tricks,
So I took a Wabash railroad train
And went to Detroit, some knowledge to gain;
I visited the plant of Henry Ford
And there consulted his overlord,
And then decided, if wise I'd be
I'd better buy a model "T."

I selected a fine little classy car,
All painted and polished, without a mar.
The top was of leather, all lined with red,
The best I could buy, the salesman said.
The top was staid, by rods to the frame.
There were no doors to keep out the rain.
There was room in the back for cases and bags,
And pockets for tools and waste and rags.

My friend, Gunther Nicholas, was with me then,
And we started, for home, about half past ten.
We got spattered with mud and soaked with rain,
And at Monroe, we put the car on the train.
The car was fine and I drove it with pride,
And I took all my friends, out for a ride.
It wasn't much trouble, to get it to go
But it just wouldn't stop, when I hollered whoa.

When I drove in the barn, it went right on through,
And never stopped to say, "How do you do,"
It went back ker-smash, against a tree
And smashed the tail light as flat as could be.
Then it ran forward, 'gainst another tree
And smashed the head lights and I couldn't see.
It ran off the road, and laid on its side,
In water knee deep, and I nearly died.
We finally got out, and went on our way,
And it did the same trick, on another day.

But of all the tricks, that car ever played,
And the one that was meanest of all
Was when it knocked me down and ran over me,
And rolled me up like a ball.
My backbone crackled like the breaking of sticks,
And I thought, for a time, I was in a bad fix.
When I came to myself I was under the car
Staring right up at the grease and the tar.
My back was aching, my flesh was torn
And I almost wished I had never been born.
I sent for my Doctors, Short and Rozelle,
They came in a hurry, just pell mell.
It took eight stitches to close the tear,
Then Bess brushed the dirt out of my hair.

I never got peeved at that fine little car,
But oh how I hated the grease and the tar.
I found, if I treated that car just right,
I could go anywhere, by day or by night.
As long as I kept the tank full of gas,
And the bearings all greased with oil that would pass,
And the radiator, filled with water that would flow,
And the spark plugs clean and spark all aglow,
That car would run, either fast or slow,
But it never would stop when I hollered whoa.

We traveled together, for six years or so,
Through the mud and the drifted snow,
Through sunshine and rain, night or day,
On errands of mercy, we pursued our way;
It would stand on the street, in sunshine or rain,
All day long and never complain,
And when I turned the crank, it was ready to go,
But it never would stop when I hollered whoa.

It finally got feeble and wabbled a bit,
It wheezed and sneezed, and coughed and spit.
The paint got rusty, the bearings got worn,
The top got rotten from the sun and the storm.
The time came, at last, to say goodby
And I decided to give it one more try.
So I turned the crank, to see if it would go,
And, even yet, it wouldn't stop when I hollered whoa.

Oh, you dear little car, so staunch and true,
You were almost human, in some things you would do.
You had your faults, a plenty I know,
But when I turned the crank, you would always go.
Oh you dear little car, I love you yet,
Your faithful service, I shall never forget.
And with sorrow and grief, no words can tell,
I must now, bid you, a long farewell.

—Dr. A. R. Wyatt, Fort Wayne, Indiana.

HOLD DINNER PARTY IN HONOR OF FORMER SUPERINTENDENT

On Sunday, August 27th Mr. and Mrs. Glen Cole and Mr. Byron Widney entertained at their beautiful country home a company of former teachers and scholars of the St. Joe High School. The party was given in honor of Dr. Robert Dixon, who superintended the school in 1901-1903. Beside Dr. and Mrs. Dixon and Miss Betty, of Saginaw, Michigan, those present were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hadsell, of Peru, Indiana, Mr. and Mrs. Lee O. Tustison, of Defiance, Ohio, Mrs. Maud Bishop, Cleveland, O., Mr. and Mrs. Deo Dermott, Constantine, Michigan, Mrs. Nettie Baker and Mrs. Lela Northrup, Fort Wayne, Indiana, Mrs. Inez Hadsell, Mr. Merritt Sechler, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kees, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Woodcox and Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Leighty, of St. Joe. A bountiful carry-in dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour and the fellowship was of such a measure that the day will long be remembered by those present.

The Dixons had made a month's preparation for the day and upon arrival were eager to meet those, who 36 years ago, had sat under his teaching in the old St. Joe School. Mr. Dixon had spent weeks trying to recall those who were in his school, realizing that he himself had changed some in these years, yet he failed to realize such a great change in his pupils, and because of gray hair and an addition in pounds to their weight, he was really baffled in most cases to call them by name readily. But by calling the roll he finally was able to place practically all of them in a short time.

Leaving their home on Friday and coming to Fort Wayne to visit his sister, and returning there on Sunday evening, they were able to spend a pleasant week end in Indiana.

Uyon entering St. Joe Sunday, they drove about town in an effort to locate the homes in which they lived while located here.

At the present time Dr. Dixon is superintendent of the Michigan State Hospital for the epileptic and is located 25 miles east of Saginaw, near Caro.

The group decided to hold a second reunion next year on the last Sunday in August at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Leighty.

BACK TO SCHOOL

Wide swings the doors of America's school houses as youngsters of this great nation pour into the millions of class rooms, seeking an education in preparation for the future existence among their fellows. There are many of these feet that go reluctantly as human nature hasn't changed as much as the one-room school house into the large consolidated building of indirect lighting, swimming pools and school movie cameras. We are told that modern educational methods make school days more interesting and the subjects of old are still there but covered with sugar and child psychology.

Today's concern is whether or not the school door will swing open, and how long it will remain so. The situation of lack of funds is a problem in many communities. Many schools will open late, others will run part-time until money runs low. This is critical and not a rare issue for "what shall be done about our schools" confronts America everywhere. It is the privilege of each child to receive an education and their future must not be endangered by lack of one. Citizens in St. Joe must realize that it is taxation which maintains schools. It many homes sacrifices are made to meet taxation, homes that scrimp and save that taxes may be paid. Tho it is hard to do without present day luxuries, by cutting here and saving there we are giving the youth of this country the open door to education and their rightful heritage.

ASSETS OF ST. JOE VALLEY BANK ARE SOLD

A report by Harold M. Kelley, special representative of the state department of financial institutions, of the sale of the remaining assets of the St. Joe Valley bank at St. Joe to George Schuster, of Toledo, Ohio, for $11,989.13 has been approved in the DeKalb Circuit Court.

The assets sold included $14,493.55 in uncollected stockholders' liability, which was bid in by Mr. Schuster at $1,160.87. The balance of this liability, together with $17.44 overdrafts, was charged off the bank's books by authority of the court. Notes held by the bank that were sold to Mr. Schuster ranged in amount from $14 to $4,000.

Mr. Kelley also filed a partial account of the liquidation proceedings and the report was set for hearings October 2nd.

MELON SHIPPING ON INCREASE THIS WEEK

The shipping of Honey Rock melons from the St. Joe River Valley is on the increase this week. Already six cars have been sent over the B. & O.

Many of the patches are producing their first melons this week, and the daily receipts are creeping up from one to two cars.

The method of handling this kind of a crop has proven interesting to many and it would be worth your while to visit the sorting and packing tent, east of the elevator.

Congressman Gillie In Canada

Rep. George W. Gillie, vacationing with relatives on a farm in Canada, is making a personal, close-up study of the agricultural situation, according to word received here.

The Fourth District Congressman, who once remarked that he'd as soon work in a field as listen to dull debate in Congress, is proving that he wasn't kidding.

"They've got me decked out in overalls, helping with the threshing," he informed friends here recently. "I'm working on the stacks where it's plenty dusty."

Congressman Gillie, who owns a farm near Fort Wayne and would rather talk farming than politics, will return to Indiana around Labor Day.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

"What kind of business is this . . . that spends money to charge less?"

Fire insurance rates are not arbitrarily determined by insurance companies but by the nation's total fire loss. And this loss . . . hundreds of millions of dollars annually (and many thousands of lives) . . . would be even greater, if no one did anything about it. Fortunately, someone does.

More than 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies, working together through their organization, The National Board of Fire Underwriters, expend much effort and money to prevent fire and accident, to save property and life. Their activities include testing appliances used in homes and factories; formulating safety standards, for buildings, elevators, trains, trolleys, buses, automobiles; eliminating fire and accident hazards from industrial establishments; assisting police to stamp out arson; helping civic officials to make their communities safer against conflagrations; systematic inspection of hospitals, schools, hotels, theatres and other public places.

As this constant effort has reduced fire losses, capital stock fire insurance companies have, year by year, passed the savings along to policyholders in lower insurance rates. The average rate has been reduced 40% in the last thirty years.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY INSURANCE Standard protection

Let us show you how economically you can give your home, business, car and other property the dependable protection of capital stock company insurance.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. In addition to legal reserves, its policies are backed by cash capital and surplus funds set aside to meet not merely normal claims but also the sweeping losses due to conflagrations and other catastrophes. Its organized public services are national in scope. Its system of operating through Agents everywhere gives prompt personal service to policyholders

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1939 NUMBER 36

DRASTIC CODE FOR BICYCLE RIDERS

The numerous bicycle riders in most towns, has furnished another problem for city officials and here is the ruling as handed down by one corporation and may well be considered by St. Joe officials:

No adults may ride on the sidewalk. Children under 12 years of age may if they go less than seven miles per hour and dismount when passing a pedestrian.

Each bicycle must have a horn.

Riders must use the regular arm traffic signals.

Handlebars can't be lower than the seat.

Only one person is allowed on a bicycle at a time.

No rider is allowed to ride without his hands on the handlebars.

Each town will elect a trustee for each ward and a clerk-treasurer. The town chairman will appoint one member of the party to serve on the town election commission. WELFARE TO TAKE CCC APPLICATIONS

The local public welfare office is now receiving applications for the October CCC enrollment, Nora I. Brown, county welfare director, announced today. Boys interested in entering the Civilian Conservation Corps are urged to report at the welfare department as soon as possible, in order that preliminary investigations can be completed before the next enrollment period, October 1 to 20.

Under new regulations, any unemployed youth between the ages of 17 and 23½ years who is unmarried, in good health and in need of employment may enroll for membership. Preference will be given those who have needy dependents. Because of recent interpretations of legal provisions governing the age limits of junior enrollees, it was necessary to set 23½ years as the maximum age limit, since no junior member can legally remain in the Corps after reaching the age of 24.

The county director explained that the welfare department has been taking care of CCC applications only since August 1, when the State Board of Public Welfare approved a plan making the public welfare office responsible for investigating the eligibility of applicants and selecting enrollees.

Before this month, boys were selected by the district visitors of the Governor's Commission on Unemployment Relief. Now there is an enrollment center in every county where boys can go to apply.

INTERNATIONAL LAW

The dictionary makes better definitions of the word "neutrality" than either President Roosevelt or the Congress of the United States, who entered into a quibbling-contest about "neutrality."

What particular difference does it make whether Russia plays ball with Germany? Or, with France and England? Of course it will be regrettable if "The Free City of Danzig," with its less than one-half million population, loses what little freedom it claims to have.

Any administratioo, nr Congress, that drags the United States into an European war should be immediately drafted, and every mother's son of them sent to the front to do all the fighting.

That's "one man's opinion"—and he has lots of company in the thought.

PRIVATE SALE OF GOODS

A Tested Receipe

The secret of frying fish crisp and brown without either egg or bread crumbs, is to dry fish well, sprinkle both sides with plenty of flour and plunge into boiling fat. Be sure fat is plenty and boiling for upon this depends the cripsness and brown appearance.

"OUR LITTLE FRANCIS"

We're sorta lonesome and blue today
Our little boy's gone back home.
We miss his smiles, and loving face
It seems, we feel so all alone.

Our home just seems so quiet and still Things don't seem right at all.
It seems like he's a sleeping
And I must listen for his call.

I miss him at the chicken pen
And on the cellar door,
And I miss the things he played with
That were strewn upon the floor.

We took his little bed away
His high chair, plate, and spoon
Still it seems that I must call him
When the meal is on at noon.

I miss the romps we had at night
Before he went to bed
And I miss his little baby hands
That patted me for bread.

It takes a heap of living in a house,
To call it home
But six short weeks, that seemed as one
It seemed he was our own.

And it tugged my very heart strings
When his arms reached out for mine,
And I said: "Dear, stay with Mother,
Auntie'll come again some time."

He watched us as we drove away
His Daddy held him tight.
Though I'd left him with his parents
To me, it didn't seem quite right.

For I loved the little shaver
And he loved me too, I know
And I know it broke his little heart
When he seen his Auntie go.

I guess this is the way of life
These heart-breaks come and go
When we love these little shavers
And we know they love us so.

He's coming back again this Fall,
To stay with us a while,
I'll try to think ahead to then
And try not to cry—but smile.

"I'll kill that guy!" So spoke a friend of mine recently when a driver behind us persistently blew his horn at an intersection.

How many times have you felt that way?

About the most discourteous driving habit people have is to try to "blow others out of their way." This is dangerous as well as discourteous. Frequently drivers become frantic in traffic when this is done, and I know of many accidents that were a direct result of such action.

Pulic opinion should rise against this type of driver unti l he realizes that courtesy is the keynote of conduct on our highways.

PLEADS GUILTY TO RECKLESS DRIVING—PAYS FINE

Mrs Breva King, 33, of Pioneer, O., was fined $5 and the costs, a total of $14.50 in the court of Justice of the Peace Miles Baxter in Auburn Sunday when she pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving. She paid the amount.

Mrs. King was the driver of an automobile that left a county highway a mile north of St. Joe, just north of the Leighty orchard, August 6, broke off a utility pole and fell onto its side. She had been a patient in a hospital in Auburn since that time and was arrested by Sheriff Artus Coyle and State Policeman Joseph Bilkovic when she was able to leave.

H. A. Gaff, of Fort Wayne, a passenger in the car, paid a fine for public intoxication in Justice Ancil Hill's court in Waterloo soon after the accident. Orvie Sherwood, of Bremen, also was hurt in the accident, but he was not arrested. The officers claim that Mrs. King was driving fast and lost control of the car.

REV. L. E. CLAYTON BECOMES CONCORD PASTOR

At a meeting held Tuesday evening in the Spencerville Methodist Church under the leadership of District Superintendent Dr. F. E. Fribley, representatives from that church, Scipio, Cedar Chapel, and Concord decided that Concord should become a part of the Spencerville Circuit and Cedar Chapel a part of the Butler Center-Rehoboth Circuit. These changes became possible and are a logical outgrowth of the recent union of the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant Churches. Rev. A. L. Wooten will now serve the Cedar Chapel congregation and Rev. L. E. Clayton, who has served the Spencerville charge for a little over three years, now becomes Pastor of the Concord Church, where he will preach his first sermon next Sunday morning.

Rev. Clayton was born in Newberry, Green County, Indiana. He received his grade and high school education at Hoagland and later was graduated from International College at Fort Wayne. He held positions in business offices for several years following his graduation and during this time took an active interest in Sunday School, Epworth League, and church work.

REV. L. E. CLAYTON

In the Summer of 1926 he felt called to enter the Christian ministry. In the Fall of that year he entered the Chicago Training School, where he remained two years. Then followed a liberal arts course at Albion College, Albion, Michigan, and since then he has taken some special work at Garrett Biblical Institute in Evanston, Ill.

While a senior in high school, Rev. Clayton preached at Meese Chapel and Norris Chapel in DeKalb County. In 1930 he supplied the Methodist Episcopal Church at Tippecanoe, after which he was received into the membership of the North Indiana Conference. He later served at Ray and Hamilton before coming to Spencerville in April, 1936.

Rev. Clayton is married and is the father of two sons, John, 9, and Dale, 5. His wife is the former Miss Garnet Jamison, of Hoagland.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Why does man make it a rule to take off his hat when riding in a hotel elevator carrying a woman? Why will man always pause to let a lady go first when entering or leaving a building?

Why, at social functions, will man spend an entire evening bobbing up and down like a jumping jack whenever a lady enters a room?

Why does man maintain a general policy of courtesy to all members of the fair sex?

If you have that answer, then answer this one, too—just let a lady, any lady, get behind the wheel of a motor car and he thinks nothing of crowding her off the road or even sending her off to the hospital if she dares for a moment to question his possession of the right of way. Why?

If courtesy is the rule, let's remember that courtesy is also the rule while driving.

REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 23

Preparations are under way to care for a crowd of 100,000 people at the Hoosier G O P 14-40 Round-up at the State Fairgrounds, Saturday, September 23, according to Ralph B. Grogg, of Indianapolis, chairman of the grounds and facilities committee.

Delegations from every county in the state will converge on Indianapolis at 10 o'clock A. M. and participate in one of the largest political parades ever staged in the Hoosier Capitol.

Major-General Robert H. Tyndall, who has had wide experience in the handling of large numbers of people is making arrangements whereby the visitors will be escorted through the city streets to the down town area where the parade will form. Assembly areas will be designated by General Tyndall at strategic points on the outskirts, concentrating the delegates at points conveniently reached over the main state highways.

County Republican Chairmen throughout the state are serving on the attendance committee and arranging for delegations, bands, drum corps, floats and caravans of automobiles from each of the ninety-two counties in Indiana.

Following the downtown parade, which will be headed by two elephants, the line of march will lead to the Indiana Fairgrounds where there will be ample facilities for the monster crowd.

Republican organization workers and G O P elected officials in Indiana will be guests at a barbecue when 20,000 plates will be served.

Guests will be served under a huge tent which will be set up especially for the occasion. Fifteen tents will be erected in the infield, in front of the mammoth grandstand, to accommodate district meetings and to provide Red Cross, Police and Press Headquarters. Each of the twelve congressional districts will have their own programs from 1:30 until 3:00 P. M., under the direction of the district chairman. Candidates and party workers will use their own district tents for gathering places prior to the main afternoon program at 3 P. M., when speakers of nation-wide prominence will address the crowd before the grandstand. A loud speaker system will be installed to carry the program of addresses to the overflow crowd in the district tents and in the infield.

The September Round-up is being sponsored jointly by the Editors and the State Committee to set off the 1940 campaign when Republicans expect to elect the fourteenth Republican president of the United States.

Distinguished guests from surrounding states are being invited by Mrs. Grace Reynolds, of Cambridge City, National Committeewoman from Indiana, and Will G. Irwin, of Columbus, Republican National Committeeman.

MRS. FLOSSIE MAVIS CHOSEN AS PRESIDENT

All officers were re-elected late Tuesday afternoon for the coming year at the annual convention of the DeKalb Women's Christian Temperance Union. Mrs. Flossie Mavis, of Auburn, will again head the organization, and the assisting officers will be Mrs. Nora McDonald, Corunna, vice president; Mrs. Gladys Mavis, Auburn, recording secretary; Mrs. C. C. Cripe, Auburn, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Virginia Arnold, Corunna, treasurer.

Mrs. Flossie Mavis was also elected delegate from DeKalb County to the state convention, which will be held October 17-20 at Indianapolis. Mrs. McDonald was named as alternate.

Mrs. Flossie Mavis stated that the past year had been an outstanding one for the organization, it being the centennial of Frances E. Willard's birth. She also reported that the DeKalb County unit had contributed nearly $400 toward the $1,000,000 fund to be used for educational purposes.

The story of a man without a country is pathetic, but to most girls, a sadder one would be the country without a man.

It seems to be a simple case of color blindness. Pastures look greener through rose-colored glasses.

You can't be wrong all the time. Even a run-down clock is right twice a day.

With these fancy sport slacks and shirts, a pair of sleeping pajamas can go any place in St. Joe.

We have it figured the prairie dog is about the only thing left in America that knows how to get himself out of a hole.

Shirley Temple may be upset in losing a tooth, but if she remains in the movies utnil she is a big girl, it will be a minor ailment to losing two or three husbands.

You may be poor at arithmetic but you still can tell a half-wit when you see one.

Hitler says he hasn't much longer to live, we have been expecting it to happen long before this.

What do you suppose has happened to those skilled women who could carelessly jab a hatpin through a hat crown without scratching their scalp?

Man wants but little here below, unless it comes from the government.

GRIM REALITY

As long as there will be the western "thrillers" in magazines and on movie creens there will remain in the minds of many the idea that the west is wild and woolly—at least it should be! The days of scalping and war-whooping, flint and arrows, can't be as far away as some may think. If so why did a woman telephone "Indians" to the state police and insist she heard Indians on the war-path and shooting in the vicinity? Even if the disturbance was a movie group making battle scenes it brings us mighty close to the reality of the old west, except for the telephone part.

GOOD SENSE

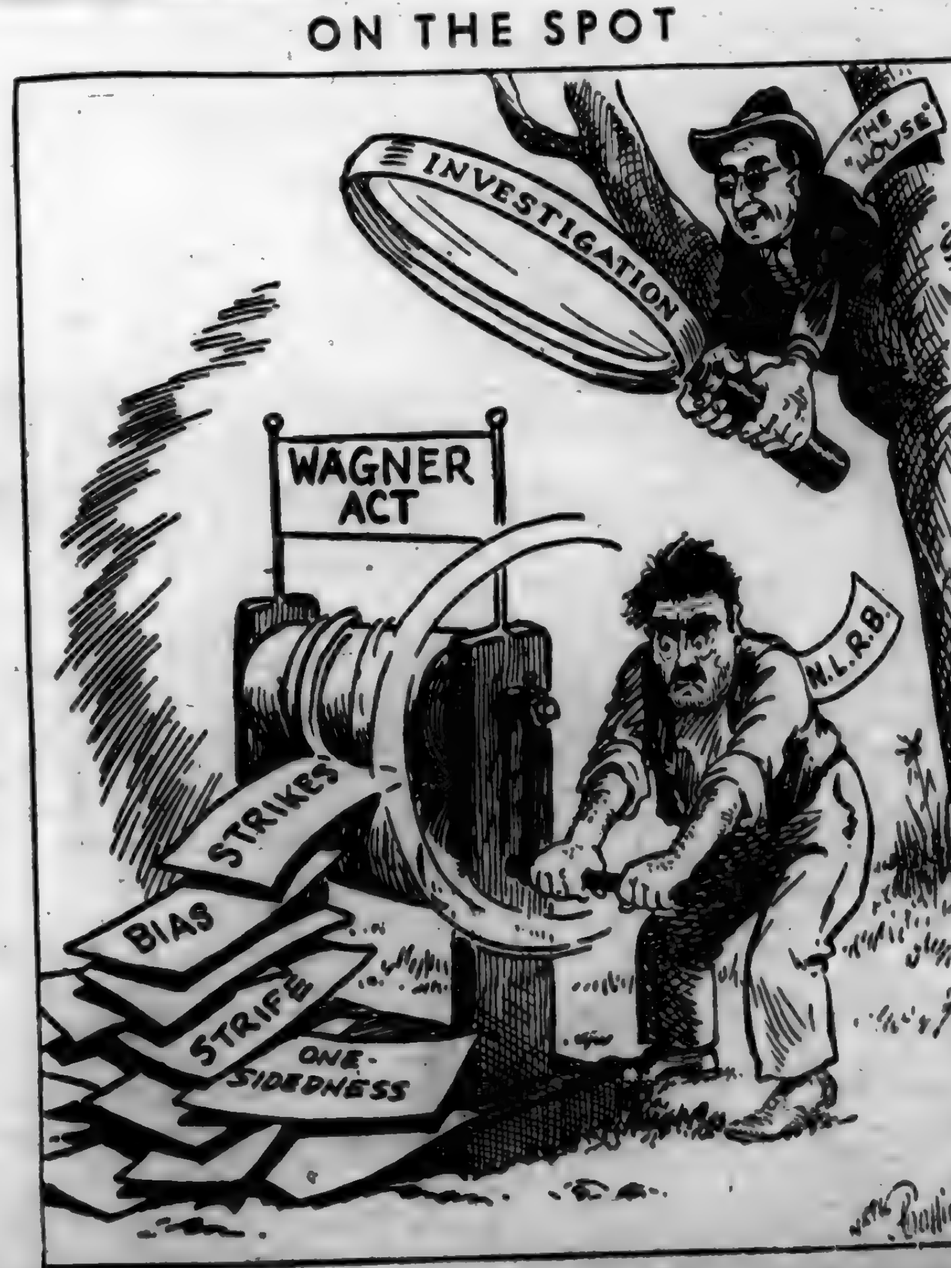
It is often we find something that we wished we had said, and just the same way! We felt our readers would like for us to pass this on to them for it is well worth the remembering. Henry Ford, a man who has a great respect for the land, wrote just recently: "The land! That is where our roots are. There is the basis of our physical life. The farther we get away from the land, the greater our insecurity.

"From the land comes everything that supports life, everything we use for the service of physical life. The land has not collapsed or shrunken in either expanse or productivity. It is there waiting to honor all the labor we are willing to invest in it, and able to tide us across any local dislocation of economic conditions.

"No unemployment insurance can be compared to an alliance between man and a plot of ground."

This is sanity and truth. We could use it as a foundation of life.

ON THE SPOT



COLOR AND BUGS

Did you ever wonder if insects ever cared about the finer things in life, such as color? Other countries have made a study of color and insects and we learn from their research. Canadian Soldiers, or June bugs, will swarm around white bulbs but not colored ones. Moths prefer the white light, too. Tests were made where they found one fly on blue paper where 18 gathered on the clear green. A fly likes rose better than red or yellow. Certain French clinics and hospitals have painted their walls blue to repel flies. In Denmark they have erected slaughter houses and factories with blue interiors. An Englishman painted the walls and ceiling of his kitchen a powder blue to free his house of the pests. This is an idea if housewives care to follow it.

SPENDTHRIFTS

The first session of the 76th Congress that recently adjourned spent $13,349,000,000. Ten billion dollars was the astonishing sum reached in 1936.

Government spending crept up close to six billion in 1932 when Franklin D. Roosevelt denounced President Hoover in the following words:

"I accuse the present Administration of being the greatest spending Administration in peace times in all our history. . . and on my part I ask you very simply to assign me the task of reducing the annual operating expenses of your National Government."

The people did! And see what happened! !!!

THE LABOR BOARD

Many unfavorable court decisions appear to have been responsible for modifying some of the policies of the National Labor Relations Board, that have been denounced as discrimination by the A. F. of L.—unfair by employers.

Henry Ford refuses to obey an order of the Board to re-employ a number of men on the grounds that the decision of the Board denies him, and the Ford company, the right to state their views to employes and the public. Ford's position is that this is an abridgement of free speech.

Well informed authorities believe that the Board will lose in the higher Courts.

TO A HAT

September 15th is National Felt Hat Day. We don't know whether it means for men folks in St. Joe to get out their last year's number and brush it off, or go to town and purchase a new one in honor of the day. Probably from a commercial standpoint we should buy a new one and something tells us that this is purely a commercial observance! Where sentiment enters into the picture is when a fellow separates himself from his old felt hat that has reposed in the family clothes closet for many seasons. You feel it is silly to ask us to celebrate some of these national "days," but if they figure that a lot of us buying felt hats might relieve the business situation, we will throw our favorite felt into the ring along with the rest of the folks.

Truth is Funnier than Fiction

Tulsa, Oklahoma Tom Bailey's case came before Police Judge A. A. Hatch, and Tom didn't know whether or not he had been tipsy.

"Did anything sort of wave up and down like this?" asked the judge, waving his hand. "And did you feel mighty happy and grand, and love every one in the whole world? And did you also feel like you could whip the pants off any mother's son alive?"

"Yeah," said Tom Bailey. "That's it."

"You were drunk," ruled the judge. "Five dollars and costs."

THESE MANY QUESTIONS

With events in Europe changing from day to day, with destroying issues being decided hourly by nations marking time to plunge, the editor knows not whether the ink will be dry on the page as he writes for peace when the wire might bring news of war. He knows not whether the editorial for conciliation and arbitration reaches the press before the headline that states of battle. Can the former be considered and the latter be avoided? Could difficulties between two nations remain there without drawing into the conflict every nation under the sun? How widespread grows the disease as countries are drawn into the net. England and France state their position definitely. The United States appeals for peace and hopes Italy will be the means of averting a catastrophe. Where stands Spain, Japan, Russia, Belgium, Roumania, when sides are drawn for actual battle? For that matter, where stands America? Can we keep our heads when all the world seems mad? Can we keep the nose of Uncle Sam out of the business of other nations? Is it possible to disregard propaganda which comes from all sides where they hope we become enraged and take part by lining up our youth for butchery as a symbol of our fice ourselves again for a cause that seems never to be understandable afseems neveer to be understandable after the smoke and fire dies down? We can recall how we censored the citizen who cried for peace during the opening days of the World War, how we termed him slacker, coward and worse, perhaps when he saw then what we were to see later on when the bands stopped playing and the flags were returned to public buildings and attic trunks.

We are too rational and too sentimental to line up our children for a wholesale slaughter when by staying at home "tending to our knitting," we hope to save these lives from serving for a cause that they neither understand or hope to solve. We no longer hope to make the world safe for democracy, wipe out dictatorships, bring world peace. We do not have to fight to be good neighbors and be termed brotherly, brave and heroic. History tells us of the outcome of these wars if we haven't already found out for ourselves. Who are we to question the years of experience of History? Happy is the sound of the universal cry, "We have learned the lesson."

MISSING PENNIES

The U. S. Mint informs us that 5 billion pennies have been lost since they first started minting them. These misplaced coppers may be in many children's banks. These that have disappeared from circulation may be down a drain or lost in small cracks by hundreds of youngsters. The sales tax on articles in some states have brought forth the lack of these coins, no doubt. Someone suggests that we have new ones minted with a hole in the center as do the Chinese. We could string them on ribbons for necklaces.

We recently read where a plate of pennies appeared on the street of a mid-western city. A man had heated the pennies to a red glow and tossed them to children to hear them cry when they touched the hot coins. A judge didn't hesitate to fine this fellow an amusement tax with a jail sentence to cool off the episode. The entire affair turned out to be less amusing than the doner of the pennies expected, and we don't thank him for putting pennies back into circulation in this way.

A Townsend meeting is called for Thursday evening, Sept. 7 at the Town Hall. The appointment of special committees will be made at this meeting and anyone interested is invited to come. Harry Kees reports 40 members.

"What kind of business is this . . . that spends money to charge less?"

Fire insurance rates are not arbitrarily determined by insurance companies but by the nation's total fire loss. And this loss . . . hundreds of millions of dollars annually (and many thousands of lives) . . . would be even greater, if no one did anything about it. Fortunately, someone does.

More than 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies, working together through their organization, The National Board of Fire Underwriters, expend much effort and money to prevent fire and accident, to save property and life. Their activities include testing appliances used in homes and factories; formulating safety standards, for buildings, elevators, trains, trolleys, buses, automobiles; eliminating fire and accident hazards from industrial establishments; assisting police to stamp out arson; helping civic officials to make their communities safer against conflagrations; systematic inspection of hospitals, schools, hotels, theatres and other public places.

As this constant effort has reduced fire losses, capital stock fire insurance companies have, year by year, passed the savings along to policyholders in lower insurance rates. The average rate has been reduced 40% in the last thirty years.

CAPITAL STOCK Standard protection COMPANY INSURANCE

Let us show you how economically you can give your home, business, car and other property the dependable protection of capital stock company insurance.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. In addition to legal reserves, its policies are backed by cash capital and surplus funds set aside to meet not merely normal claims but also the sweeping losses due to conflagrations and other catastrophes. Its organized public services are national in scope. Its system of operating through Agents everywhere gives prompt personal service to policyholders.

CONFERENCE SONG

Tune—"Jesus Calls Us"

He may call us to the factories;
He may call us to the store;
He may call us to a dairy;
Or a city's din and roar.

He may ask us to be humble;
He may ask us all to give;
He may ask us to obey Him;
And for Him to always live.

He has a plan for each of us;
If we of Him will but ask,
He'll help us choose our place in life
And find a definite task.

"Let Me Stand in the Thick of the Fight"

by Edgar A. Guest

Lord, let me stand in the thick of the fight,
Let me bear what I must without whining;
Grant me the vision to do what is right,
Though a thousand false beacons are shining.

Let me be true as the steel of a blade
Make me bigger than skillful or clever;
Teach me to cling to my best, unafraid,
And harken to false gospels, never.

Let me be brave when the burden is great,
Faithful when wounded by sorrow;
Teach me, when troubled, with patience to wait,
The better and brighter to-morrow.

Spare me from hatred and envy and shame,
Open my eyes to life's beauty;
Let not the glitter of fortune or fame,
Blind me to what is my duty.

Let me be true to myself to the end,
Let me stand to my task without whining,
Let me be right as a man, as a friend,
Though a thousand false beacons are shining.

SPENCERVILLE MEN ARE ARRESTED AT AUBURN

A trio of Spencerville men, who were returning to their home town early Sunday morning via the Eckhart Park and Woodlawn Cemetery Road, were arrested by Night Officers Ora Lyons and Charles Waters about 2 o'clock. James Stuart, 58, was accused of drunken driving, while his companions, Floyd Roe, 35, and Harvey Kimes, 66, were taken on public intoxication charges.

After spending an evening at an Auburn tavern drinking and dancing, the trio started home. Stuart drove east on Ensley Avenue and the Auburn officers followed the car. When the driver turned off Ensley Avenue to go through the park the officers followed. At the bars at the entrance of Woodlawn Cemetery, the Spencerville men stopped, and there the police arrested them.

Stuart was released on $200 bond, which was provided by Warren Smith. He was arraigned in the DeKalb Circuit Court Wednesday morning at 9:30 before Judge William P. Endicott.

Roe and Kimes were taken before Justice of the Peace Frank Langley in Auburn Sunday and entered pleas of guilty to the intoxication charges. They were each fined $1 and costs, which they paid.—Star.

STATE WIDE RALLY OF REPUBLICANS PLANNED

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Sept. 11,—The grocery order of the Republican party for the Hoosier G. O. P. 14-40 Round-up September 23, at the Indiana State Fair Grounds includes 5,000 pounds of meat, a ton of beans, 20,000 buns and 1,000 pounds of coffee, John D. Hughes, chairman of the Barbecue committee, said today.

Mr. Hughes, who is executive secretary of the Young Republicans of Indiana, is supervising arrangements for the feeding of the party workers—precinct committeemen, vice committeemen and other organization workers—who will attend the meeting that will virtually open the 1940 campaign in this state.

It is estimated that 20,000 persons will be fed at this meeting, and the contract for the preparation and serving has been awarded to the management of the Riviera Club of Indianapolis, Mr. Hughes said.

Each person who is served, Mr. Hughes explained, will receive a barbecue sandwich, a plate of beans and coffee. There will be twenty serving stations, all under tents, and it is expected that each station will take care of about 1,000 persons. After receiving their food, the persons who are served may go to their district tents, erected inside the race track in the same area in which the barbecue tents are placed, to eat.

HOMER E. CAPEHART

An inclosure 200 feet long and 80 feet wide will be established inside the one-half mile race track at the State Fair Grounds for serving stations. This will be located immediately opposite the subway under the race track.

Barbecue pits will be dug and cooking of the meat will begin on the night before the luncheon is served. Ovens for the baked beans will be placed adjacent to the barbecue pits.

The serving will take place immediately after the parade through downtown Indianapolis and before the meeting, which will be called to order in the race track grandstand at about 8:00 P. M.

The name, Hoosier G. O. P. 14-40 Round-up was based on a slogan, "Elect the fourteenth Republican president in 1940." The meeting is being sponsored by the Indiana Republican Editorial Association and the Indiana Republican State Central Committee.

Four of the speakers who will address the Round-up are announced by James Montgomery, editor of the New Albany Tribune and chairman of the program committee.

The speakers are Representative J. William Ditter, of Ambler, Pa., chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee; Homer E. Capehart of Washington, Ind., who inaugurated the 1938 campaign of the Republican Cornfield Conference; Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican Program Committee, and Mrs. Bertha Bauer, of Chicago, Republican national committeewoman of Illinois.

J. WILLIAM DITTER

Representative Ditter was elected to Congress in 1933, when the election of a Republican in Pennsylvania was rather unusual, and he attracted national attention by being the first congressman to publicly criticize the plans of President Roosevelt to "pack" the United States Supreme Court by increasing the number of justices. Before entering Congress he was a professor of history and commerce in a Philadelphia high school.

Dr. Frank, a former president of the University of Wisconsin, has served as chairman of the Republican Program committee for several years.

Mr. Capehart took no active part in politics prior to the 1938 campaign. Resentment against the New Deal, however, caused him to finance the Republican Cornfield Conference on his farm near Washington, Indiana. The conference was attended by Republicans from all parts of the country, and the list of speakers included several nationally known congressmen and John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO READ 5000 NEWSPAPERS EACH WEEK?

St. Joe News Among Those Read Regularly by Central Press Clipping Service

"All I know is what I read in the newspapers," Will Rogers used to say, but even his desire to keep up with the news would have flinched at the task started over 25 years ago by the Central Press Clipping Service at Indianapolis, Indiana.

"Of course, it has been necessary to constantly increase our force of readers in performing our business of reading newspapers for other people—but they enjoy searching for clippings on thousands of subjects that comprise the needs of our clients," says H. W. Dragoo, proprietor and manager of the service. "There are many more newspapers in the field now than when we started in business, and most of them are larger editions, but we are doing an even better job of reading today than ever before. Try to visualize reading about two tons of newspapers each month. Yes! It's some job!"

"Many people ask us what on earth our clients find of interest in so many local newspapers. They fail to understand how hundreds of political and fraternal organizations want to know what is going on in every section of the country; how manufacturers and sales organizations are vitally interested in learning of fires, births, new building projects, etc., which are reported only in local newspapers."

The Central Press Clipping Service reads practically all the newspapers published each week in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kentucky, and Tennessee. This reading covers an important and compact group of states. It includes about twenty-five per cent of all the newspapers published in the entire United States. Clippings from those papers on a given subject provide a very accurate cross-section of the country to show what a fourth of the people in the United States have read on that subject because that percentage of the citizens of the entire country live in this seven-state area—and the newspaper reading done by practically everybody is limited to their own home town papers.

AUBURN-ASHLEY ROAD WILL BE IMPROVED

Plans are being completed by Clark F. Scholes, of St. Joe, county highway supervisor, for the impprovement of the Auburn-Ashley road.

The road was blacktopped a few years ago but it was greatly damaged by heavy traffic over it while it was being used as a detour during the construction of U. S. Road 27 north of Auburn. In the last few months it has been rough, but the county has been handicapped by the shortage of gasoline tax funds.

Work will be started by WPA employes under Mr. Scholes' supervision within a week or two to widen the right-of-way. That part of the surface of the road that has collapsed will be sacrificed and then graveled in readiness for Winter travel. The highway will be resurfaced with blacktop material next Spring. The road is five and a half miles long and the cost of the improvement will probably be $10,000.

The state recently took over the DeKalb-Steuben county line road west from Ashley to state road 827, a distance of six and a quarter miles. The stretch just west of Ashley is blacktopped and the balance, five and a half miles, is gravel. Before the state added the road to its system, the two counties acquired land sufficient to widen the right-of-way to eighty feet. The cost to this county was $1,980, the buying being done for the commissioners by Guy Orwig of Fairfield Township.

Negotiations are now under way for the state to take over the Waterloo-Hamilton road. The distance from the intersection of road 27 just north of Waterloo to the Steuben County line at the Wabash railroad at Hamilton is 7.65 miles. The road would become a section of state road 427, using road 27 from the present terminal of No. 427 in Auburn to the intersection north of Waterloo and running over road 1 from Hamilton to its intersection with 427 two miles north of Hamilton. The county must acquire land needed to widen the right-of-way from sixty to eighty feet and this work will be undertaken soon.

SOME IMPORTANT CANNING INFORMATION

How to make a hard pear, such as the Kieffer, tender is a question that confronts many homemakers each Fall, says Miss Eva I. Buel, extension nutritionist of Purdue University. The abundance of the harder pears in home orchards makes canning a practical procedure.

The secret in making a hard fruit a tender canned or cooked product is to cook in water until tender before adding sugar. If the fruit is cooked in a syrup, it will get rubbery, grainy and tough. Many have undoubtedly canned pears by cold pack methods and had this unfortunate experience.

The Kieffer pear, as picked, is not ready for canning. They are crisp, but hard, coarse, and flavorless. They need a ripening period at controlled storage temperature to become softer, smoother and more agreeable in flavor. A dark room at 60 to 65 degrees F. for two to three weeks will materially improve the pear.

Darkening the pared fruit can be minimized by dropping the fruit as peeled into a solution of two tablespoons each of salt and vinegar to a gallon of water and leaving them in this solution until ready to be cooked.

Unless a special session of Congress is called to consider neutrality legislation, Congressman Gillie plans to visit every major city in Northeastern Indiana before returning to Washington in January.

His tentative schedule includes visits to Decatur, Auburn, LaGrange, Albion, Angola, Bluffton, Berne, Monroeville, Garrett, St. Joe, Waterloo, Wolcotville, Kendallville, Ligonier, Rome City, Churubusco, Fremont, Cromwell, South Whitley, and several other cities.

Congressman Gillie will establish temporary office quarters for at least a day in each of the county seats of Adams, Wells, DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange, Noble, and Whitley Counties, for the purpose of transacting government business with constituents. Another purpose of the tour will be to sample sentiment on proposed Congressional legislation.

On Friday and Saturday, September 22 and 23, the Fort Wayne Congressman will go to Indianapolis to take part in the state-wide Hoosier Republican Round-up.

Congressman Gillie's office in the Federal Building in Fort Wayne is open from 8:30 A. M. to 5:00 P. M. daily, and from 8:30 A. M. until noon on Saturdays.

THE FRIENDLY MAPLE TREE

I know a friendly maple tree
Its branches are towering things
It seeks the mighty blue above
The bird that beautifully sings.

It has no choice for friend or foe
It lends its generous shade to all
In its pictured shadow the tired horse feeds;
When evening shadows fall.

When Autumn changes her green dress
For one of yellow and crimson red
Her lovely mantle lies below
Too rich a garb on which to tread.

In Winter she feeds hungry birds
With crumbs that might fall on the floor
I know this tree's good qualities
Because it grows outside my door.

CLUBS TO PLANT FISH BEFORE OCTOBER 20TH

Bass, bluegills and other game fish propagated in conservation club hatcheries in co-operation with the Division of Fish and Game, are to be planted in Indiana lakes and streams by October 20, it was announced by Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation.

Planting of the club fish was started during the past week under the supervision of the game wardens. Reports on the first plantings indicate that the 1939 production will be larger than in 1938 when the clubs produced over seven million fish for restocking lakes and streams.

Two hundred and nineteen clubs are operating 507 ponds, covering 309 acres this year. No other state has a co-operative program for game fish production which even approaches that carried on in Indiana.

CARS SMASH UP AT ROADS 1 AND 8 FILLING STATION

Oliver Tarr, 21, of Montpelier Ohio, driver of one of the cars which were involved in an accident at the McBride filling station, 5 miles north-east of St. Joe, Saturday night in which nine persons were injured, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving in justice court at Butler. He was fined $5 and costs.

According to Sheriff Artus Coyle, who with State Policeman Joseph Bilkovic and Butler police investigated the crash, the accident happened when Tarr backed out of the filling station driveway at the intersection of state roads 1 and 8 about 8:15 Saturday night. He headed east and the cars crashed at the intersection. Tarr said that he was driving 15 miles an hour at the time the accident occurred.

Tarr was driving a 1936 Oldsmobile carrying Michigan license plates. When questioned by police he said that the car was owned by the Castle Chevrolet Company of Hillsdale, Michigan. Glen Derrow, of near Butler, who works for Guy Platter, was the driver of the other car, a 1932 Plymouth sedan. Both machines were damaged approximately $150.

Occupants in the car Oliver Tarr was driving were Warren Tarr and Frank Brownell, also of Montpelier, Rose Thompson, Irene Malone, and Goldie Krontz, all of Butler. The names of the two girls who were riding with Derrow were Luella Beth Platter and Bonnie Platter, daughters of Guy Platter. All suffered bruises and abrasions and were taken to the office of a Butler physician for treatment. None were injured seriously.

THANKSGIVING

The Gallup straw vote poll reports only 38 per cent of those interviewed approve President Roosevelt's plan to change Thanksgiving Day one week earlier. But, says the Gallup pole, "what John Smith, U. S. A., thinks about President Roosevelt's plan to change Thanksgiving Day pretty much depends upon what John Smith thinks of President Roosevelt."

If that is so, then the Gallup findings that 62 per cent of the people disapprove of the plan to change Thanksgiving Day really give the country something to be thankful for this year. Of course next year the real Thanksgiving Day will fall on the first Wednesday, after the first Tuesday, after the first Monday in November.

A joint Conservation Basket Picnic of Steuben-DeKalb Clubs will be held at 4-H Picnic Grounds, Crooked Lake, Angola, Indiana, on Sunday, September 17. Entertainment consists of band concerts, swimming, base ball game, trap and rifle matches (bring own guns.) Come with family, basket dinner at 12 o'clock.

WE'LL TAKE THEIR WORD

At the recent Ohio State Fair an exhibit of a million dollar's worth of machinery gave an insight to the horsepower that is taking the farms of America where toil is made lighter by mechanical contraptions and the work-horse is put back in a stall and called "old timer." They say 75% of farmers use tractors compared with 15% 20 years ago. This is probably true. Down in the south they hold a convention of veterinarians and they tell us that a warring country that can't depend on horses and mules for supply service is "licked before it starts." This may sound like a broad statement to The News readers, but the "vets" tell us horses and mules travel ground that sticks mechanical devices. This is probably true. We don't want to go to war to find out.

IF INDIAN SUMMER

Here is is again, "is there such a season as Indian Summer?" That is what we call it here though in Germany it is termed "Old Wives Summer." Officially we do not nave a season named such and many are the scientific facts against there being Indian Summer. But we do know there is a sign of something that comes with Northern Spy and Grimes Golden apples, vines heavy with plump pumpkins, sumac brilliantly red, football shouts filling the ozone. Time is too short in St. Joe to enjoy these weeks before the harvest moon bids farewell. We know there is an Indian Summer even if you can't find it on the calendar.

NEWS ITEM— GOVERNMENT TAX COLLECTION HAS RISEN 76.6% IN THE LAST SIX YEARS.

THEY KNOW NOT

War news is distressing but to us the increased sadness is the picture of thousands of children taken from parents into safety in the English country, away from city areas where danger of bombing is greater. The view is of these youngsters smiling as they leave, small gas masks hung over each shoulder and a favorite toy tucked under an arm. The mother hearts in St. Joe sigh for the separated ones but the mother heads say it is sensible to remove children from city streets destined for destruction. Children may smile as this seems adventure, but grown-ups the world over ask how long will those children be away from home.

DO YOU WANT GOVERNMENT ECONOMY?

It cannot be too often repeated that we will have economy in government when the people want it—and not until then.

What this means is that economy must begin with the taxpayer. It means that we must turn thumbs down on public spending for spending's sake.

It means that there must be an end to spending the tax money contributed by all the people for purposes which effect only the favored few.

People who talk most bitterly about excessive government spending are often the first to whoop it up in favor of an appropriation for their own town or state. And the resutl is the greatest peace-time debt in the history of this or any other nation, and a tax burden that is crushing industries, to the detriment of employment, productive investment, and economic progress.

The cost of government can be cut. The budget can be balanced, and a program looking to the reduction of the national debt can be put into effect, if thrifty citizens demand it. But we will first have to make up our minds to the fact that it is impossible to get something for nothing from government. That may not be pleasant medicine to take, but it is the only way that national bankruptcy and the eventual collapse of our free country can be prevented. Help won't come from spendthrift politicians.

Safetygrams BY FRED W. BRAUN The Safety Man

Carelessness in driving is increasing on our highways. The figures for the first seven months of 1939 show an increase over those for 1938.

Are our law enforcement agenices becoming discouraged? We find police are very anxious to enforce the law, but in many cases we find a growing tendency on the part of our courts to become lenient and lax in enforcing the laws.

Educational agencies are trying their best to bring before the public the need of safe driving and instructions on how to do it. We must have law enforcement agencies and the courts to assist safety people in this work so that we will have a maximum of protection while we are driving or walking.

The newspapers have done a splendid job in calling this to the minds of their readers, and we urge that more stirring editorials be written in regard to the need for strict law enforcement.

THE SCHOOL'S ON FIRE!

The fire gongs sound . . . and hundreds of children march quickly, quietly, without panic, to safety. For this is just like the many previous calls to fire drill.

School fires average five a day. So, countless parents owe the lives of their children to the faithful practice of fire drills, which grew out of the safety campaign that 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies have been conducting for years in cooperation with school authorities and community officials. These companies devised the widely-used Self-Inspection Form, which calls for fire drills and frequent inspection with the help of local fire departments.

But, while much has been accomplished toward lessening the danger of fire in schools, there is still much to be done. So these fire insurance companies continue their nation-wide campaign for safer schools, by encouraging better building laws, safer construction, safer equipment.

CONFERENCE SONG

Tune—"Jesus Calls Us"

He may call us to the factories;
He may call us to the store;
He may call us to a dairy;
Or a city's din and roar.

He may ask us to be humble;
He may ask us all to give;
He may ask us to obey Him;
And for Him to always live.

He has a plan for each of us;
If we of Him will but ask,
He'll help us choose our place in life
And find a definite task.

"Let Me Stand in the Thick of the Fight"

by Edgar A. Guest

Lord, let me stand in the thick of the fight,
Let me bear what I must without whining;
Grant me the vision to do what is right,
Though a thousand false beacons are shining.

Let me be true as the steel of a blade
Make me bigger than skillful or clever;
Teach me to cling to my best, unafraid,
And harken to false gospels, never.

Let me be brave when the burden is great,
Faithful when wounded by sorrow;
Teach me, when troubled, with patience to wait,
The better and brighter to-morrow.

Spare me from hatred and envy and shame,
Open my eyes to life's beauty;
Let not the glitter of fortune or fame,
Blind me to what is my duty.

Let me be true to myself to the end,
Let me stand to my task without whining,
Let me be right as a man, as a friend,
Though a thousand false beacons are shining.

H. E. HART TELLS OF PLANS FOR BIG FAIR

The spirit of youth will be stressed at the 1939 DeKalb County Fair to be held in Auburn October 3 to 7, H. E. Hart, of Auburn, president of the fair association, told the Garrett Lions Club Tuesday.

A feature of the fair will be Scout and School day on Friday, Oct. 6. It is expected that 2,000 Boy and Girl Scouts of this area will assemble and they will be an important part of the day's parade.

Another unusual feature of the fair will be the Northeastern Indiana Jersey Parish show and the Guernsey Regional show. Fine cattle of these two breeds will be on display throughout the fair, occupying a special tent. This will be in addition to the regular livestock exhibit of the air.

Other attractions will include a culinary arts department, a domestic arts department and an educational exhibit. Many shows, rides and concessions will furnish entertainment. The parades will number eight. The all-organizations parade will be held the first day. Religious day will be observed on Wednesday and Veterans' day on Thursday. Saturday will be Old Settlers' and Homecoming day. Beginning with Wednesday, each day will be dedicated to different towns and sections of the coutny, with St. Joe Valley honored on Wednesday, Ashley and Corunna on Thursday, Waterloo and Butler on Friday and Garrett on Saturday.

"The purpose of the fair is to develop the agricultural, horticultural, mechanical and industrial interests of the county," explained Mr. Hart and he spoke of the value of co-operation between the towns and the rural districts. The fair organization, he said, consists of the president, two vice presidents, secretary, treasurer and twenty-four directors, the latter representing the various towns and townships. No officers receive compensation for their services. The fair is operated according to the rules of the state board of agriculture. The expense of the fair runs from $4,000 to $7,000. The county is contributing $1,000 this year for premiums and the appropriation is $1,250 for next year. The balance of the cost is met by the sale of concessions.

"The fair promotes a better rural citizenship," Mr. Hart said in urging the co-operation of the entire county in making it a success.

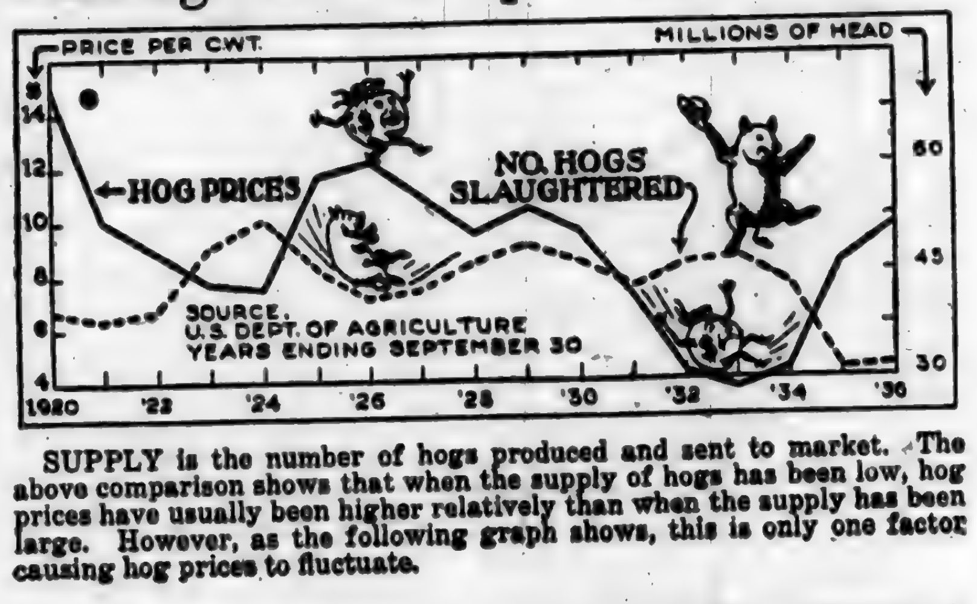
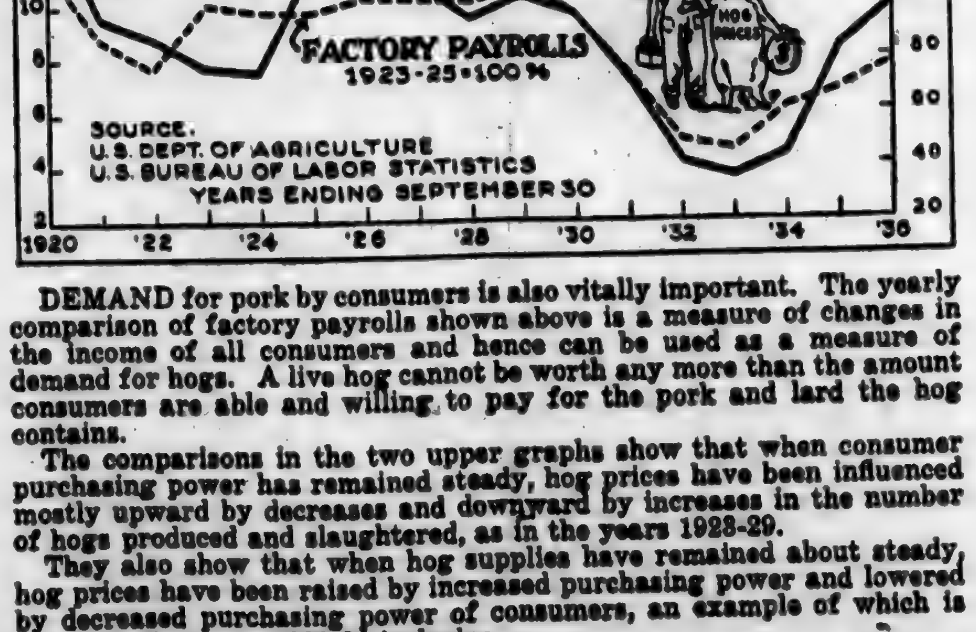
Factors Which Influence Hog Prices Causing Market "Ups" and "Downs"



SUPPLY is the number of hogs produced and sent to market. The above comparison shows that when the supply of hogs has been low, hog prices have usually been higher relatively than when the supply has been large. However, as the following graph shows, this is only one factor causing hog prices to fluctuate.

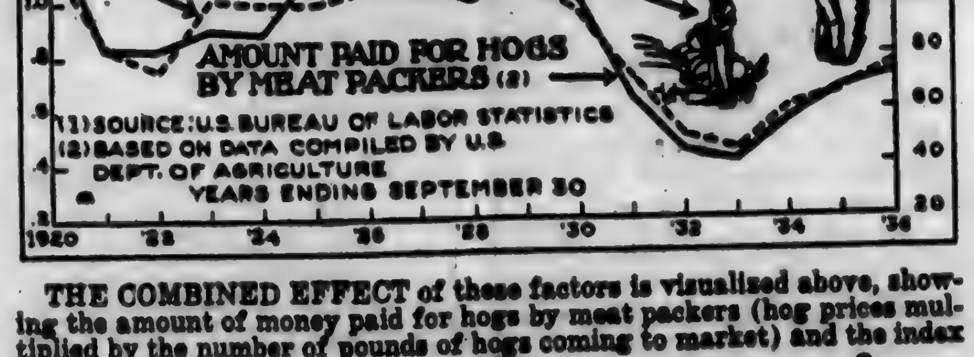


DEMAND for pork by consumers is also vitally important. The yearly comparison of factory payrolls shown above is a measure of changes in the income of all consumers and hence can be used as a measure of demand for hogs. A live hog cannot be worth any more than the amount consumers are able and willing to pay for the pork and lard the hog contains.

The comparisons in the two upper graphs show that when consumer purchasing power has remained steady, hog prices have been influenced mostly upward by decreases and downward by increases in the number of hogs produced and slaughtered, as in the years 1928-29.

They also show that when hog supplies have remained about steady, hog prices have been raised by increased purchasing power and lowered by decreased purchasing power of consumers, an example of which is shown in the years 1932-34 inclusive.

But sometimes the supply of hogs and the purchasing power of consumers fluctuate at the same time. Both of these fluctuations may be in a direction that is either favorable or unfavorable to a higher price level, or one may be in a favorable and the other in an unfavorable direction. In any event, it is the combined effect of these fluctuations that determines the price of hogs.



THE COMBINED EFFECT of these factors is visualized above, showing the amount of money paid for hogs by meat packers (hog prices multiplied by the number of pounds of hogs coming to market) and the index of consumers' income, factory payrolls.

Once the hogs have been produced the supply factor is fixed and the price is dependent upon consumer income.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

DEKALB COUNTY CORN GROWERS TO TOUR VARIETY PLOTS

Farmers interested in hybrid corn varieties are invited to attend a tour of plots where a number of the better known hybrids are planted in four row plots for comparison.

County Agent C. E. Baker announces that the tour will be held Friday, September 15, starting from the County Agent's office in Auburn, promptly at 8:30 A. M. fast time.

A schedule of the stops is given below so that those who cannot attend the entire tour may take an hour off from work and attend at least one of the demonstrations.

A soybean variety demonstration will also be seen at the noon stop at Lester Boger's. A basket lunch will be eaten at this stop. Russell Housel is to furnish refreshments in the form of melons.

George Enfield, Purdue Specialist, will be with the tour and will answer questions in regards varieties and cultural practices.

The following hybrids will be seen on this tour: Indiana hybrids 416,420, 423-B, 425, 603-D, 610 and 613; DeKalb hybrids 240, 404-A, 433, 493, 601 and 622; Wisconsin hybrid 680; Funk Bros. of Bloomington, Illinois, hybrids G-15-G-19, G-27, G-30 and G-55; Pioneer hybrids 315 and 322; Iowa hybrid 939; Ohio hybrid K-23. In addition open pollinated corn will be seen in comparison with the hybrids in some of the demonstrations.

The purpose of these demonstrations is to give farmers the opportunity of seeing the different hybrids growing under as nearly identical conditions as possible. By having the tour at this time farmers will be able to see the relative maturity of the various varieties, also the different characteristics which may be desirable or undesirable as the case may be.

Stop No. 10 at 4:30 P. M. Jay DeWitt, 3 miles North of Garrett. Different soils.

This series of demonstration plots was planned so that farmers may see these different varieties and make up their own minds as to which variety they will want to plant another year. County Agent Baker urges that all farmers see these plots so they may intelligently buy seed corn rather than have it sold to them.

MORTUARY

GRILL

Ebert Grill, son of Jacob and Mary Grill, was born in Allen County, Indiana, May 14, 1892, and passed away at Carson City, Nevada, September 5, 1939 at the age of 47 years, 3 months and 21 days. Surviving him are three brothers, David Grill, of Hillsdale, Michigan, Henry Grill, of Garrett, Indiana, and Harry Grill, of Baring, Missouri; two sisters, Mrs. Clara Krick, of Garrett, and Mrs. Laura Baughman, of Grabill, Indiana.

Mr. Grill lived on a farm south of Spencerville until 17 years ago when he left for the West.

The funeral was held in Carson City Sunday forenoon.

McDANNEL

On December 19, 1865 there was born in the home of Robert and Mary Ann Crooks, on a farm near Waterloo, Indiana, a daughter, who was named Dora. She was one of a family of twelve children. Here she grew to young womanhood and on December 26, 1886 she was united in marriage to Isaac McDannel. They went to housekeeping within the boundaries of the present farm where they resided continuously until her death, September 9, 1939, at the age of 73 years, 8 months and 20 days.

To this union one daughter, Lottie Casebere, who resides near Butler, was born.

Soon after her marriage she was converted and baptized into Christ at St. Joe, Indiana, and remained true to her committment until the end.

The latter years of her life were visited with much mental and physical suffering which she bore courageously as one of the conditions of life.

She was a faithful wife, a wise mother, a good neighbor and friend, and a consistent christian. Truthfully, it can be said: "She was a good woman; she hath done what she could."

She leaves with us the living memories of her life, and bequeathes for our consideration and love, the husband, daughter, three grandchildren, seven great grandchildren, three sisters, Mrs. Mayme Siberts, of Auburn, Mrs. Laura Gingery and Mrs. Hattie Crowl of Waterloo, and four brothers, Victor, Delbert, James and Fred all of Waterloo, and one step-sister, Mrs. John Wolfe, of Auburn.

Funeral services were conducted at the Christian Church in St. Joe, Tuesday, September 12, at 2 P. M. by Elder J. O. Rose, of Angola, and burial was in the Newville Cemetery.

OUR GETHSEMANE

Oft when twilight shades are deepening
And I'm sitting all alone,
Sorrow sometimes steals upon me,
No one's grief is like my own;
And it may be that at midnight,
I am still awake and weep.
No one seems to share my burden
As I try in vain to sleep.

Oh! could not this load be lifted!
"Help me Father," is my prayer;
Must it go beyond endurance?
Why, such painful, anxious care?
Did I say, "alone—no comfort?"
Ah, my helper is at hand!
Now I hear the voice of Jesus,
Gethsemane before me stands.

There alone in yonder garden,
Lo, I see my Master kneel;
Wrestling there until the sweatdrops
Like as blood upon Him steal.
All amazed, I stand and wonder
Why such anguish of His heart;
Is there none to share His burden,
None to even bear a part?

While I hold my breath and listen,
What doth break upon my ear?
"Father, let this cup pass from me,
Yet Thy will be done," I hear;
While my eyes pierce through the darkness
Angels strengthen God's dear Son;
Now I hear Him as He whispers,
"I drink it." And "Thy will be done."

There in deepest midnight watches,
Suffering for my sins and thine,
Since the price for our redemption
Thus was paid, shall I repine?
Just when trials seem the greatest,
Something at my side I feel;
Lo, it is the cross of Jesus,
It can all my sorrows heal.

So I praise Him in the darkness,
Daybreak surely must be near;
Just before the morning breaketh,
Darkest night doth yet appear.
Then awake, my soul, with singing,
Let thy load not weigh thee down.
This incentive for rejoicing,
"With no cross, there is no crown."

The secretary, Mrs. Mable Weikel, read the report of the last meeting and called roll. Mrs. Myrtle Pugsley gave an interesting reading, and conducted a contest which was arranged by Mrs. Katie Storer, winners being Mrs. Borthwick and Mrs. Ulm.

The hostess, with her committee, Mrs. Clara Foits and Mrs. Hulda Reasoner, served a most refreshing luncheon consisting of home made ice cream, tea cakes topped with cherries and ice cold lemonade.

The August meeting which has failed to be reported was at the home of Mrs. Ross Watt. She was assisted by Mrs. Anna Rickett, Mrs. Ida Herrick and Mrs. Aulene Chorpenning. WHEAT SOWING DATES SET TO AVOID HESSIAN FLY

Indiana wheat growers' No. 1 enemy is still the Hessian fly, supposedly introduced into America with straw accompanying the Hessian soldiers during the Revolutionary War, J. J. Davis, head of the Purdue University entomology department, reported this week.

"Not for many years has the northern half of Indiana developed such a heavy fly infestation," says Davis. "We find the infestation varying from seven to 49 per cent with the average infestation for 41 counties north of Indianapolis 21 per cent. Fortunately the southern half of the state shows a relatively mild infestation, but even there the infestation is sufficient to build up to conspicious and destructive numbers if conditions this Fall are favorable. However, the situation in the northern portion of the state shows a very heavy infestation which may develop into a catastrophe if wheat growers fail to maintain the safe free date in sowing wheat this Fall.

"We urge all wheat growers to adhere to the recommended wheat sowing date for their particular region," added Davis. "These dates range from September 22 in the northern end of Indiana to October 8 in the southern tier of counties. Farmers may get full and complete information from any county agricultural agent or from Purdue's Agricultural Experiment Station circular 167."

The dates recommended for sowing wheat to avoid Hessian fly damage are based on hundreds of sowing date plots in all regions of Indiana, by federal and state experiment station entomologists, conducted during the last 15 years. These extensive studies, as well as careful observations by many farmers, have shown this method, that is, sowing after the recommended fly-free date, to be generally effective and practical.

Donald Kinsey was at Fort Wayne last week where he submitted to a minor operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Laney Gee entertained to Sunday dinner Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Jarrett and family, in honor of Master Carlton Curie's sixth birthday anniversary. In the afternoon the eight drove to Monroeville, Indiana and call-called on Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sheehan and family. Found the Sheehans all well and delighted with the surprise visit from St. Joe friends.

Now that the town board has issued an election notice it will be necessary for the Citizens and Independents to hold their caucuses. St. Joe has never had a political election since its incorporation.

The Townsend Club will hold its regular meetings on Thursday evening every two weeks at the Town Hall at 8 o'clock. Starting September 21st.

At the last meeting, chairmen of some of the committees were voted into office, following are the names: Advisory committee, M. C. Blue, Fred B. Leighty, Mrs. Lida Wilson and Mack Hatch.

Publicity, Fred B. Leighty.
Finance, Frank Brandon.

Someone was overheard to remark that the swastika always had reminded him of the double-cross.

Sixty miles an hour is fast enough except when you are in a hurry. Forty is a safer speed then.

The fellow who has half a mind to get married is apt to be waiting for the other half to make up hers.

Praying for what you need instead of what you want, might get you further.

There are few folks who are so stingy they waste kindness only when they know it will pay and are pleasant only when it is a good investment.

We are glad that in St. Joe is isn't necessary to offer up a silent prayer every time we attempt to cross the street.

Common sense from a church bulletin board: "If your knees knock, kneel on them."

QUIETING DOWN

We expected to see a slight war panic among householders as there seemed evident an increase in commodity prices. Goods would be affected at higher than normal prices, but after the first rush to prevent family shortage, the buyer realized this nation is equipped to care for its own with a surplus in commodities. We feel we will be protected from the war profiteer who causes an increase in prices. A legitimate and reasonable profit is not unreasonable and is expected when war prices create a certain rise. But save us from the entensive profiteering of 1914. The sensible purchase of everyday produce, the wise buying of staples, will help business to keep its head, if the purchaser keeps his.

POTATOES IN GERMANY

Since necessity is the mother of invention, German scientists have produced newsprint made from potato plant fiber. An edition of a certain newspaper of 100,000 copies was on this potato paper. Since Germany is the largest producer of potatoes in the world, they can make a quantity of paper! The potato crop is five times that of the U. S. and since it is a major food item, the people of Germany are careful to tend the crop and to rid it of potato bugs which have been invading the farms. Potatoes are fed to live stock for food. Germany has a shortage of many materials and must avail herself of all chances to turn synthetic and substitute materials to her use.

A FASHION NOTE

Leave it to the French to give us a stylish note, even in gas masks! The contour of a mask may be business-like and unatiractive but the French are making cloth covers to carry their masks to harmonize with the garments of the women. The cases vary for each outfit and no doubt very fanciful in design, as are many French creations. The seriousness of gas-masks is rather off-set by making their necessity into an occasion for technique in costuming. A serious angle of war broken up with notes of fuss and feathers, fashions and fancy.

THE SCHOOL'S ON FIRE!

The fire gongs sound . . . and hundreds of children march quickly, quietly, without panic, to safety. For this is just like the many previous calls to fire drill.

School fires average five a day. So, countless parents owe the lives of their children to the faithful practice of fire drills, which grew out of the safety campaign that 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies have been conducting for years in cooperation with school authorities and community officials. These companies devised the widely-used Self-Inspection Form, which calls for fire drills and frequent inspection with the help of local fire departments.

But, while much has been accomplished toward lessening the danger of fire in schools, there is still much to be done. So these fire insurance companies continue their nation-wide campaign for safer schools, by encouraging better building laws, safer construction, safer equipment

KEEP THE ARMS-EMBARGO

Special attention is called to the "The Pen Is Mightier Than The Sword," cartoon in today's issue of St. Joe News by Harry E. Larimer, staff cartoonist of the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.

Citizens favoring continuance of the arms-embargo should clip, sign and mail to U. S. Senators Frederick Van Nuys and Sherman Minton of Indiana.

Even better send a telegram saying: "Keep the arms-embargo!"

Aware of the enormous pressure being exerted upon Congressmen by special interests seeking repeal of the existing ban on arms, ammunition, and implements of war, we strongly urge every reader interested in keeping this ban and the American type of neutrality, to communicate his or her views to both Indiana Senators NOW.

Out of the sad and disappointing experiences of the World War, the American people set up a code of action adopted in saner moments, for future similar emergency. It embodied:

1. To keep from any entangling alliances with the problems of nations across the sea.
2. To remain neutral when other nations become involved in war.
3. To engage in no war unless this country is invaded.
4. Never again to send an American boy across the seas to fight battles of another nation.

America faces a crisis and it is important that YOU send a message NOW to Senator Frederick Van Nuys and another message to Senator Sherman Minton, both in the Senate office Building, Washington, D. C. saying:

"Keep the arms-embargo!"

ST. JOE CITIZEN PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO INDECENCY CASE

Arraigned on a charge of public indecency, Curt Harris, of St. Joe, entered a plea of not guilty in the DeKalb Circuit Court Tuesday morning. He was given his freedom on $200 bond pending a trial. The bond was signed by Marie Goldsmith.

Harris denied using the words claimed in the affidavit, but he refused to tell what he did say. He is a neighbor of the Loucks family.

SCHOOL NOTES

Our baseball team has been showing remarkable improvement during the past week and should give Butler quite a battle on Thursday. The game will be played on the local diamond and will start about 4:00.

In the first game, Waterloo took us 15-1; but in our game with Ashley last week, we tied 10-10 after eight innings. Ashley, by the way, seems to be the best team in the league, having won from Butler, Hamilton and Waterloo in previous games.

Mr. Garman, coach, wishes to thank DuWayne Kinsey for his work with the team. DuWayne had charge during Mr. Garman's illness.

Election of class officers was held last Friday. They are as follows:

Seventh Grade: President, Jean Hurni; Vice-president, Gloria Zonker; Secretary, Billy Hough; Treasurer, Calvin Hull; Student Council member, April Bowser.

Eighth Garde: President, Ned Keller; Vice-president, Allen Haller; secretary-treasurer, Patricia Carpenter; Student Council member, James Kees.

Freshmen: President, Patricia Maxwell; Vice-president, Frances Reidenbach; Secretary, Harold Keller; Treasurer, Harry Strong; Student Council members, Gladys Stewart and Hubert Bleeks.

Sophomores: President, Cordelia Diederick; Vice-preisdent, Dorothy Maurer; Secretary-treasurer, Dorothy Hook; Student Council members, Junior Freeburn and Bernadine Wade.

Juniors: President, Ruth Keesler; Vice-president, Frank Curie; Secretary, Cecil Brown; Treasurer, Helen Fae Curie; Student Council members, Carol Reed and Jack Goodwin.

Seniors: President, Russel Richards; Vice-president, Marcella Wiers; Secretary, Burl Rude; Treasurer Lavon Brunson; Student Council members, Melvin Zimmerman and Verna Mae Thomas.

An entry made in the DeKalb Circuit Court shows the settlement of Ila Shilling's claim against her former husband, Cecil Shilling, in the sum of $200. Mrs. Shilling, who lives in Auburn, secured a divorce from her husband, who resides at St. Joe, in 1930, together with the custody of two children, Roy and Lynn. The defendant was to pay $4 a week support. However, he became delinquent in his payments. The $200 payment is in full settlement of all past and future payments.

Many members of the Conservation Club and their families attended the picnic of the Steuben and DeKalb County Conservation Clubs Sunday at the 4-H picnic grounds at Crooked Lake. The event, given by the Steuben County organizations, was very well attended. The Fremont band played during the day, and other entertainment consisted of swimming, trap and rifle matches, and a base ball game. All of the clubs of DeKalb County were represented. These are the Spencerville, St. Joe, Garrett, Auburn, Fish Creek, Moore's, Waterloo and Butler clubs.

The number of pedestrians killed by automobiles makes the problem one that each community should carefully consider. When we realize that over 40 per cent of the people killed by automobiles are pedestrians, we should readily appreciate that it is a real problem.

The first thing the pedestrian should do is abandon the old idea that as a pedestrian he can use the streets in any way he pleases. This he can not do.

Traffic lights were made to control traffic, including pedestrian traffic, and the pedestrian should obey traffic signals.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1939 NUMBER 39

STATE WIDE ENTHUSIASM CREATED BY 14-40 ROUND-UP AT INDIANAPOLIS, SATURDAY

More than 30,000 Indiana Republicans, at the Hoosier G. O. P. 14-40 Roundup, September 23, told President Roosevelt in no uncertain terms that they did not want the United States drawn into a foreign war.

They expressed their opinion vociferously with cheers and handclapping as speaker after speaker made it plain that the United States must maintain peace with the rest of the world.

The Roundup—the largest political rally that Indiana has ever seen in an "off" year—followed a parade through Indianapolis streets in which more than 15,000 persons participated. The parade began at 10 o'clock in the morning and continued for three hours and a half, with fifteen elephants, a score of bands and drum corps, dozens of floats and thousands of automobiles.

On the night before the Setpeimber 23 meeting, the Indiana Republican Association endorsed Homer E. Capehart, host of the Republican Cornfield Conference in 1938, as a Hoosier presidential candidate, but he rejected the honor in his address at the Roundup meeting in the Indiana State Fair grounds.

Every one of the keynoters at the Roundup turned "thumbs down" on war."

Frank E. Gannett, of Rochester, N. Y., publisher of nineteen daily newspapers and one of the leaders of the fight against President Roosevelt's plan to pack the United States Supreme Court said: "If we get into this war a dictatorship here in America will be virtually assured."

He explained that the United States entry into a world war would make the granting to the President of so many exceptional powers necessar, that America would be many years in recovering liberties that are enjoyed today.

"Our entering this war would give no assurance that it will end in a permanently safer world," said Dr. Glenn Frank, of Chicago, chairman of the Republican National Program Committee, and former president of the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Bertha Baur, of Chicago, Republican National Committeewoman from Illinois, also voiced her disapproval of any policy that might lead the United States into war.

Mr. Capehart also voiced his disapproval of a war policy.

"We must stay out of this war," he said.

Edwin V. O'Neel, Hagerstown editor, president of the Indiana Republican Editorial Association, opened the meeting as temporary chairman and then turned the gavel over to Arch N. Bobbitt, the chairman of the Indiana Republican State Central Committee.

Other speakers were former Senators Arthur R. Robinson and James E. Watson; Raymond E. Willis, of Angola, 1938 candidate of the Republican party for United States Senator; William H. Jackson of Indianapolis, negro orator; Mrs. Grace B. Reynolds, of Cambridge City, Republican National Committeewoman from Indiana; Mrs. Eleanor Barker Snedgrass of Nashville, Republican State Vice-Chairman; Harry G. Hogan of Fort Wayne.

Others who were introduced were Congressman Forest A. Harness of Kokomo and Noble Johnson of Terre Haute; William L. Hutcheson of Indianapolis, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; William G. Irwin of Columbus, Republican National Committeeman from Indiana; State candidates in the 1938 election; and Republican bureau heads during the 1938 campaign.

Mr. Bobbitt, before introducing other speakers, made a plea for harmony in the party.

"Let's not jeopardize our chances for success," he said, "by beginning to fight for power within the party. Let's forget fatcionalism. Let's all begin doing something for the Republican party. Let's win our victory."

MOST DETOURS WILL BE ENDED BY OCTOBER 15

Most of the detours now in effect on the state highway system will be eliminated by October 15 through the completion of construction and improvement projects, T. A. Dicus, chairman of the State Highway Commission, announced. Weather conditions during the next two weeks will be an importat factor in the progress made in finishing work now in progress.

Approximately five detours will be required during the Winter on projects where construction work can not be completed until 1940. Among these are: paving on Road 20, east of Michigan City; paving on Road 35, southeast of Michigan City; grading and paving on Road 67 between Martinsville and Brooklyn; surfacing Road 120 west of Orland, and surfacing Road 124, east from Road 27.

It is possible that some of these sections of highway can be opened to traffic during the Winter months, depending upon progress made before bad weather halts operations.

TWO TOWN CAUCUSES TO BE HELD THIS WEEK

Grover Curie, Town Democratic chairman has posted notices calling for a Democrat Caucus to be held at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, September 28 at 7:30 o'clock.

The Caucus will be held for the purpose of electing the Democratic nominees for all town offices which are to be elected at the ensuing town election, such election to take place Tuesday, November 7th.

Nominations will be received for one Trustee from Ward 1, one from Ward 2, and one from Ward 3, and one Clerk-Treasurer.

All Democratic voters who are eligible to vote at the Town election shall be entitled to vote and candidates shall be nominated at the caucus by a majority of voters present providing not less than 20 voters attend the caucus and vote therein.

The Republican Caucus has likewise been scheduled for Friday night, September 29, at the Town Hall at 8 o'clock, DST., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the three councilmanic wards and one Clerk-Treasurer.

Willard L. Hurni posted the Caucus call notices as temporary chairman.

This will be the first Democrat and Republican Caucus ever held to nominate officials for St. Joe, since its incorporation, as the city fathers had a notion that a more harmonious administration would result if kept free from politics, so the names of the two tickets have been Citizens and Independents until this year.

A recent change in election laws makes it mandatory that the names Democrat and Republican be used as this is determined by the vote cast for Secretary of State.

Remember the meetings and be present to assist your party in nominating a full ticket.

The new 1940 automobiles have been provided with a complete new unit of lighting.

The new equipment is known as "The Sealed Beam Headlight System." No dirt, dust or moisture can penetrate the sealed unit to corrode the reflecting surfaces and lens. More light, properly distributed is thrown on the road surfaces.

The new lamps throw two light beams. The lower beam is for city driving and the top beam for country driving.

These lights will provide more protection and greater safety after dark on the nation's streets and highways.

DAVID HOGG ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY FOR GOVERNOR

In an address to the Allen County Republican Club Wednesday, Attorney David Hogg, four times elected to Congress, said:

"The Nation has the right to expect every official to keep his promises."

"Broken promises are doing our State more evil than any other thing," he said. "To obtain property by deceit is criminal. To obtain an office on false promises should be a felony."

In this opening speech, seeking the Republican nomination for Governor, Mr. Hogg set forth his platform as follows:

Education

"Establish industrial and agricultural high schools in each county, or jointly, without expensive buildings and managed locally. Provide practical training in the crafts, agriculture, mechanics, chemistry, physics, and marketing for every Indiana boy who desires to qualify himself for a productive and paying position. Thus also additional facilities will be at hand for expansion of training of high school girls in useful arts and sciences.

"School text books, written as far as practical by Hoosiers, should be printed in Indiana at reasonable cost, paid for by the State and furnished gratis to students. The present unreasonable prices and the perpetual changing of books at the behest of and for the benefit of school book corporations must cease. Profiteering has no place in our educational system or elsewhere.

"Remove the State Board of Education from the control of party politics. The training of 700,000 school children to live and to work together demands that the welfare of the school system and not party politics be given first place. Indiana schools deserve to be the best.

How To Lower Taxes

"Eliminate every form of political graft, both direct and indirect. Abolish all 2 per cent clubs supported by those receiving your tax money for salaries. These clubs originated in boss ridden cities and are not only political tribute and job protection but are sink holes for public taxes.

"Limit the total salary of every political officer in Indiana. Why should any official receive not only a good salary but countless additional charges and fees? Above a fair fixed salary, all fees and charges belong to public funds and must go there.

"Thousands of unnecessary supervisors and needless employees must be taken off the public pay rolls and every unnecessary office abolished. For instance auto license plates can be distributed by an elected county official thereby eliminating the tremendous additional expense of the license bureau. An open and intensive study of the equalization of the tax burden must be made. Indiana must stop the annual waste of millions of dollars.

HON. DAVID HOGG

"The spotlight of fullest publicity must be thrown on every financial transaction involving public funds. Frequent releases in understandable form showing all the uses of public funds should be given the people of Indiana through the newspapers.

Encourage Building and Industry

"Exempt from taxation all improvements on real estate and on all new personal property for a period of one year after such improvements are made and such property acquired.

"Give a reasonable exemption to

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

If anyone had a bomb-throwing or disturbance program worked out for the opening of Congress, the enterprise was nipped in the early bud. It would be putting it mildly to say that the police had the situation well in hand. Admission was by pass, presented at well guarded barriers that were pig-tight, horse-high and bull-strong. The statement of the Declaration of Independence that all men are created equal, was given full force and effect. Those accustomed to occupy the seats of the mighty, got in if they could prove themselves. Otherwise they had to be satisfied with the Autumnal beauty of the capitol grounds.

When other means of entrance failed, resort was had to the root of all evil. Ten dollar bids for passes failed to produce results, and served only to demonstrate that the demand was greater than the supply. Inside, a chair was a luxury. Foreign ministers, diplomats, and persons of domestic prominence, did not consider it beneath their dignity to accept a seat on the gallery stairs. On the floor there was the usual exchange of greetings, the heartiness of which was in no wise impaired by the fact that the legislators had parted company but a few short weeks before.

Despite the preliminary din, and the applause that greeted the arrival of the President, and now and then necessitated a pause in the delivery of his address, the assembly was soberly attentive and serious. It seemed to be realized that grave business lay ahead. The general trend of Mr. Roosevelt's message of course was a foregone conclusion: the replacing of the arms embargo by the cash and carry plan. Beyond that, and as to details, the President would forbid war credits to belligerent nations; war areas should be determined, which commercial American ships may not enter; wide authority to prevent American citizens from entering danger zones and traveling in vessels of belligerent nations is desirable; those who buy munitions of war here must acquire full title to the property before it leaves the dock. The speech occupied a full half-hour.

Democratic members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who are backing the policy of the Administration, assembled to determine how the White House can be put into operation most advantageously. Opponents of the cash and carry were quite as active. More than a score of them met in the office of Senator Johnson to sketch out a campaign. The public naturally was not taken into confidence, but it is known that the oppositionists are determined to fight to the last ditch.

Assassinations for political reasons have been rare in the United States. Few men in public life have been hated more sincerely by some of their enemies than Mr. Bryan on the Democratic side, and Mr. Hoover on the Republican; but Mr. Bryan and many others who were made the target of a bitter dislike went to the tomb of the orderly processes of nature. The killing of Lincoln was hardly more than the result of a brain storm. The slayers of Garfield and McKinley, though tried and found sound of mind, probably would have been lodged in asylums for the criminal insane, had the victims been of less consequence and service to the land at large. Premier Calinescu of Rumania came to his end through a typical assassination, alleged by the murderers to be the work of an elaborately constructed organization, and probably so in fact. Speaking of organization, the dead Premier's government made a good showing: nine participants in the crime were executed according to law and before midnight, for a killing that took place after lunch hour of the same day.

There is plenty of good advice to the effect that we should not get involved in a European war. One might go further and remark that we ought not to become involved in too elaborate a consideration of it. Up to the time that the first German soldier stepped over into Poland, the papers gave us to understand that solving our own problems was a taxing job. Surely, the war over there cannot have wiped out all our difficulties at home.

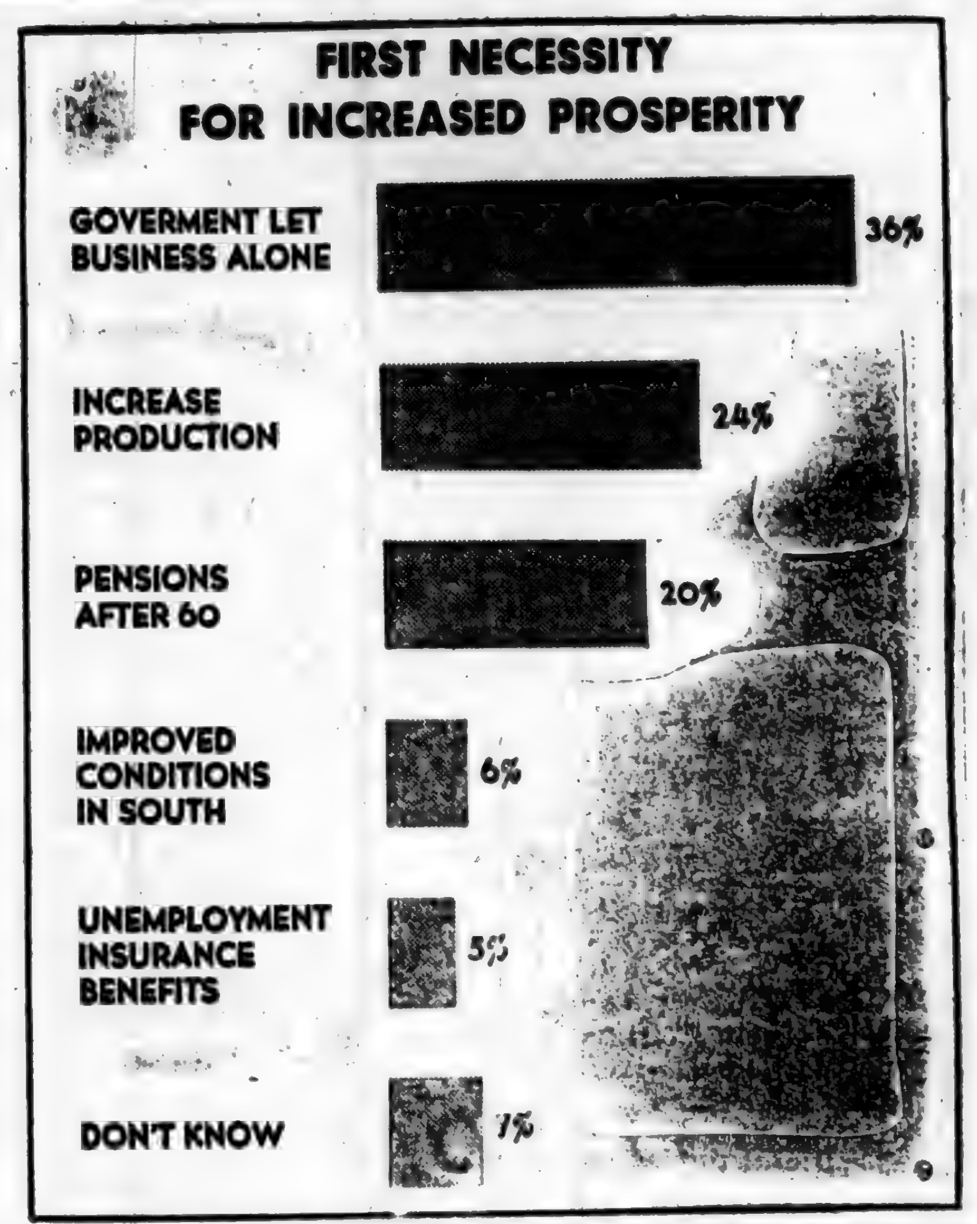
McBRIDE CO. STORE TO MOVE TO BREMEN

W. C. McBride, owner of the McBride Co. store in Auburn, announced Tuesday that he will move the business to Bremen, Indiana, the second week in October. He has rented a vacant store room in that city and the structure will be remodeled to fit the needs of a department store.

Mr. McBride will dispose of his residence on West Seventh Street, and he and his family will move to the new location about November 1. The McBride family has resided in Auburn for 21 years, Mr. McBride and John Bishop, now deceased, locating there in 1918 from Bluffton. They purchased the department store operated by Adolf Schloss and began business under the name of Bishop & McBride.

In May, 1925, Mr. McBride purchased the interest of Mr. Bishop in the store and the name was changed to The McBride Co.



In a current survey conducted by the National Association of Manufacturers on a nation-wide basis, more than one-third of those responding said they thought the most important thing that would contribute to prosperity was to have government let business alone. Nearly one-fourth considered increased industrial production of first importance in order to improve national prosperity.

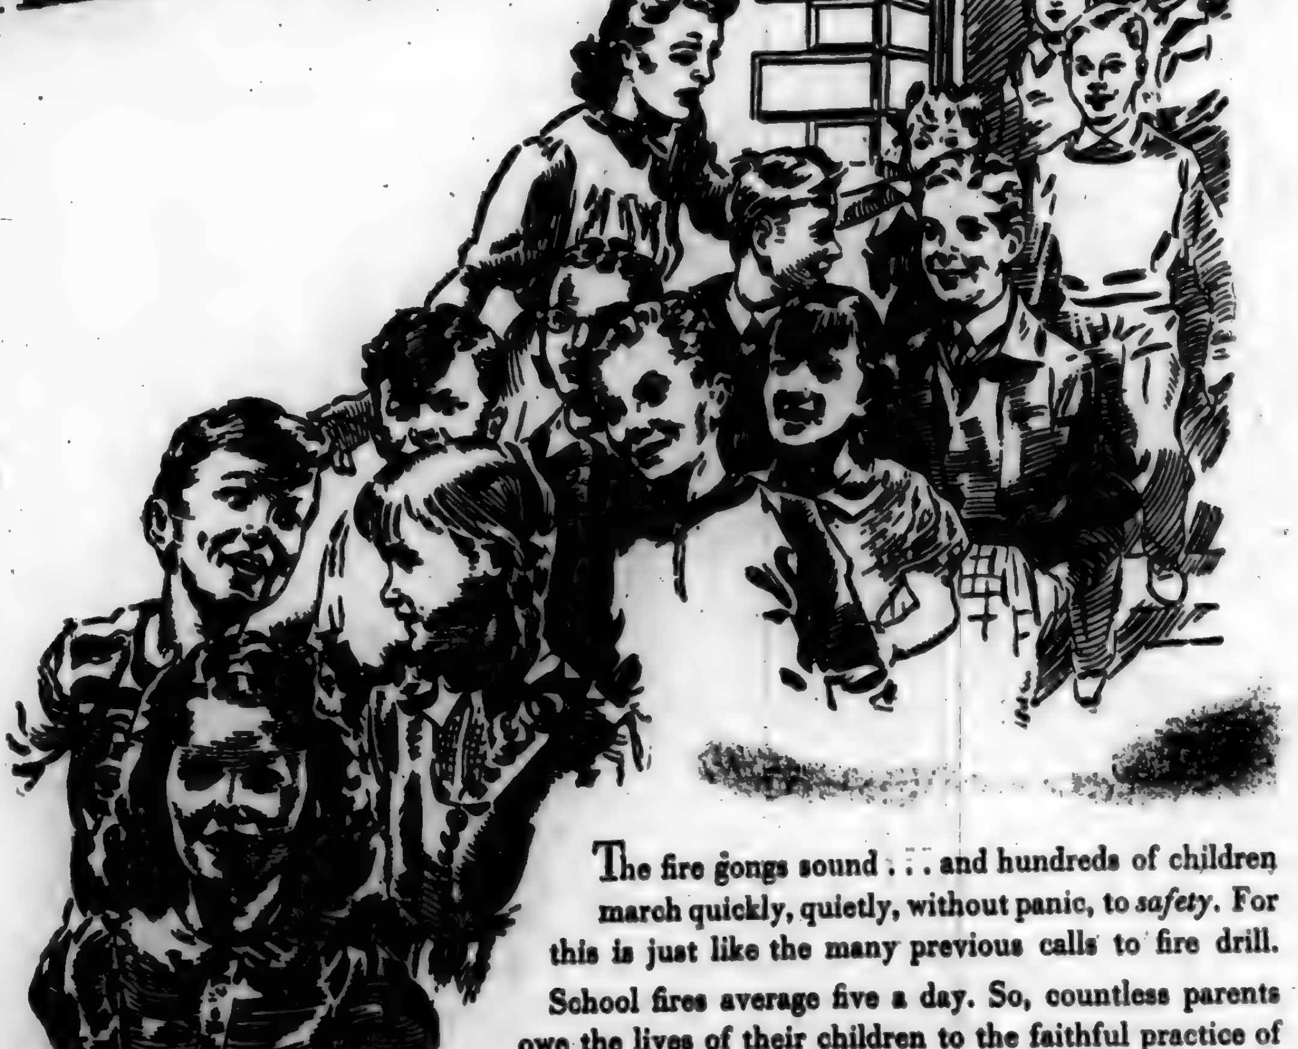
THE SCHOOL'S ON FIRE!



The fire gongs sound . . . and hundreds of children march quickly, quietly, without panic, to safety. For this is just like the many previous calls to fire drill.

School fires average five a day. So, countless parents owe the lives of their children to the faithful practice of fire drills, which grew out of the safety campaign that 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies have been conducting for years in cooperation with school authorities and community officials. These companies devised the widely-used Self-Inspection Form, which calls for fire drills and frequent inspection with the help of local fire departments.

But, while much has been accomplished toward lessening the danger of fire in schools, there is still much to be done. So these fire insurance companies continue their nation-wide campaign for safer schools, by encouraging better building laws, safer construction, safer equipment.

HOGG ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY

home owners and to those buying on contract regardless of mortgage exemptions.

"There must be no increase in property taxes, but a reduction whenever possible.

"Assist in the completion of rural electrification.

"Develop the resources of the State. Patronize Indiana contractors, Indiana builders and Indiana producers at all possible times.

"Let us create a Hoosier spirit of cooperation, self-reliance and moral rearmament that men and women can again be on their own resources.

Labor and Agriculture

"Fair representations in all State Departments is the natural right of Labor and Agriculture.

"Collective bargaining by labor and fair selling means by agriculture that proper wages, prices and conditions prevail without regimentation are fundamental. These problems require the vigilant attention and aid of the State at all times. No person single-handed, can cope with modern organizations. Progressive legislation to meet new conditions for labor and agriculture will always be required. We need a gospel of plenty, not of scarcity, that the highest standard of living may be attained by all.

"The Workman's Compensation laws must be enlarged and made more humane.

Use of Special Funds

"Furnish adequate relief to those who without fault of their own are in need administered by home rule units.

"There should be a decent, sufficient and humanely administered old age and mothers' pension law.

"Adjust equitably and simplify fees and taxes as they affect motorists. Justly apportion the funds derived therefrom. Fix a more satisfactory auto license date and rid the highways of drunken drivers.

Home Rule

"Repeal unnecessary laws and provide for the expedient handling of litigation. Give judges every proper power to speedily administer justice.

"Deprive all Boards, Bureaus, and Commissions of law-making powers. These powers belong to elected representatives who are responsible to the people. I am unalterably opposed to any one man rule.

"Corruption, Dictatorship, Communism and its allies can be crushed only by returning to the local communities the freedom of Home Rule. "Government must be administered as a business and not for partisan political effect.

Law Enforcement

"Young law violators and first offenders in crime should be separated from hardened criminals during all the time they are in the custody of the State. It cost six times as much to keep a boy in the reformatory as in high school. The reformatory is a school for crime conducted at the taxpayers' expense.

"The absolute protection of all life and of all property in Indiana is the first duty of our Government. For the seasoned and vicious criminal, punishment must be swift, certain and adequate. Common decency and every other consideration requires the effective and honest enforcement of all laws.

"Concerning the use and sale of alcoholic beverages, the public interest can best be served by education and by elimination of the bootlegger, the law violator and the racketeer.

The Republican Party

"The Republican Party was born to liberate a race, establish prosperity, and save a Nation. Its history is the story of the constructive growth of America.

"Moral fiber, goodwill and dynamic public opinion are especially needed today. The merit of all Government should be measured by its benefits to the security and happiness of the home. The high character and constructive ability of Hoosiers and the unlimited resources of our historic State will under just laws banish the lack of employment and establish a high standard of living and attainment. The glory of Indiana is in her boys and girls, and her men and women.

"As the campaign progresses, I shall more fully present my view on State issues."

The Beauty Spot of Northern Indiana--Pokagon

CANDIDATES NOMINATED FOR FALL ELECTION

Republican enthusiasm was stirred last Friday night, when 30 people met in caucus to help select a ticket for the town officers, which are to be voted on Tuesday, November 7.

The ticket selected is as follows:

Clayton Chorpenning, trustee Ward 1, an ex-service man and civil engineer.

D. Wilbur Yeiser, trustee Ward 2, operator St. Joe Filling Station.

Willard L. Hurni, trustee Ward 3, and preseent incumbent of the office for the past four years, a former St. Joe merchant, and now operates a cream route for George Freese & Sons Co., of Nappanee.

A. M. Baker, Clerk-treasurer, a former postmaster of St. Joe.

Willard Hurni, town Republican chairman, presided at the meeting and Fred B. Leighty served as secretary.

Stimulating the party for the campaign ahead, were remarks by a number of the people. The caucus was conceded to be the biggest and best since the incorporation of the town, and judging from the crowd and enthusiasm displayed it augers victory.

All issues in the town election are purely local in character.

Democratic Caucus

The Democratic caucus held forth in the town hall on Thursday evening, with an attendance of 13 voters, with Grover Curie acting as the town chairman and Max Dressel, secretary of the caucus.

After calling the meeting to order and stating its purpose, the nominations were forthcoming in proper order, and without opposition in any instance.

The final result of the caucus was read as:

Grover Curie, trustee for Ward 1, a former manager of the I. H. C. implement store at Kendallville.

Floyd Ridgway, trustee Ward 2, B. & O. section foreman.

Harry G. Hursh, trustee Ward 3, a former merchant of St. Joe and Spencerville.

Max Dressel, Clerk-treasurer, at present a laborer on the B. & O.

No party speeches or comments in any manner were made at the caucus, but the chairman gave the invitation to anyone who cared to respond.

The adoption of the Eagle for the Republicans as their official emblem, and the Rooster as the insignia of the Democrats, will be used on the ballots this year for the first time as the tickets have been known as the Citizens and Independents in the past years.

WINDOWS BROKEN

Some person or persons are taking the liberty to break the stained glass windows in the St. Joe Methodist Church. It will cost $53 to repair those already broken. Unless this is stopped, the Sheriff must be called.

ON THE BANKS OF THE WABASH, FAR AWAY

Round my Indiana home-stead wave the corn-field,
In the distance loom the wood-lands clear and cool.
Often times my thoughts revert to scenes of child-hood,
Where I first received my lessons, nature's school.
But one thing there is missing in the picture,
Without her face it seems so incomplete.
I long to see my mother in the doorway,
As she stood there years ago, her boy to greet!

Refrain

Oh, the moon-light's fair to-night along the Wabash,
From the fields there comes the breath of new mown hay.
Thro' the sycamores the candle lights are gleaming,
On the banks of the Wabash, far away.

Many years have passed since I strolled by the river,
Arm in arm with sweet-heart Mary by my side.
It was there I tried to tell her that I loved her,
It was there I begged of her to be my bride.
Long years have passed since I strolled thro' the church-yard
She's sleeping there, my angel Mary, dear.
I loved her but she thought I didn't mean it,
Still I'd give my future were she only here.

SCHOOL NOTES

Art Students Visit Exhibit at Art Museum

Students in the high school art classes attended two special exhibits being shown at the Fort Wayne Art School and Museum last Friday afternoon.

One exhibit consisted of some splendid examples of various types of work turned out by the students in the art classes sponsored by the W. P. A. This group included samples of fine work in block printing, both on paper and silk and linen textiles. The guide emphasized the fact that the work was done by people who were craftsmen rather than artists. Some modern uses of the common applique were also on display.

The second exhibit was of work produced by the children's art classes in art schools of various cities, Cincinnati Art School, John Herron Art School at Indianapolis and the Art School in Hawaii being among those represented. This group was of particular interest to the class, since it showed work of students ranging in age from 4 years up to 15 years.

A visit to an art class at work proved to be a helpful feature to the trip.

This exhibit is to be in Fort Wayne until after October 20, and would be most interesting for any person to visit.

The student body expresses its appreciation for the victrola and records, and for the books which were donated to the school by Mr. and Mrs. George Weaver when they moved recently to their new home.

Teachers and students have been busy during the past few days preparing their contributions to the DeKalb County Fair. Each grade and class is represented in some way. One exhibit of particular interest is one prepared by the students in the Latin classes, depicting scenes of old Rome.

The band which is laboring under the handicap of not having been together since last Spring has been working overtime in an effort to make a creditable showing. They will be in the parade on Thursday evening.

Troup 164 of the Boy Scouts will participate in the pageant and retreat ceremony on Friday, which has been designated as Scout Day at the fair.

MEET IN TWO WEEKS

The Townsend Club will not meet this week as scheduled, but will meet in two weeks, the regular time at the Town Hall. Frank Brandon will be the speaker. Remember the change.

Chairman.

A. G. HERCULES WAS FATALLY INJURED AT WAYNE

A. G. Hercules, husband of Marguerite Milliman-Hercules, of Pemberton Drive, Fort Wayne, was fatally injured late Saturday night at a farewell party near their home with other friends, when John W. Watson and Mr. Hercules engaged in a controversy.

Police said that the incident which directly seemed to have provoked Mr. Hercules' injury grew out of his protest to Miss Copley, another guest, about her singing. Mr. Hercules is said to have pushed the girl and was pushed, struck or shoved by Watson in return. None of the witnesses had a clear memory of what happened. After a phyisician was called he was rushed to the Methodist Hosiptal where he died at 5:30 Sunday morning.

A private funeral was held Tuesday afternoon conducted by Rev. Charles M. Houser, pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, of which Mr. Hercules was a member. He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Marguerite Hercules; a son, Billy; his father, William Hercules, Pennville, and a sister, Alta Hartley, of Muncie.

PIONEER DAYS IN CONCORD TOWNSHIP

Every once in a while we of this modern generation get the idea that life is futile—but what would we have thought if we had lived in our county 100 years ago? Take, for instance, the small item of corn meal, which if we want today we can purchase at the nearest grocery store with a minimum of time and trouble.

From the "DeKalb County Sketches," written by one of our pioneers, we take this story:

"'The first grist mill, or 'corn cracker' rather, in the county was built by William Mathews on Bear Creek, on the east part of the school section of Concord Township, at the same spot where there is now a saw mill, near Mr. Alpheus Draggoo's.

"It was a small affair truly. The stones were about two feet in diameter and were turned by means of a 'flutter wheel' on an upright post, set in a tub, through one side of which the water passed. The whole machinery was set in a small rickety frame, without weatherboarding.

"The corn dropped, a grain at a time, from the little hopper; so that perhaps in twenty-four hours, at a good stage of water, eight bushels might be 'cracked.' I remember carrying a half a bushel of corn from my brother's at Newville to this mill, a distance of four miles, on my shoulder, waiting a half a day to get it ground, and then carrying the meal back the same way.

"Among the humorous tales told of this mill, the following will do to repeat. Mr brother, James, in the Fall of 1837, took a bushel of corn to be ground, and after it had been grinding for some time, went below to see how much meal was in the little store box used for a meal chest, and, to his dismay, found a large yellow dog eating the meal as fast as it came from the spout!"

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Koch visited Mr. and Mrs. John Geisinger in the E. J. Brown home at Garrett, both have recovered from their recent illness.

A number of DeKalb County federated club women will attend the twelfth district of the Indiana federation Friday, October 13, at the Fort Wayne Woman's Club. The Allen County federation will be hostess. Mrs. O. B. Rose, of Garrett, president, will preside. During the morning session there will be an election of officers. Mrs. J. R. Leighty, of St. Joe, is a member of the nominating committee. Mrs. Oscar Algern, of Whitign, who is the first vice president of the state federation, will make the principal address, discussing "Hold Fast to Our Ideals of Freedom."

CONSERVATION CLUB BROODERS PRODUCE 42,195 PHEASANTS

Liberation of 42,195 pheasants, reared in conservation club brooders, has been completed within the last few days Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

A total of 232 brooders were operated by conservation clubs under the supervision of the Division of Fish and Game as a part of the cooperative program for improving hunting and fishing throughout Indiana. All pheasants were liberated in areas selected as possessing satisfactory food and cover conditions.

Production of pheasants in the club brooders this year was even more successful than in 1938 when the furnishing of chicks to the clubs was inaugurated. This year 92.9 per cent of the pheasant chicks received by the clubs were reared and liberated, an increase in the percentage of chicks reared. Clubs operating brooders are paid by the Division of Fish and Game for each bird reared and liberated.

A check for $24.75 was received this week by the local club for pheasants raised and liberated.

With the liberation of more than 43,000 pheasants from the club brooders and the stocking of pheasants by the state game farms, Hoosier sportsmen can anticipate some fine pheasant hunting during the six-day season which will begin on Friday, November 10th.

Conservation clubs which operated brooders for quail rearing are now completing their liberations and it is anticipated that a record number of quail will have been produced in the club brooders.

THERE'S A WORLD OF INTEREST IN THE WANT ADS

Sometime after the world began, and its peoples acquired civilized needs, and newspapers came into being.... came the WANT ADS.

Once upon a time someone needed an apprentice in his shop. There was work enough to be done without hailing every passerby to tell of his need. He got the idea that perhaps he could get the word around to everybody in the community at the same time and in the same way as the news of the day got around. The idea was as simple as day. The question was: would the editor of the newspaper be so kind as to put the few words into a bit of space for which the shopkeeper was willing to pay? "After all," he argued, "it would be welcome information to some parent of a likely lad and it would be an opportunity, too, for the boy to learn a trade." That was the first want ad.

Just where this first happened or in what year is not a certainty, nor does it matter. It was centuries back and it was logical thinking. So logical that readers of newspapers in other places got the same idea. It was not hard to see that it was an easy way and a sure one for readers to reach one another.. ..and it cost little.

To this day the same reasons make it logical to use and read the want ads. More reasons have been added by the increase of the number of things people need every day and the necessity of quick action in so many years.

So the Want Ad serves on.

Turn to that section of this paper.

No picture show Saturday night of this week, but remember we will be expecting you next week.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Closely linked with the fate of the proposed neutrality measures that are being considered by Congress is the question as to whether or not the President will accept a third term nomination. It is alleged that his attitude respecting war affairs can be used to further a third term boom. A continued tenure of office may be something that is desired only by many of Mr. Roosevelt's friends, and a step that is entirely foreign to his wishes and plans. Yet a plain statement from the White House that a third term is out of the question, undoubtedly would unite many who otherwise must remain at variance, and would grease the ways for the launching of important pieces of law-making, especially those relating to neutrality.

One view is that it is the obvious duty of the President to let the country know where he stands, so that the business of the land may go forward as such, and not as ancillary to politics. Upon the other hand, it is said with a force that makes some impression on the hearer, that most of those who are clamoring for a definite stand on the third term issue wish to employ it for their own advantage, rather than to promote the general welfare. Moreover, there is a degree of sympathy and support for anyone who speaks his mind when he is ready, and not before.

The cash and carry project came out victor in the first preliminary set-to, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee giving its approval by a vote of sixteen to seven, four participants in the decision reserving the liberty to act as they chose on the floor. A forenoon gave time to come to a ballott in committee. A good many forenoons probably will pass before the bill receives the final pen-scratch, or before the White House is convinced that there will be no opportunity to use the pen in that way.

The Committee assent was along broad lines, a smaller group being selected to work out specific details and to attend to phraseology. The failure of the opposition to put up a committee fight of course is no sign of weakness or a desire to conciliate. It is, rather, the calm that comes before the storm which will break after Senator Pittman has made his opening speech along the line of exposition and support. The road that the advocates of the "come and get it" bill must travel, will have a pronounced up-grade. A change in settled and duly enacted law is called for, and in addition there must be a laying aside of sea rules which are regarded as having an ancient sanctity. Wise heads will have to decide whether it is best to line up with the humanitarians, who would block a street-corner fight, or with the more practically minded, who would lead the authors of the discord to the gymnasium, hand them the gloves and tell them to get it out of their systems, to the end that others may have peace and quiet.

Germany suggests that England can tell the whereabouts of the Bremen. England denies the soft impeachment. Those who know are saying nothing, due either to patriotic motives or to the desire to avoid sudden death. In any event, the mystery abides, maybe to be solved only twenty years hence, when a slip of paper is discovered in state archives somewhere. If the vessel is still afloat, that circumstance tends toward the conclusion that the radio, airplanes and spy-glasses can be rendered of no effect in the exercise of the virtue which consists in keeping one's mouth shut.

IT SOUNDS GOOD

Through market reports and trade letters this desk understands that the month of September was one of our best business months of the year. Crop money is being put into circulation and retail merchants encourage us with reports showing a decided increase in sales.

Our spirits rise as they tell us the Fall and Winter season will not let us down. Fall goods are moving in all sections where merchants push them through advertising. And it all sounds good to this editor who furnishes the ink that advertises the merchandise that increases the sales that moves the business that Jack builds.

AS IS USUAL

There is not a desperate situation arising but that the American Red Cross does not immediately open its arm for the emergency. Preparations are being made to open stations to make bandages for the war's wounded. The Red Cross plays its part by receiving and contributing supplies for medical and hospital service to both sides of the firing line. The arts of mercy show no favorites and both sides are cared for by this organization.

HOLD ON!

There have been complaints against this nation locking up our gold and stoirng that of other governments. Perhaps the act may be justified for without gold countries have a difficult time waging a satisfactory war. During Italy's invasion of Abyssinia, that country called in all gold wedding rings and exchanged them for iron ones. Germany is now taking measures to collect gold. Japan is demanding that all gold articles in the possession of anyone in Japan, be reported. This includes everything from pen-points to gold teeth. Since certain nations lack money and need credit and gold seems to be the goal, perhaps it is well we tighten our grasp.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION

Prevent crimes! Prevent auto accidents! Prevent cancer! Prevent war! Now to prevent fires! Through schools and civic organizations, press and radio, the nation spends one week being made aware of the national fire debt and the ways and means of cutting costs in life and belongings due to demon Fire. Insurance companies warn and suggest methods and procedure to take in homes and buildings to cope with the evil. To clean all rubbish from basements and attics before it appeases the appetite of licking flames. Harbor no arsenal of loose matches for young fingers to strike. Clean furnace pipes before starting Winter fires and watch for combustion and gasoline fumes. Tend to electric connections and appliances. The fact that you have never had a fire of a serious nature doesn't mean you can ignore the subject and rest safely on your asbestos mattress! Begin at the top of the house and go to the bottom, look inside and outside, check and double check. Pass the word along to family and neighbor and cooperate to make St. Joe safe from carelessness and negligence.

AMERICA'S CRIME

We are the world's most careless people. In 1934, for instance, the fire loss in America was $2.08 for every man, woman and child . . . as against 89 cents in Sweden, 82 cents in Great Britain, 78 cents in Italy, 61 cents in France, 11 cents in Germany, 8 cents in Austria.

Every year America recklessly sacrifices thousands of lives and hundreds of millions of dollars . . . to fire.

The best way to fight fire is to stop it before it starts That is why 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies, working together through their own public-service organization, The National Board of Fire Underwriters, wage a nation-wide campaign to prevent fire by eliminating or minimizing the fire hazard wherever it may exist. Their efforts range from scientific testing of household appliances to the promotion of better building laws, safer public buildings, and more efficient municipal fire-fighting equipment.

There is hardly a minute of your daily life in which you do not enjoy, in one way or another, greater safety against fire because of the work of these fire insurance companies. And, they have been able to lower the average fire insurance rate steadily year after year.

Let us protect your home, furnishings, business, automobile and other possessions, with dependable, economical capital stock company fire insurance.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

The feeding of silage may begin the same day the silo is filled. Some dairymen believe that ensilage is not safe to feed for some time after the perserving effects resulting from bacterial action have begun, but this is not so.

Milk production already has declined rapidly in many herds because of poor pastures. With the abundant supplies of roughages available in many communities it is doubtful if a few pounds of silage per cow each day will net as large a return at any time during the next seven or eight months as it will now.

An insufficient supply is advanced as the cause for not feeding silage now in some cases. For each 100 pounds of cow's body weight, two and one half to three pounds of ensilage per animal per day may be considered liberal feeding when there is plenty of good quality legume hay available. If the capacity of the silo does not permit the use of the recommended amounts for the usual feeding period, refilling during the early Winter may take place if plenty of water is added to the field cured roughage.

The pasture season which is now nearing a close has been an unusually good one. Dairy herds were for the most part in excellent condition until a few weeks ago. It will be unfortunate if body weight is lost. Milk production declines because of lack of feed at a time when many hay mows are bulging and stacks of hay decorate the barn lots. One manger full of feed while the herd is milking is worth several times that amount after body reserves have become depleted and cans sit unused in the racks in the milk house. A few tons of silage just now may make the difference.

THE NEW ELECTRIC RATES CARRY SAVINGS TO EVERY HOME

ARE you fully aware of the savings you make with our low rates? And did you know that the reduction on July 1 lowered the first block of 30 kilowatt-hours, used by domestic customers, to 5½ cents a kilowatt-hour? Or that after you have used 60 kilowatt-hours, the cost for each kilowatt-hour is then only 2½ cents for the next 240 kilowatt-hours? Both this and the low 1½-cent a kilowatt-hour rate for consumption above 300 kilowatt-hours have been in effect for some time, but many people do not realize it.

CLUB SONG

Tune: America

Our native Club to thee
Club called the L. L. C.,
Of thee we sing.
We number twenty-five
Long may our Club survive,
We'll ever work to strive
And to thee cling.

Our Club it is of thee
Dear Club of unity,
Thy name we love.
We've set our standard high
We'll reach it by and by,
Long may we live to try
And thy virtues prove.

Our Club is wonderful,
We study to dispel
Our ignorance.
Our colors, red and green,
We love our Collect theme,
We're bound in love serene
The whole year through.

The Safety Man

Do you know how many feet you travel per second at sixty miles per hour? Many accidents are caused when the motorist fails to realize the terrific speed he is traveling at sixty miles an hour and how long it will take him to stop the car.

An English judge discovered a very simple formula by which this could be figured. The answer is correct within 2 per cent. The formula is to take the speed shown on the speedometer and add one-half the speed to arrive at the number of feet traveled per second.

Try it.

I am sure this will convince you that your brakes must be in good physical condition, and above all, that your judgment as to when speed should be used must be of the very best. Can you stop your car within the range of vision at night traveling sixty miles an hour and covering approximately ninety feet per second?

LOG of the UNITED STATES MARINES

HEROISM IN HAITI

At a lonely outpost in Haiti, Corporal Haley of the U. S. Marines, with the assistance of a small group of native soldiers, was attempting to maintain law and order. His troops were loyal, but many of them had not yet received their first baptism of fire.

It was in 1916, when desperadoes, called Cacos, were a constant menace to peace and orderly government in Haiti, and the Marines, aided by members of the newly-organized Haitian Gendarmerie, were making an effort to prevent robbery and pillage.

Like a bolt out of a clear sky the Cacos descended on the gendarme barracks in the dead of night, killing or wounding some of Haley's men and sending the remainder into headlong flight. Then they attacked the hut where the marine and gendarme cook had been sleeping.

Awakened by the uproar Haley jumped from his bunk and barely had time to pull on his shoes before he was engaged in a fight for his life. While the cook kept the rear door covered, Haley fired two shots through the front door, and then pried open an adjoining window with his bayonet and fired point blank at one of his attackers. From a side window he shot down two more outlaws.

Meanwhile the cook had ably defended the rear of the hut, and soon the bandits who had not fallen were beating a hasty retreat. Hours later Haley learned that the bandits had attacked another outpost that night and had been driven off.

During a few breathless moments Haley had experienced enough thrills to last him a lifetime. His bravery was recognized in an official report which stated: "Corporal Aubrey M. Haley has been promoted to sergeant for gallantry in action at Cerca la Source, Haiti, March 28, 1916, when with the assistance of one gendarme, he beat off an attack of bandits, killing three himself."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

AUTUMN PICTURES

Silhouette snaps of work on the farm are but one type of autumn picture opportunity. Note the effectiveness of the low viewpoint.

A FEW years back, most folks stopped taking pictures at the close of the summer season. Now, however, autumn has become one of the best and busiest snapshot seasons. Better cameras, faster films, and the natural charm of fall outdoors, make end-of-summer one long picture-whirl for the camera fan.

Stay-at-homes don't know what they're missing. There's a picture-subject at every fence-corner in this changing season. Fields are busy—crops are being harvested and late fruit gathered in. The weather is grand for hiking, with a camera slung over your shoulder and a pocket full of film. There is warm color and atmosphere in the landscape, richness in the cloud-massed skies, and grandeur in the autumn sunsets—a challenge to any camera.

Record autumn fully in pictures, and you will have a snapshot collection worthy of an album all its own. Tell the complete story—the season's change, the harvest, all the details that make autumn different. Emphasize the transition, showing the decline of the year, the promise of cold weather to come. Falling leaves, wind-tossed corn silhouetted against a cloudy sky, plump pumpkins lying among the shocks of corn already cut, and horses or machinery pictures against the background of a riotous sunset . . . all are good.

There are literally thousands of opportunities, everywhere. On an autumn hike or outing, let one of the girls in your party stand on a ridge, with the wind blowing her scarf and hair—and picture her with the blue sky as background. There's appeal in such snapshots. When there are magnificent clouds, slip a color filter over the camera lens to make them stand out against the blue sky. Use the filter, too, in picturing distant scenes, and far-away objects will show up more clearly in your pictures.

Depend on autumn for interesting pictures—keep your camera busy—and you won't be disappointed. Nowadays the picture year has four seasons, and this is one of the best.

DEKALB COUNTY FAIR IS A BIG SUCCESS

H. M. Casebeer, treasurer of the DeKalb County Fair Association, stated Monday that the 1939 fair, held last week in Auburn, was a financial success. Just how much profit the association made could not be ascertained today as all bills had not been turned in.

Work on cleaning the city streets was started early Sunday morning after the shows, rides, and concessions had closed. Work was much heavier this year, as there were one-third more concessions than a year ago. Electric light department employes were working Monday on taking down the power equipment, a job which will take several days to finish.

Police reported that the crowds this year were very much more orderly than in previous years.

Floyd Gooding, manager of the shows and rides, informed fair officials that his week in Auburn was the best he had had this year, and nearly all of the concessionnaires reported that they had made money.

Buster Hetrick, fair association secretary, said that many of the concession operators had said that they wished to return to Auburn for the 1940 fair and that some had already asked for space.

Mr. Hetrick states that premiums totalling $1,269.75 are being distributed to the exhibitors. Exhibits this year were of remarkably fine quality, with most departments showing new records in both number and quality.

Credit for the great success of the 1939 fair is due to H. E. Hart, president of the fair association, and many co-workers who devoted a great deal of time and effort in staging the exhibit and entertainment.

FIRMEN ANSWER CALL TO HUGHES HOME

Sunday morning at 10:30 a fire was discovered in the roof of the Oral Hughes home by Fred Hull, a neighbor who lives across the road, and about a mile south of Concord.

The fire department was called from St. Joe, and neighbors responded very quickly and began to move out the household goods and the fire was soon put out when the company arrived.

The attic was greatly damaged and ceiling also upstairs, besides rugs, curtains and window shades. The chemicals being responsible for a part of the damage possibly. The loss was covered by insurance.

The iron roof held the flames down. It is thought a spark had been carried by the wind to the edge of the roof, where the fire was first seen by Mr. Hull.

Word of Appreciation

We are extremely grateful to our neighbors and the fire department for their response to the fire call Sunday morning, and for saving our home.

Oral Hughes and Family.

FETTERS PLACED FIRST IN COUNTY HUSKING

The Vocational Agriculture boys of Spencerville and St. Joe High Schools conducted a corn husking contest last Thursday.

The Spencerville boys were invited to the Claude Laub farm where Russel Kruse won first place by husking from standing stalks 452 pounds of clean corn. Other huskers were Richard Kelley, Paul Moore, LeRoy Laub, and Wm. Wappes.

Mrs. Laub brought the contest to a close by serving apples and friedcakes.

The St. Joe boys had to wait until a rain passed over before they could go out to Mrs. Lu Reign Strong's to prove their skill. There the boys husked only half time with Wayne Fetters winning first place with 289 pounds of clean corn husked from standing stalks. Other huskers were Walter Fetters, James Hamilton, Don Cook, Hubert Bleeks, Chalmer Beaty, and Richard Davis.

Mrs. Strong treated the boys to tasty popcorn after the contest.

Saturday morning the winners from each school, Russel Kruse and Wayne Fetters, husked in the county contest at Waterloo. Fetters placed first in the county and Kruse placed third, being beaten from second place by twelve pounds of corn. Five schools took place in the county contest.

Fetters will represent this area at the district contest at Yoder, Indiana.

ZONKER MOTOR SALES OPENS BUSINESS ROOMS

The Curie hardware room has been changed into an automobile sales room, under the name of Zonker Motor Sales, and will be managed by W. W. Zonker, and here will be found the popular Willys Automobile on display.

A display ad in The News will give you the information in detail.

The new models are already in the showing and when the room is completely arranged, will make one of the most complete sales room in this section.

We bespeak for Mr. Zonker's success in this undertaking in St. Joe, and this is practically assured because of his wide acquaintance over DeKalb county.

ANNUAL PROMOTION AND HARVEST HOME SERVICE

At the Lutheran Sunday School Sunday morning, the annual promotion of scholars took place in the Children's Department, and as a result a new class is being formed to care for the children and a new grade of lesson material is being introduced.

A harvest home offering of canned goods and supplies was received at the church hour for the Old People's Home at Mulberry, Indiana and for the Osterlan Home at Springfield, Ohio. The children made a direct financial offering amounting to $7.23 for the orphanage, which was contributed by the children during the past year as they had pennies to give in preparation for this annual offering.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

With the coming of the new sealed beam headlight it is going to be more important than ever that motorists who have this type of light dim their lights when approaching oncoming cars. More and better light will be given by this improved headlight, which makes it more convenient for the driver of the car; but it will be necessary that he dim his lights so that they will not obscure the vision of the drivers coming in the opposite direction.

A great many motorists do dim their lights, and much credit and commendation goes to them for this act of courtesy. But those who are indifferent to this rule and who flatly refuse to dim their lights make it not only inconvenient but dangerous to themselves and others.

Courtesy is the answer. It will promote safety for everybody.

SCHOOL NOTES

St. Joe H. S. students are expecting Wayne Fetters to bring the district corn husking championship back from the contest at Yoder today. Wayne made a fine showing at the county contest last week.

Band members are to be congratulated on the fine appearance they made in the Legion parade at the fair last week. Mrs. Arnold says that in order to have a better balanced instrumentation, she would like to interest a number of students in taking up study of one of the reed instruments, clarinet, flute or piccolo. Mrs. Arnold would like to contact anyone having one of these instruments which they would lend or rent to a student.

Virginia Wilbern won first prize for a decorated float in the pet parade at the fair.

The Senior Speech and Dramatics Class will make its first appearance at the high school gym Friday, October 20 when they will present 3 one act plays. Save this date. Plan to attend. More detailed information next week.

The first meeteing of the P. T. A. will be held next Tuesday at 7:30. Music will be furnished by the high school band. The remainder of the program follows:

Community Singing.

Twenty-five boys turned out for the first basket ball practice Monday evening. Prospects look bright for a good team this year.

AUDITOR ENSLEY ISSUES TAX STATEMENT

The increase in the tax rates of DeKalb County, Indiana is of vital interest to the tax payers of DeKalb County and I feel that they are entitled to know the facts in connection with the tax rates and the finances of the county and that they are further entitled to know the action that has been taken.

The County Council met in Regular Session of September 5, 1939 and examined every budget carefully and reduced the budgets as submitted the sum of $43,000.00 and reduced each item of every budget as far as possible and still permit the proper functioning of the unit submitting the budget. Attention is called to the fact that in numerous instances where reductions could have been made, that the County Council is prohibited from making reductions by Acts of the Legislature and their duty in these cases in connection with appropriations, leaves them no discretion.

The county rate for 1938 was fixed at 7 cents and at 5 cents in 1939. Neither of these rates would produce sufficient revenue to operate the county and leave a proper working balance in the general funds and this is best proven when we consider the tax rate levied for the general fund in DeKalb County from 1933 to the present time as follows:

1933	30 cents
1934	42 cents
1935	40 cents
1936	40 cents
1937	18 cents
1938	7 cents
1939	5 cents

It is apparent that the rates of 1938 and 1939 were not sufficient and resulted in the practical elimination of the balance in the county fund and it is also apparent that every one knew that this result would follow when the rates were made and would result in an extremely high rate this year. An average annual levy of approximately 27 cents is necessary to produce sufficient funds to operate the county and a more sincere effort should be made to make an average levy each year and to not reduce the levy below a proper level in political campaign years.

As a result of insufficient levies in 1938 and 1939 the balance in the county general fund was reduced from $111,344.09 on July 31, 1938 to $51,947.28 on July 1, 1939, or a decrease of $59,426.81.

The levy of 5 cents in 1938, based upon a valuation of $27,500,000 produced an income of approximately $14,000 and in addition the estimated revenue of the county from sources other than general taxation was fixed at $35,230 and fell short about $5,000.00 below this figure, resulting in even greater reduction in the county working balance.

Another factor affecting the tax rate this year is the fact that the State Tax Board valuations on corporate properties, such as utilities and railroads, was reduced from $7,256,170 in 1938 to $6,909,540 in 1939 or a net decrease in valuation of $348,630, which makes it necessary to make a higher levy to raise the same amount of money.

The appropriations made by the County Council in the general fund in 1938 was the sum of $103,775.00 and in 1939 was $106,960.00 or an increase of only $3,184.00. In addition the 1939 budget contains an item of $9,000.00 for general election expense which was not required in the budget of 1938 so that in fact the appropriations for 1939 are lower than in 1938 and probably at the minimum under which the county government can function. This is best proven by the fact that the County Tax Adjustment Board, consisting of seven representative tax payers, found it impossible to make any substantial changes.

Probably the greatest element in the increase of tax rates are poor relief rates in the various townships. Here again the levies of 1938 were so inadequate that marked increases are required this year. For instance, Wilmington Township levied 2 cents for poor relief last year and must levy 37 cents this year. The levy of 2 cents in 1938 raised about $700.00 and would last less than one Winter month and the deficit incurred now requires a high rate this year while if a reasonable rate of 17 or 18 cents had been made last year, the radical increase this year could have been avoided. What is true in Wilmington Township is true in nearly all of the other townships.

In all, it is very apparent that the increase in taxes for this year is not the result of higher appropriations or the spending of more money. In fact, the amount of money to be spent is less and the tax increases this year are directly chargable to two causes, one the failure to make adequate levies in 1939 and secondly the reduction in valuations.

In addition it may not be out of the way to observe that five years ago we had no welfare expenditures of any note while now we are expenidng over $100,000.00 per year for welfare in this county and of this amount 20% is contributed by the county.

BURLEY ENSLEY,
Auditor DeKalb County.

BARBERS PROTESTING RAISE IN PRICES

A number of barbers in the Warsaw area have forwarded a petition to the Indiana Barbers' Examining Board protesting the increase in prices, mandatory under a recent order of the state board. The petition asks that the order be rescinded.

The claim is made by the barbers that of the 20 barbers who signed the original petition to increase the prices, seven were illegal signers, thus, instead of 80 per cent, as required, making the request, only 72.2 per cent legally signed.

This law is considered by the small town barbers as just another attempt to force the small business man out of existence, and in view of the conditions in the rural areas, where prices are low and money hard to get makes one believe that this is really what is being done.

One thing about St. Joe, there aren't many men who keep folks wondering how they make a living.

It would be as easy to stop human nature as it would be to stop jay-walking.

Have you ever noticed that a whisper will travel a greater distance than a loud shout?

The class insignia worn by men who graduated from the school of experience, is a good sized blister.

You may not know the words of "The Star Spangled Banner," but you can at least buy American-made goods.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

The warning from Admiral Raeder of the German navy, to the effect that the American ship Iroquois would be sunk, was an unusual document. Not less out of the ordinary was the White House bulletin, which gave little credence to the communication but set forth the facts for what they were worth. The direct statement that the Athenia was, and the implied statement that the Iroquois would be blown up by the Allies, was not taken seriously in this country. The reason for making it remains to be ascertained. Aside from the spilling of blood in Poland, the war so far has been carried on through intrigue and dickering, rather than by passages at arms. The German theories about the destruction of the vessels mentioned may be only an item in a plan of propaganda and diplomatic or military finesse.

Considering that France has set her hand very definitely to the plow, so far as active participation in the war is concerned, the demand of the French Communists that entry be made on peace negotiations naturally gives rise to suspicion. It is unlikely that Mr. Hitler at this stage would accept any proposals that did not clothe him in righteousness and give him his way. That the French should approach a settlement hat in hand, may be dismissed from consideration. There is good reason for the French to suspect that the hand of Russia, represented by the French communistic party, is in the game. The word "purge" is somewhat overworked, but as indicating what France intends to do respecting home organizations having roots abroad, it should be permitted to stand as written.

England and France have registered a polite but definite "No" againts the plan to keep naval activities outside a line from one to three hundred miles off the coasts of the Americas. It is not likely that the point will be pressed further. To do so would amount to reopening the freedom of the seas question, which gave rise to much controversy in the World War days. England long has insisted on a three mile limit for the purposes under discussion, urging, among other arguments, that beyond that distance, the position of a ship cannot be determined with the certainty that the occasion demands.

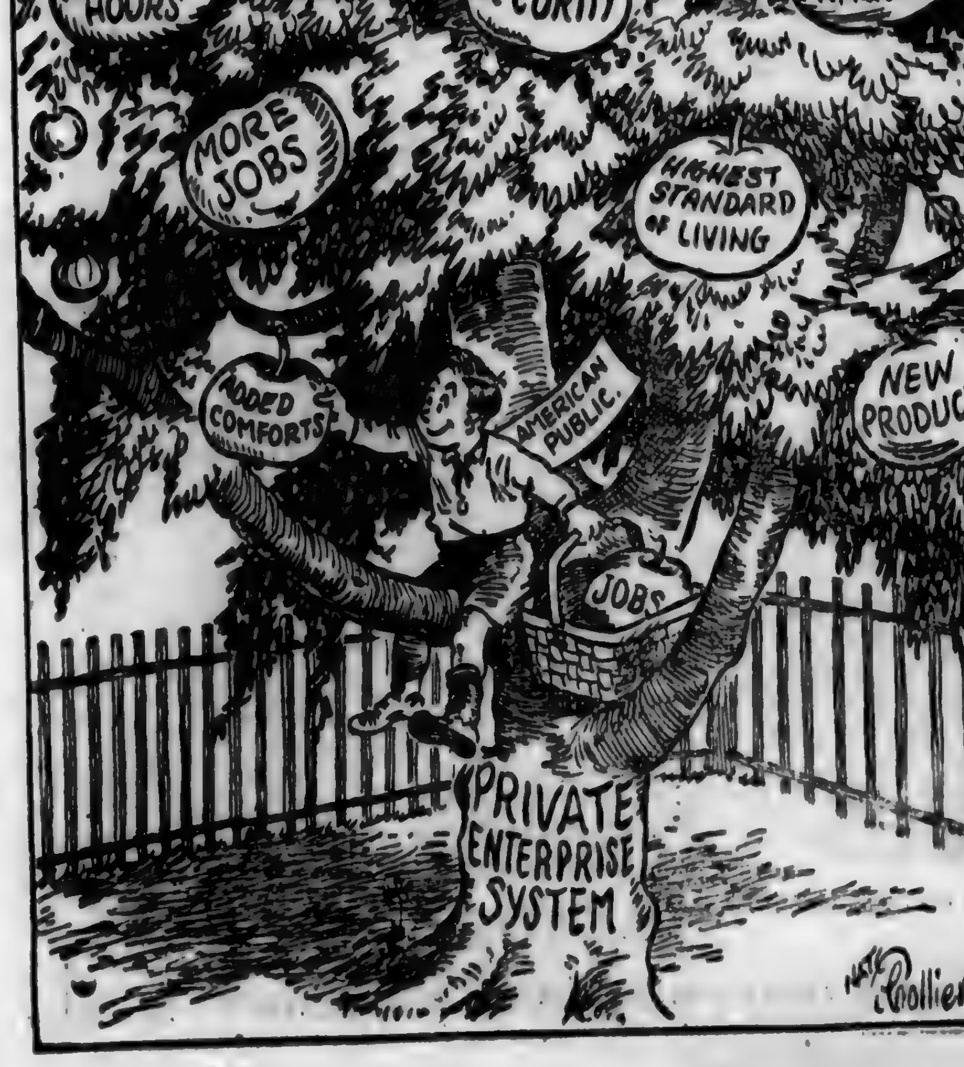
There is some justice in, and certainly some support in international law for, the viewpoint of the allies. Moreover, to guard a hundred mile strip off the coast, to say nothing of one three hundred miles wide, would be something of a task. Giving the Panama conference credit for the best of intentions, perhaps one will have to grant that it bit off a little more than it can chew.

Without presuming to express an opinion as to the propriety of the repeal of the neutrality law, nothing but good can come from an unprejudiced examination of the reasons urged in favor of such a course. Theoretically, the motives are altruistic. Practically they are founded on the law of self-preservation, and the fact that human nature has not changed in substance since the Stone Age. Phrased in common language, there is a widely-spread conviction that if the totalitarian powers are permitted to gobble up Europe, we shall be next.

Former Secretary of State Stimson has spoken with commendable candor, and more elegantly. He favors repeal for the help of France and Britain, lest the war "in case they are beaten, become our own battle"; adding that "the embargo forbids them to resort to our markets in order to repair their consequent weakness." Therein lies the foundation for the embargo repeal. Mr. Stimson may be wrong, but he has at least cleared the atmosphere and stripped away much that Mr. Alfred E. Smith would classify under head of "bunk."

Upon the whole, Mr. Hitler's latest speech was disappointing so far as novelty was concerned. Once more he assured the world that he did not want additional territory. There is to be a new order of "ethnographic" conditions in Poland, which surely must mean something. Germany and Russia are to create a peace zone in Europe. The answer of the allied nations bears close relation to Macduff's reply to Macbeth: "I have no words: my voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villian than terms can make thee out!"

IN HIS OWN BACKYARD



QUIET, PLEASE

Of all things, it seems that Mussolini can be upset by the sound of something else unpleasant besides firing of guns! He is doing something about the unnecessary honking of automobile horns, and this is something that people of St. Joe dislike as well. We acknowledge that an auto without a horn would be a menace but a horn has its place and should be used in it. The idea of scaring a pedestrian to give the car right of way, of the fellow who insists upon constantly honking to attract attention instead of using a little leg movement, is when we think a horn is a nuisance. Mussolini is justified in clamping down on the racket. A horn is a warning measure and should be used for only this purpose.

IT'S TOO MUCH

Life seems complicated enough for most of us in St. Joe without piling up more indignities. Women hereabouts may be all keyed up to accept the things but try to imagine such corsets as hampered the figures of the dead past, coming back to local homes. To be faced with a return of the whalebones and laces is asking a bit too much of progressive males. As we recall, the corsets of yore needed extra hands in the tugging and the lacing. If the men would sign a pledge not to assist in any way, refusing to become an accessory to the fact, the corset movement may die a rapid death, we hope.

CARE DOES IT

With the turning to Autumn comes the sound of the hunter's gun. Frost in the air and the sound of a shot! Many men enjoy the sport and take down the rifle with a sportsman's pleasure. But with this enjoyment goes the fact that hunting is a dangerous thing. Men who disregard the warnings of each hunting season are a menace to any countryside. To travel the land with a cocked gun, climb through or over a fence pulling the gun after you, to shoot at the first slight sound or movement without being sure what is before you, all are instances when accidents occur and deaths result. The St. Joe man who hunts with an inexperienced shooter should be especially careful. Teach safety to the hunter, the proper procedure and safe method of handling firearms. Protect your own life and be a sportsman by remaining a live one.

TURN HOME

It is an ill wind that doesn't blow some good to our shore through the sad foreign situation. It creates hardships in some lines and benefits others. There are various companies dealing in peaceful materials that will find certain advantages due to new markets being opened to their products. For instance take the advertisers of tourist travel within this country. More people will see America first and spend millions of dollars here rather than in European travel. Radio listeners who are constantly waiting current war news will stay tuned to stations where advertising sponsors various programs. Newspaper and magazine circulation will increase as a result of the demand for news. The man who preferred European products will now look to America for his needs and if the advertisers are on their toes they will heed the writing on the wall.

The link with Central and South America will be strengthened and cause an increase in these marketts, we believe. What is to be done about the making and selling of war materials to belligerent nations we know not and most of us in St. Joe dislike thinking it through in case we do not make armament hay while the sun shines. But we can safely use the opportunies of opening new markets through peaceful industry by advertising that which America has been able to offer all along.

A SALUTE

This month, just 447 years ago (today) the twelfth day, a gentleman named Columbus discovered what is commonly believed by her inhabitants, to be the greatest country on this globe. There aren't many to dispute her supremecy though various historians have tried to convince us that Columbus shouldn't be given full credit for discovering her. Whatever the correct data, we are mighty grateful that Columbus didn't give us over to the Indians and wash his hands of the whole affair! Sometimes when as a nation we act unwisely and greedy, unappreciative and childish, we are glad Columbus can't see what we are doing with this glorious gift. But perhaps he knows of our weaknesses and trusts in our common sense winning out so that eventually we will really amount to something bigger and better.

Let us not, as a grateful people, let him down by being unworthy of his discovery. Make it possible for the day of October 12th to hold up her head in pride and dignity.

FLASHER SIGNAL AND GATE IN OPERATION

Flashing light signals, warning motorists of approaching trains at grade intersections, are to be installed at 79 additional crossings, T. A. Dicus, chairman of the State Highway Commission said today. Similar warning signals have been installed previously at 315 grade crossings and have contributed to a reduction in accidents.

Installation of these signals, like those already in operation, will be financed with federal funds allocated to the State Highway Commission for grade separation, grade crossing elimination and protection. It is estimated that installation of the signals at the 79 grade crossings will cost approximately $228,000.

These signals will be the first to be installed on Indiana highways under new federal regulations which permit the railroads affected to purchase materials, assemble and place the signals. In the past, the Commission was required to take bids and award contracts for the furnishing of the major materials necessary for assembly and erection of the signals. Under the new regulations, bills for materials used will be filed with the Highway Commission by the railroads.

Sixty-seven of the crossings to be protected by the flashing light signals are on state highway routes both inside and outside cities and towns; eight crossings are on city streets which are not state highway routes and the remaining four signals will go on county roads. Twelve of the crossings on the list will have both the lights and short-arm gates which drop as a train approaches the intersection.

Crossings included in the present protection program were selected by state highway engineers after examination of the accident records of the crossings and plans are worked out in cooperation with the railroad officials. Installation of the new signals will be rushed as much as possible.

Crossings to be protected in this section will be found on Road 3 and N. Y. C. RR., one-half mile northwest of Ft. Wayne.

Road 27 and N. Y. C. RR., 0.61 miles north of Allen DeKalb County Line.

Road 20 and N. Y. C. RR., at west edge of Angola.

BE INTERESTED IN OUR LOCAL SCHOOL

With local schools getting well under way it is about time to suggest to the many parents of our community that their job to the school has also just begun. This is not to find fault but to ask that folks not overlook the value of the school to their children, themselves and the community at large. Many parents feel that after their young ones go to school the task is for the teacher who takes charge, while they, the parents, sit back and wait for results. This is not fair to the youth or loyal to the teacher. It is necessary to show that you are interested in the work, to visit the schoolroom just often enough to be a help, to show that you are keenly alive to your responsibility, and cooperating with the school system and the community. A child that is questioned about his progress each day, asked what he is reading, what subjects interest him, is impressed with the importance of education. The schools in St. Joe and Spencerville are schools of which we can be justly proud but we can help to produce better results by giving of our interest and our help.

CHRISTMAS CARDS

Snapshots such as this can be posed any time now—and will make charming, inexpensive Christmas cards.

ABOUT this time each year, I observe a ring of red ink around a date on my calendar, and a note on the margin—"Time to think about Christmas cards." It's a warning that has saved me lots of trouble in the past, and that is why I am passing it along to you now.

Naturally, every dyed-in-the-wool Guild member likes to design his Christmas card around one of his own snapshots. However, many of us tend to put it off until the last moment—and, in the end, have to send out ordinary cards that are not at all individual. So my advice is—get busy now, and have your cards ready for early mailing.

No two photographic Christmas cards are alike. That is what makes them so personal, and there are thousands of ideas you can adapt. The picture is the important part, and a clever picture idea gives the card more appeal.

If your child has a set of building blocks with big letters on them, try lining up the blocks so they spell "Merry Christmas." Then pose the child beside them, holding, perhaps, the last letter ready to place it in position—and you have a set-up for a story-telling picture.

Special pictures such as this lead to charming cards, well worth the little planning they require. However, a good group snapshot of the family at home is often preferred—and most albums contain such snapshots. A picture of the house—especially with snow on it—makes an attractive card, and you may have a suitable picture from last winter that can be used.

Run through the album, and see what you can find. Some of the pictures may give you ideas for new snapshots, especially suited to Christmas card use. The chief point is—decide early, for Christmas arrives almost before you know it.

DEFIANCE TO SHOW FAMED GAS-FILLED BALLOON MONSTERS

The famous Jean Gros Parade of Giants, composed of 25 gas-filled balloons in the shape of weird monsters, will be seen on parade in Defiance at 3 P. M. October 31 as part of the Defiance Halloween celebration.

Regarded as America's greatest street parade spectacle, and heretofore seen only in largest cities, the Parade of Giants was secured because it will be enroute from Chicago to Pittsburgh on Halloween. They will be shown in afternoon instead of at night to give people who have night celebrations in their home communities an opportunity to see them.

Headed by Gulliver, the 68-foot figure of a man, valued at $3,000, the collection of giant characters will include drum major, big duck, big rabbig, dragon, striped cat, elephant, bug, ten big gas-filled heads, clown, alligator and caterpillar with balloon head and 100-foot fabric body carried by 22 persons. To handle the monsters in the parade, nearly 200 local people will be required.

The traditional costume parade, with many individual prizes, and eight bands in the line of march, will be held at night.

While in an Auburn grocery John E. Brown, of southeast of Auburn, suffered a heart attack at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. In a serious condition, he was taken to the Dr. Bonnell M. Souder Hospital. Mr. Brown was in St. Joe Monday evening and was feeling fine.

AUTO COLLISION ON STREET THURSDAY

The first auto accident for many mouths resulted last Thursday noon, when Martin Wagoner drove out from the St. Joe Filling Station, headed east onto the pavement and was struck by a Ford car driven by Mrs. Betty Olson, of Fort Wayne, going west.

Both cars were damaged considerable in the front, but were soon cared for so that they could get away.

With Mrs. Olson in the Ford car were her small daughter, Beverly Jane, Mrs. Hilda Zoller and small son, Lowell, of 3625 Webster Street, Fort Wayne, Mrs. Elva Dusing, of Winter Street and her two children, Donna and Donald, also of Fort Wayne. Donna received cuts and bruises on her face and was hurriedly taken to Dr. F. F. DeMuth in Hicksville, for treatment, by Wayne Graber, of Adrian, Michigan, and Mrs. H. W. Like.

Mr. and Mrs. Wagoner were not injured. Mr. Wagoner stated that he waited for a truck to pass going east before he drove onto the pavement, and that he saw the car coming from the east but figured he would clear the road in plenty of time.

Sheriff Artus Coyle was called and made investigation of the accident before the cars could be moved.

Maxton Chevrolet of Butler Stage Gala Showing of 1940 Models at Sales Room Friday Evening

New 1940 Chevrolet Master De Luxe Sport Sedan

New 1940 Chevrolet Master 85 Sport Sedan

New 1940 Chevrolet Special De Luxe Sport Sedan

(Advertisement)

Three completely re-styled series of Chevrolet passenger cars, combining greater length and width with much more massive appearance, and embodying many mechanical refinements, made their formal public bow last Saturday at the National Automobile Show and in the Maxton Chevrolet Sales Rooms at Butler, with hundreds of people visiting the display and enjoying the unique program. Over-all length has been increased 4⅜ inches, a change which makes the new line outstanding for its sleekness and grace.

Improvements, aside from styling, in which sweeping changes are made, include provision of Chevrolet's exclusive vacuum power shift as regular equipment on all models of all three series, helical syncro-mesh transmission with silent low and reverse as well as silent intermediate and high, and numerous revisions affecting safety, comfort, convenience, performance, and long life. Knee-action and shockless steering are featured on the Special De Luxe and Master DeLuxe series, conventional I-beam front axle with semi-elliptic springs and airplane type shock absorbers being retained on the Master 85.

Except for the difference in front suspension and the use of a slightly higher gear ratio on the Master 85, the chassis of the three series are practically identical. All are of the same wheelbase, and the power plant is the same throughout. It is the time-tried Chevrolet six-cylinder valve-in-head engine, revised in several particulars in the interests of silent operation, smoothness, and long life. These changes affect the oil system, the valve mechanism, and the camshaft, and in the two latter cases involve change in manufacturing practice as well as in design.

In appearance, the 1940 Chevrolet is new from bumper to bumper. Bodies, fenders, hood, and frame are completely re-designed, to embody low slung grace. These changes result also in increased stability, since they lower the center of gravity of the car as a whole. Changes, except for trim and extra equipment, are the same on all three series.

The radiator grille, one of the most obvious outward changes, is much lower and wider. The massive chrome-palted horizontal bars at the lower part of this unit sweep outward to include the fender area formerly occupied by auxiliary louvers. The alligator-jaw type hood has a deep, gracefully-rounded nose, and is designed in such a way that the line along which it opens is unnoticeable when the hood is closed. The hood is equipped with a theft-proof lock so that access to the engine compartment can be gained only after releasing a control knob under the dash with the car. Releasiung of the latter allows the hood's spring-loaded hinges to raise the nose, giving access to a secondary lock which releases it the rest of the way. This secondary lock prevents the hood from being jarred or blown open while the car is in motion, even if the dash lock should be accidentally released.

Front fenders are longer, wider, and deeper, and sweep inward from the crown to the sides of the hood in an almost horizontal plane, without valleys. Streamlined headlamps, nearly 20 inches long, are nestled in the fenders at locations almost 10 inches farther apart. This mounting makes for maximum illumination, as well as full protection for the lamps, and easy occess for servicing. The new sealed beam headlamp units combining lamp, reflector and scientically-designed lens, are used on all models. Parking lamps are mounted between headlamp and outer edge of fender.

Safety, as well as style, is served by the new all-rubber-surfaced running boards with triple-peaked longitudinal ribs which parallel the body contours. The running boards terminate just short of the rear fenders for better drainage.

Above the running boards, the body rises in an almost vertical plane to the body belt, from which line it tapers inward toward the top. Slope of the windshield and rear panel is even more pronounced, both these members being inclined more sharply. The tempered plate glass rear window, used in all models except the new cabriolet, is of curved section, to blend with the side and rear contours of the body. Windshields are of the new high test safety plate, and safety plate glass is used in all side windows and ventipanes.

Bodies are larger, inside and out, and are also more rigid. Seats are wider, and leg-room and head-room are increased. Wider doors make for easier ingress and egress. Numerous interior refinements, which vary among the three series, result in luxury, comfort and convenience unmatched in previous years' models. In the Special De Luxe series, these items include an illuminated clock recessed in the glove compartment door, and a light within the compartment which turns on automatically when the door is opened, regardless of whether the other car lights are on or off.

Springing has been improved for better balance between front and rear suspensions, and steering geometry on the Master 85 is revised for better steering. Gasoline tank capacity in all models except Business Coupe and Sedan Delivery is increased from 14 to 16 gallons. Trunk capacity is enlarged by the lowering of the car floor, the engine being inclined somewhat more toward the rear, to minimize the rear comparment floor tunnel. Trunks are larger, and are now illuminated through apertures in the rear of the recessed tail and stop lamp shells.

Rustproofing, heretofore confined to sheet metal such as fenders and hoods, is now applied also to the body, prior to application of Duco. Bumpers are standard, front and rear, on all models except the station wagons, where bumperettes are provided at the rear. Bumper guards are furnished at front and rear on the Master De Luxe and Special De Luxe. Double windshield wipers, and a full complement of instruments including engine heat indicator, are includede on all models, as are left-hand sun-visors. The Special De Luxe has, in addition, a right-hand sun-visor, special "T"-spoke steering wheel with horn-blowing ring, stainless steel window reveals, decorative door sill plates, and several other extra items.

All series for 1940 include sport sedan, town sedan, and business coupe. Station wagons are provided on the Special De Luxe and Master 85, and four-passenger coupes in the Special De Luxe and Master De Luxe. A coupe pickup and a sedan delivery are available both on the Master 85 and the Master De Luxe, and a brand-new cabriolet, featuring extreme beauty along with high performance is offered on the Special De Luxe.

The fellow who is trying to dodge traffic had better stay out of the woods during hunting season.

Few indeed are the well informed readers, for what is true today is apt to be false tomorrow.

The smart wife who gives her husband letters to mail, dates them a week ahead.

No father wants to be called an "old bunny." Especially is this true during hunting season.

Until everyone is self-sustaining, there must always be the presence of charity.

Have you ever noticed that some fellows are more thrilled about running for office than in getting married?

If Barnum was alive today we figure his "sucker born every minute" would change to a greater percentage.

It looks to us now that it is going to take Europe as long to settle down as it has taken them to settle up.

A local man suggests that a big help to the cotton surplus would be for every girl to have two kitchen aprons.

Our idea of a thoughtful local husband is that one who has a lot of new parlor stories for the new season.

We wonder what St. Joe school children are going to do about learning geography, with nations changing boundaries so frequently.

Too often the fellow who insists he isn't good enough for his girl friend is found out when she becomes his wife.

ASSURANCE

Sixty-four million Americans can't be wrong! At least they figure thru their ownership of life insurance they have invested wisely and well, both for themselves and their families. When the Annual Message of Life Insurance is delivered to the nation during the week of October 23, these millions will feel they have had a hand in the payment of insurance to widows, orphans and oldsters of last year, totaling about one and a half billion dollars. This figures nearly two years of income to every family in the U. S. and it may mean a future of safety to your own. The man who has insurance holds a place of importance in the nation's economic system. The money invested by insurance companies, as trustees for their policy holders, is put into mortgages, real estate, bonds and other investments throughout the country. This makes the wheels go 'round.

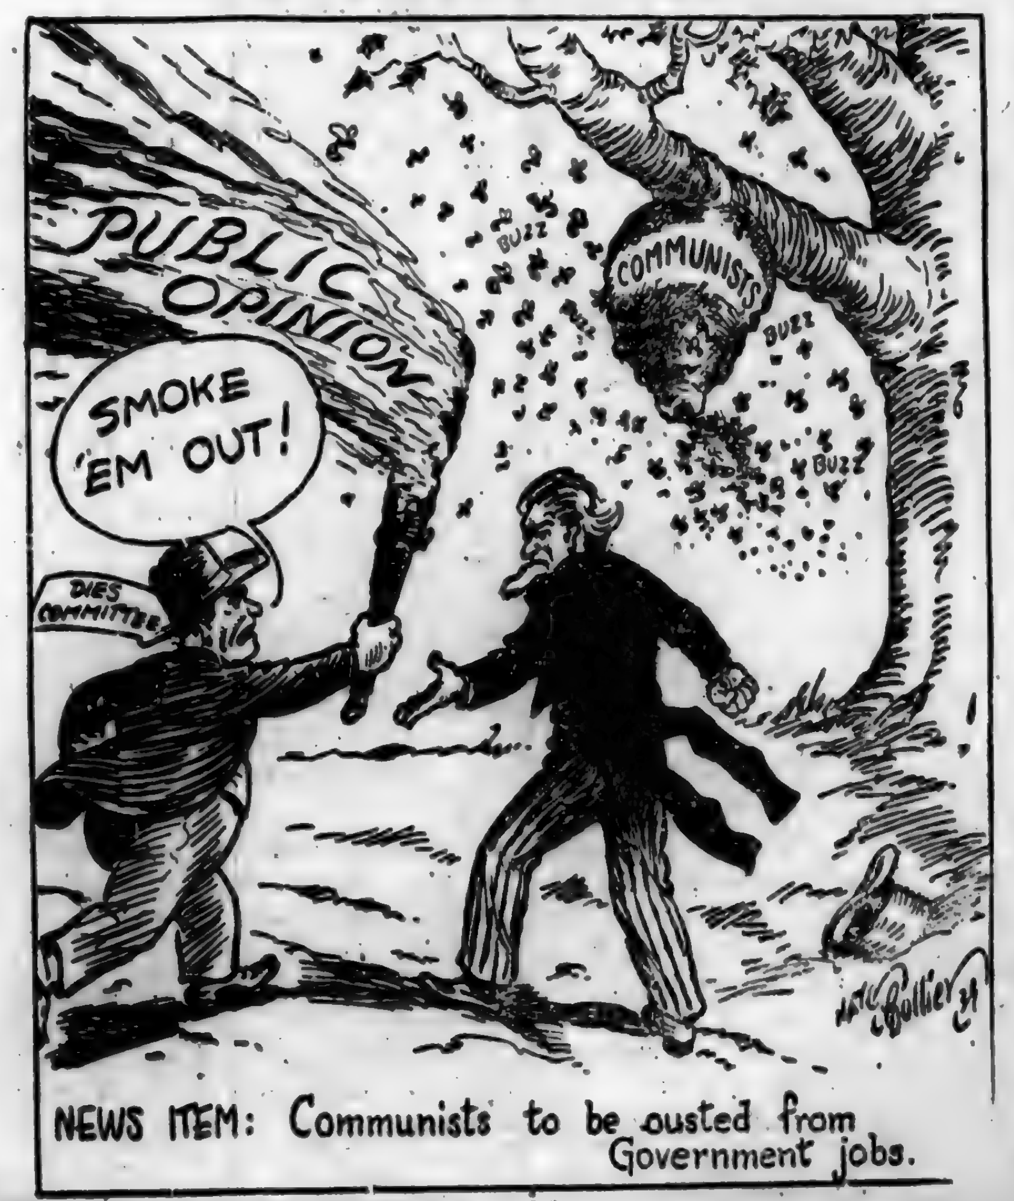
The first life insurance policy is believed to have been written in England in 1583. That is a long time ago but even then man foresaw the need of looking to the future. Today it may mean insuring the living with endowments, a fund saved for a college education, an annuity for the fortunate, a claim from the dead. The message of Life Insurance will be heeded.

BETTER PARENTS

As we try not to overlook the various "weeks" that go to make better business, we are sure to observe the week of October 23-29 that is set aside for the observance of Better Parenthood which is most worthy of comment. Of course there are many who feel they couldn't be any better parents if they tried. The fact that you can acquire tips for raising your children from most everyone in St. Joe doesn't mean you are a poor parent. So often the other person sees little things that the parent's eyes of love refuses to see. The wise parent is willing to listen to suggestions, to read of solutions of problem cases which have been solved successfully by someone else. The parent who feels the best way to rear his family is to let them express their initiative and personality unrestrained, often finds they have reared children who "know it all." The mother who uses psychology to the extreme often wakens to the fact that the open palm might prove more effective and character-forming. A parent can go just so far and from there the child takes over. The patient child seems to be the most successful, and the father and mother who hold their temper when correcting are the victors. The ones who praise as well as punish are closest to their young.

Who are we to tell how to be better parents? Everyone in St. Joe knows in his heart, that better parents make better children, better children make better Americans, and good Americans are as necessary to the living as bread and water to the starving.

IT'S ABOUT TIME!



NEWS ITEM: Communists to be ousted from Government jobs.

WORKING THEIR WAY

To say our young people are expecting to start in where their father is after many years of work, is wrong if the claim is too general. There are more than 40 per cent of college men who are working their way through school and this is a good way for them to find out how tough the struggle was for Dad. The educators tell us that too many young people attend college who are mentally unequipped and would be better off in the business world earning a living. This is no doubt true in many cases but we figure the student who is working his way through is not in this class, unusally. He is ambitious and determined to learn and the fact that he is doing two jobs at one time will find him the winner. Our hats are off to those lads who so desire an education that they are willing to get it the hard way.

WHY A KEY!

Being the size we are in St. Joe, the subject of auto stealing is not as important as in larger centers where it occurs far too frequenttly. Since the auto is found everywhere it is wise to profit by the mistakes of our neighbors. It is a fact that most autos are stolen for performing a crime rather than for resale. Many cars are borrowed for "joy rides" and abandoned along the road after they have served their purpose. This is the reason most cars are recovered. But why issue an invitation by leaving your car unlocked? It may be accepted by someone who will dismantle it and not be too careful of their treatment of fenders and motor, battery and tires.

WARMING UP

Breathes there a community such as St. Joe where someone does not plan on heeding the call to travel southwards as the first cool winds blow from the north? The fellow with the trailer examines the brakes and hitch, motorists study routes and the south awaits the onslought with anticipation. Merchants predict better business than last year. Realtors expect a sensible boom, renters prepare houses and apartments. Folks along highways give over-night cabins a coat of paint and brush off the road signs. Gasoline stations prepare to ring the bell to "who tied the pup." Hotel managers wonder if the new places on the edge of town will affect their business. And so it goes. Roads will attest to increased traffic and in will come the inevitable post cards of "having a fine time and wish you were here." Well, that is all some folks have to do, write cards to us back home who sometimes wish we could lick a one-cent stamp now and then ourselves.

Newspaper Advertising Foremost

Despite the appearance of other advertising media, the newspaper remains the most productive channel whereby industry can reach the buying public—and industry is fully aware of that fact.

A recent survey well illustrates the sustained popularity of newspapers among advertisers. The survey was made by four national associations serving chain stores, and covered 138 representative systems operating more than 33,000 stores, coast-to-coast, and having annual sales well in excess of $3,000,000,000.

During the typical year covered by the survey, these companies spent more than $55,000,000 for advertising, an average of $1,754 per store. Almost 58 per cent of the money was spent with newspapers. A little less than 10 per cent was spent on handbills and similar printed matter much of which was produced in local newspaper plants. Only 4.30 per cent was spent for radio, with the balance made up of expenditures on miscellaneous media.

Breaking the figures down, it was found that drug store chains spent 82.24 per cent of their advertising dollar with newspapers, grocery chains spent 56.53 per cent and general merchandise and variety chains spent 51.35 per cent.

That is a testimonial to the character of the American press. No institution holds a higher place in the esteem of the American people. This is particularly true of the newspapers serving the smaller towns of the country, which are read from "cover to cover" by their subscribers—news, locals, advertisements and all.

VOLKERT—SCHUBEL

A pretty wedding ceremony was performed at the Union Church in Quincy, Michigan, when Miss Arlene Schubel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schubel, became the bride of Mr. Harold Volkert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Volkert.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a street length dress of bright blue crepe, having three quarter length sleeves and a shirred panel in the bodice front. Her accessories were black and the only jewelry worn by the bride was a crystal bracelet, a gift from the groom. Her corsage was of gardenias held in place by a diamond clip.

The maid of honor, Miss Marian Schubel, a sister of the bride, wore a street length dress of wine alpaca. Her corsage was of Talisman roses.

The bride's mother wore a black pin stripe tailored suit with a white satin blouse and wine accessories. The groom's mother wore a navy blue crepe dress with grape wine accessories.

The groom's brother, Mr. Earl Volkert, served as best man and the ushers were Messrs Corlin Bovee and Robert DeWolf. The buttonnaires were of gardenias.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents immediately following the ceremony. Refreshments were served from a small table laid in lace and lighted by tall white tapers held by crystal holders. The wedding cake was three tiered and held a miniature bride and groom.

Several out of town guests were from Lansing, Jonesville, and Hillsdale, Michigan; St. Joe and Fort Wayne, Indiana; Toledo and Hicksville, Ohio.

The bride and groom left on a short honeymoon trip.

This is the time of the year when windshield equipment is necessary for proper vision.

Late in the afternoon of one day a short time ago, while we were riding with a friend we ran into considerable fog and rain. The windshield wipers were not in working order, and as a result we had very poor vision.

We shall soon have Fall weather which brings fog and rain, and in some sections sleet. Get your car tuned up for Winter driving, and when you do so, do not fail to check your windshield equipment.

It's smart to drive carefully!

OCTOBER

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Washington has just witnessed the closing of an enjoyable and profitable convention by forty-six hundred postmasters. The President greeted the delegates and spoke kindly of their work. He may well do so. The public sometimes forgets that the Post Office Department does more than peddle letters. It conducts a bank of safe-keeping, wherein there are no charges. It takes the census. It attended to the payment of the soldiers' bonus. Nobody wonders whether an obligation really is wiped out, if the debtor tenders a post office money order. There are few business transactions in which Jim Farley's men do not lend a helping hand in some way.

The account attendant upon the docking of the Iroquois, reminds one of several things. The passengers were not informed of the torpedo menace until a convoy arrived alongside, a few days off the American coast. No doubt they had plenty of time to worry, at that. Ignorance now and then continues to be bliss. Those aboard cheered when they saw the big statue in New York Harbor, representing Liberty Enlightening the World. It was a gift from abroad. Without throwing too many bouquets at ourselves, the torch at this particular time seems to shine a little brighter here than on the continent from which the statue came.

Probably the next month will tell much of the story as to whether or not the United States is to take a hand as peacemaker in the foreign trouble. President Wilson tried it and the existing turmoil is a sad comment on the futility of his well-meant and capable efforts. Europe wants peace at any price, so long as the other fellow pays it. American peacemakers will do well to consider a suggestion made by a great teacher of a by-gone day: "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

Those who think that Mr. Chamberlain has been to conciliatory in his dealings with Germany, will be inclined to modify their opinion in the light of his blunt refusal to take stock in Mr. Hitler's latest offer. Even the threat of beginning war in earnest did not create a wave of fear. The Leader seeks to promote the opinion that when he gets ready, he can do whatever he wishes, and that if he cannot make the grade alone, he can do so with help to be had for the asking. The aid indeed may be available, but no evidence yet has been brought forward to prove that England and France are so impotent that they are due to be walked upon. Somehow, the German terror campaign sounds like the bombastic speech which Mark Twain puts into the mouth of his Mississippi raft bully, who was flattened out in the midst of an oration on his powers as a "corpse-maker."

Mr. Hoover has come forward with a suggestion which may have something behind it, and the fact that his popularity may have waned, should not militate against giving careful consideration to what he has to say. He would repeal the embargo, but only as to material that can be used for a war of defense, as distinguished from a war of agression. The weakness in the plan, and no system is without its weakness, is that the line is somewhat hard to draw. Even though the demarcation cannot be determined with exactness, the former President has given the friends of repeal an argument that they should weigh, and perhaps advance.

On the eleventh of October, ceremonies were held at the Washington monument to Casimir Pulaski, Polish general, who on that date, 130 years ago departed this life after distinguished service in the cause of the American colonies during the Revolutionary War. The Germans have a legend that Emperor Frederick Barbarossa, believed to be dead, is merely sleeping, to awake at an hour when the Fatherland needs him. Partitioned in 1772, in 1793, in 1795, and again in 1939, Poland has reason to hope that General Pulaski too may be only asleep.

Following the Community Committee elections, one delegate and one alternate delegate were elected to represent that Township at the County Convention.

Greater interest was shown in this year's election of Township and County Triple A Committeemen than ever before, according to Mr. Lautzenhiser, County Chairman. This was due to the larger participation by farmers in the National Farm Program, he said.

All members of the Agricultural Conservation Association of DeKalb County were eligible to cast ballots at their respective precinct polling places. Association members are all persons participating or co-operating in any current AAA Program, and all persons who have interests in farms within the county who signified their intentions to participate or co-operate in any such program.

The numerous letters received from citizens throughout Indiana, inquiring about methods of protecting beans from weevils, is evidence of the importance of this insect pest of dried beans. And, yet, according to J. J. Davis, head of the entomology department of the Purdue University Agricultural Experiment Station, it is a comparatively simple matter to prevent this damage to stored beans.

Circular holes in beans, evidence of the emergence of bean weevils, is a warning of an infestation, which if not checked may infest and destroy entirely the beans being held over Winter for planting or for family use. Further damage, however, may be prevented by a simple treatment according to Davis.

Lime, preferably hydrated lime, applied to the beans when they are placed in storage is the recommended procedure. For a small quantity say a peck, use about one part by weight of lime to two parts of beans. If a peck up to three bushels, use one part of lime to three parts of beans. If more than three bushels, use one part of lime to four to six parts of beans. The lime should be dusted thoroughly through the beans so that they will receive a slight coating. The residue of lime which will sift to the bottom should not be removed, but allowed to settle through the beans to the bottom of the container.

CONTESTANTS FOR DEKALB CO. CORN HUSKING CONTEST ANNOUNCED

The following men will be the contestants in the DeKalb County Corn Husking oCntest which will be held at the James Rugman farm, 2 miles west of Auburn, on U. S. 27 on Saturday, October 21.

The above contestants, starting at 11:00 A. M. will husk for 80 minutes and the one husking the most corn after deductions are made for gleanings and excessive husks, will be declared the county winner. It is hoped that the winner will make a sufficiently large record to make him eligible for the State Contest, which will be held near Liberty, in Union County, on October 27. Vilas Jacks from Jasper County, 1938 State Champion, will defend his title against the fourteen best county contest winners and the Union County Champion.

After the men's contest, the following women will compete: Mrs. Jesse Schlatter, Auburn; Mrs. N. C. Johnston, Waterloo; Mrs. Alma Searfoss, Auburn; Mrs. Sarah Dannenberg, Garrett; Mrs. Oscar Christlieb, Auburn; Mrs. Earl Husselman, Auburn.

The women will husk for 40 minutes and deductions will be made on the same basis as for the men's contest.

Prizes for the men's contest will be as follows: 1st prize, $15.00; 2nd prize, $10.00; 3rd prize, $5.00; 4th, $3.00; 5th, $2.00; 6th to 13th, $1.00 each.

Prizes for the women's contest will be: 1st, $5.00; 2nd, $3.00; 3rd, $2.00; 4th, on down, $1.00 each. Gleaners and judges are to be furnished by the Farm Bureau Cooperative Association. Each contestant to be followed by two gleaners and one judge.

Orlo Deets, president of the DeKalb County Corn Growers, will preside at this corn husking contest.

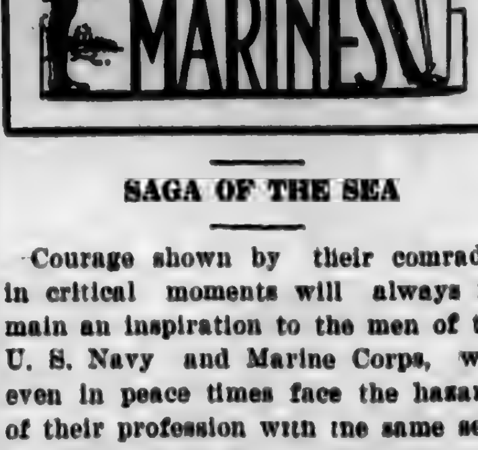
Hobart Hart and Buster Hetrick are in charge of entertainment, which will be supplied while results are being computed.

George Boren and John Rugman are in charge of the concessions.

James Rugman is chairman of the equipment committee.

The field to be used in this contest was selected by a committee composed of Marion DeLong, James Rugman and John W. Brown. The field selected is located on the south side of U. S. 27, about two miles west of Auburn. It is hybrid corn and will average close to 100 bushels per acre. The committee feels that the huskers will have an excellent opportunity to establish a good record in this field.

At 11:00 John Rugman will fire the starting bomb. The public is invited to this outstanding farm sports event. No charge of admission is made. Arrangements have been made with the State Police to help handle traffic. Ample parking space is available in the adjoining corn field on the east.



SAGA OF THE SEA

Courage shown by their comrades in critical moments will always remain an inspiration to the men of the U. S. Navy and Marine Corps, who even in peace times face the hazards of their profession with the same self-sacrifice and devotion to duty they exhibit when in the heat of battle.

Modern science and the use of safety devices have by no means eliminated all the risks which naval men must take, as witness the submarine, aviation and other disasters which flash for a brief moment in the public prints and soon are forgotten.

Such a disaster struck the U. S. S. Wyoming in February, 1937, when an explosion occurred just as a five-inch shell was being loaded into the breech of a gun, killing an officer and six enlisted men of the Marine Corps. Her crew was stunned by the tragedy. The vessel returned its war maneuvers to Long Beach, where both the dead and injured were removed to the hospital ship Relief.

Almost before the echoes of the explosion had died away, several incidents emphasized the calibre of the men who serve aboard our warships. A chief gunner's mate seized a bag of powder from a blinded loader and hurled it out of the casement away from the danger of heat or sparks.

The less seriously wounded marines insisted that their comrades be given first aid before anything was done to ease their own sufferings. A splendid example of self-denial was furnished by the dying Marine Captain, Edward J. Trumble who, heedless of his own fatal injuries, said: "Get a doctor for the men. I'm afraid they're hurt."

The long roll of similar incidents, which have illuminated the pages of naval history since the days of John Paul Jones, prove that the nation may be well proud of its men who go down to the sea in ships.

More than one Indiana town will observe two Thanksgiving days this year. In Washington, Indiana, Mayor Hugh L. Cox has decided to observe the regular November 30 date. Federal post office employes in accordance with President Roosevelt's proclamation, must observe the new November 23 Thanksgiving, while city offices will follow the mayor's decision. Judge Frank E. Gilkison, of the Daviess-Martin Circuit Court has solved the problem with two vacation days—one for each date. Mayor Noble F. Mitchell, of New Albany, has declared November 30 the official date in his city for observance of the holiday. Gov. M. Clifford Townsend has proclaimed November 23 as the date for Indiana Thanksgiving. No declaration has been made by the Town Board of St. Joe as yet. This is hardly fair to the turkeys, having two execution days set.

"Greatest Suffering of Modern Times"; Babies and Old People Hungry in China

Dr. John R. Mott Appeals For Aid For China Relief

"It is my conviction that we are now facing in China the greatest area and volume of relatively unrelieved human suffering of modern times, not excepting the World War," says Dr. John R. Mott, Chairman of the International Missionary Council and Vice-Chairman of the Church Committee for China Relief, in appealing for widespread and generous contributions for China Relief. Dr Mott says "I would urge the ministers and lay leaders of our churches and congregations, large and small, to leave no stone unturned, no matter what the difficulties or handicaps, to assure at the earliest practicable date a truly notable, sacrificial offering from young and old, rich and poor, for the Church Committee for China Relief."

This Committee recently decided to carry on its appeal for funds for another year, unless conditions in China are greatly improved. Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield, the Committee's director, in making public this decision states: "Mothers, children, and old people are among China's greatest sufferers, destitute, homeless millions, victims of war, famine, and flood."

Dr. Fairfield continues: "Flood conditions in April are expected to add to the Chinese people's desperate condition. The present flood conditions in the Yellow River Valley will then be augmented by the swollen waters sweeping down with irresistible force, from the melting snows of Tibet, against the broken dykes on the Great Plain. Millions more of the Chinese people, already war victims, will find it impossible to plant crops that might have ripened by autumn. Shivering, famished, weakened by privation and disease, those who have managed to survive the rigors of winter and exhausted their small food stores, or our limited relief supplies, can see no hope of normal living or full self-support until many months after peace has come. Their only hope of life, for many of these homeless, stricken children and adults, depends upon benevolent Americans. One dollar a month, sent through the Church Committee for China Relief, 105 East 22nd Street, New York City, will help to provide food, shelter, and medical attention, and save a life in China. The Committee hopes to save at least one million lives."

MORTUARY

HART

Funeral services for McClellan Hart, 75, of Coburn's Corners, who died at 10 P. M. Friday, were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home. Rev. Frank Stevenson, assisted by Rev. J. N. Scholes, officiated. Burial was made in White City Cemetery, Spencerville.

Mr. Hart had been ill since August 3 and was bedfast the last three weeks. Born in Spencer Township in 1864 he spent his entire life in the same Community. He had reached the age of 75 years, 5 months and 22 days.

Survivors include the wife; two daughters, Elizabeth at home, Bess Klopfenstein, of Fort Wayne, and one son, George, of Burr Oak, Michigan, and three grandchildren.

Card of Thanks

We desire in this manner to thank the many relatives and friends for their kind expressions of sympathy during the sickness and death of our loved one.

Mrs. Mattie Hart, Elizabeth Hart, Bess Klopfenstein, Mr. and Mrs. George Hart and Grandchildren.

MORR

Lancaster Morr was born November 25, 1875 in Wilmington Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, and lived his entire life in this community. He passed away on Saturday, October 14, 1939 at his home one and one-half miles north of Concord, after an illness of seven months, at the age of 65 years, 10 months, and 19 days.

On April 5, 1903 he was united in marriage to Dora Myers and to this union was born three children, Mrs. Charles Bleeks and Walter Morr, of Concord Township near the family home, and Mrs. Correll Simanton, of Auburn.

As a farmer his strict honesty, the careful consideration given to his work, his willingness to oblige others, his jovial mood and genial smile along with other personal characteristics made him a good neighbor and of him it may be said, "He lived in a house by the side of the road and was a friend to man."

Those who mourn his departure include his wife, Dora; three children, Ruth, Walter, and Pauline; one sister, Mrs. Ella McCory, ten grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends.

How we'll miss his loving presence,
miss his fond caress
Sort o' spent his life a-sowin' seeds of happiness;
Doin' little things for others, helpin'
where he could,
Never makin' much pretention, always doin' good.

The funeral was held from the Concord Church, Tuesday afternoon at 1:30, conducted by Rev. Clayton, with burial at Woodlawn Cemetery, Auburn, by Mayola Kinsey & Son.

Card of Thanks

We wish to take this opportunity to express our deep appreciation to all who have offered their sympathy, for the beautiful floral offerings, and for the consideration and kindness of the neighbors and friends during the illness of our loved one, and in this our hour of sorrow, and to the minister for his consideration and help and for the splendid music.

The Family.

Hoosier Duck Hunters will Open Season Monday -- Ends December 5

Hoosier sportsmen will celebrate the opening of the duck season next Monday (October 23) morning at 7 o'clock with advance reports indicating better sport than was enjoyed last year, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today. The season ends on Tuesday, December 5.

Included in the waterfowl which may be taken during the open season are ducks, geese, brant, Jacksnipe, and coot. There is no open season on wood ducks, Ross' geese and swans. Hunting is permitted only between the hours of 7 A. M. and 4 P. M., Central Standard Time, and no hunting is permitted on Sunday. A daily bag limit of ten ducks; four geese, and brant in the aggregate; 25 coot and 15 Jacksnipe is in effect with not more than two days' bag limit in possession at one time.

Other regulations to be observed by the duck hunters include: use of bait and live decoys is prohibited; shotguns shall not be larger than 10 guage and not hold more than three shells at any one time.

All persons over sixteen years of age must have a federal "Duck Stamp" to take migratory waterfowl and all persons, regardless of age, must have a state hunting license. The Federal Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp may be purchased at postoffices at a fee of $1.00 and must have the signature of the holder written across the face of the stamp. Indiana resident hunting licenses, good for the calendar year and covering fishing and trapping as well as hunting, may be secured from county clerks or at local agent in St. Joe. The state license must also bear the name oft the holden.

Due to weather conditions few southward flights of ducks, geese and other migratory birds have been reported. However, an unusual number of birds of these species nested on Indiana lakes and streams this year with the result that there are more "native" ducks now than at the opening of previous duck seasons.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1939 NUMBER 43

CHEVROLET SHOWING DREW ENTHUSIASTIC CROWD

A crowd estimated at between 1,500 and 2,000 persons attended the recent pre-showing of the new 1940 Chevrolet at the Maxton Chevrolet Sales Rooms.

At the pre-showing 50 gallons of sweet cider, many dozens of doughnuts and hot coffee were served the guests, while the Black Hawk Valley Boys of WOWO Fort Wayne, furnished music, playing an all request program.

Selected from those who registered at the showing were three names, each of which are to receive four grease jobs free. The drawing was held Tuesday afternoon and the winners are Mrs. Harry Souder, Harry Matheny and Miss Dorothy Campbell. The winners in the Mobil guessing contest are first, Olga Lehman, of Edgerton, Ohio, whose guess was absolutely correct, it being 516. Mr. A. M. Wanamaker, of Butler, won second with a guess of 523.

Mr. Maxton announces that they have unfilled orders for 36 new cars, and delivery will be made as soon as possible. He said that production had been stepped up at the Chevrolet plant and that they soon would be able to get all the cars they wanted.

Miss Mabel Kiser, a teacher in the Chicago schools, and niece of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Fetter, of Butler, has the distinction of getting delivery of the first car. She walked into the showrooms Saturday, handed them a check in full, and drove out with a new car.

The striking appearance of the new car, drew many favorable comments from those who viewed it. Many new refinements are incorporated in the car, including longer and more roomy bodies.

Clyde Hart is the first in this community to drive a new 1940 Chevrolet.

WITH OUR CLUB LADIES

The Cutulre Club has started off this year with the usual interest and splendid attendance. The first meeting was entertained at the home of the president, Mrs. Dema Curie, the entertainment of the evening was in charge of the executive comimttee, including the hostess and Mrs. Ethel Wineland, Mrs. Helen Schondelmayer, Mrs. Lucile Lyon, Mrs. Edith Wilson, Mrs. Neva Hursh, Mrs. Troas Carpenter and Mrs. Pluma Hamilton.

The welcome was given in rhyme by Mrs. Ethel Wineland; a group of pantomimes by Lyon, Carpenter and Hursh. The outstanding feature of the evening was the "Kitchen Cabinet Band" with little Bonnie Lou Curie acting as drum major.

The second meeting was with Mrs. Lucile Lyon. The lesson "The Battle of the Eugenics" was presented by Mrs. Dema Curie and a very instructive review on "Does Blood Tell" was given by Mrs. Ethel Wineland.

The third meeting, October 18th, was entertained at the home of Mrs. Pluma Hamilton with Mrs. Lucile Lyon as leader, who presented the lesson "What is Life" very nicely. She also gave a question quiz while the lunch was being prepared. The guests present were Mrs. C. Billow and daughter, Carrol, and Mrs. Lena Meek.

SPENCER TOWNSHIP MAN REGAINS HUSKING TITLE

Pat Hook of Spencer Township, two times champion previously, regained the mythical DeKalb County corn husking crown by a substantial margin Saturday in the annual contest held at the James Rugman farm a mile and a half west of Auburn on Road 27. Hook, who was champion in 1936 and 1937, lost last year to Vernon Stimman, who fell this year to eleventh place. Hook's net corn husked was 28.05 bushels, as compared with the 22.84 bushels which won last year.

A crowd of approximately 3,000 witnessed the contest this year. State police directed traffic near the scene of the contest. Bombs were set off at the beginning and end of the contests, those at the close of both the men's and women's events releasing American flags when they exploded in midair.

Second honors this year went to Frank Martin, of R. R. 4, Auburn, who husked 23.12 bushels, and third place to Arthur Yarde, R. R. 3, Auburn, with 22.56 bushels to his credit.

Other ratings were: Robert Stomm, of near Waterloo, 20.77 bushels; Leal Woolever, of Grant Township, last year's second place winner, 19.87; Glenn Campbell, of Keyser Township, 19.46; Harold Wise, of Keyser Township, 19.36; Ivan Brooks, of near Spencerville, 18.53; Martin Christlieb, R. R. 4, Auburn, 18.37; Glenn Diehl, Auburn, 17.52; Vernon Stimman, of of Jackson Township, 16.66; Robert Heath, of near Waterloo, 15.38; and Victor Housel, of near Garrett, 14.59.

The weather was perfect for the contest and many persons followed their favorites down the rows. The champion husked to the greatest audience and was clocked as pitching 43 ears of husked corn into the wagon per minute early in the contest. His corn was cleanly husked and he lost little because of gleanings. During an entire trip down the field he missed but one ear of corn and a few nubbins.

This contest is sponsored annually by the DeKalb County Corn Growers Association in October. The growers' wives served refreshments in a stand on the field.

E. J. Keefers, of Howe, was the judge and County Agent C. E. Baker assisted with both the preliminary and contest day's arrangements.

The men's contest was late in starting, thus delaying the women's event.

SENIOR DRAMATIC CLASS PROVE REAL ARTISTS

Much praise and favorable comment has been forthcoming since the Senior Dramatic Class presented a program of three one-act plays, Friday night at the gym, and everyone seems to be eager for a frequent program of this kind. The attendance was gratifying to all concerned and the proceeds will be used for a good purpose in the school work. The orchestra looked swell and played excellent and too the ushers were beautiful young ladies and were of great aid to the patrons.

The cast of the three plays was well chosen, and they demonstrated real ability.

ST. JOE LADY FOUND LAYING ON THE FLOOR

Becaue she did not report for work at the Widney Orchard, Monday morning, led Mrs. Hattie Stone to call Mrs. Elnora Blue by phone to investigate why Mrs. Alice Copp had not reported for duty.

Mrs. Blue went to the Copp home and could not get any response, nor could she enter the house. She inquired of neighbors and she had not been seen by any of them. Mrs. Blue then returned and tried to call Mrs. Copp. After several attempts Mrs. Blue thought she could hear a response, and she then called Chas. Woodcox, D. D. Gerig and her husband, who finally gained an entrance by breaking in a window and Mrs. Blue was helped in where she found Mrs. Copp lying on the floor, helpless. The men were called and she was carried to the davenport.

She had suffered a stroke on her left side, but could talk some. She had cut her head in two places and her face was covered with blood.

Mrs. Copp had been in the habit of arising at 5 o'clock in order to get to her work on time. She had fully dressed but her shoes, had come down stairs and shut the double doors and then she fell with her head against the one door. It is not known how long she had been lying on the floor, but it is thought for some time.

Dr. DeMuth was hurriedly called and she was taken to Columbia City in the Kinsey ambulance, where her daughter, Mrs. Flossie Widney lives, and was then placed in the city hospital.

Mrs. Copp had been working at the Widney Orchard, and on Saturday night had called at The News office, and was feeling in high spirits, because she had put in a full week.

Word from Mrs. Widney at Columbia City Wednesday morning stated that Mrs. Copp is not improved as yet and that she is still running a temperature.

SCHOOL NOTES

An evening of good entertainment—this seemed to be the opinion of those who attended the presentation of the plays by the Senior speech and dramatics class last Friday evening. It would be impossible to select individual stars. The parts were well cast and each player succeeded in giving good characterization of the parts they were to portray.

The school orchestra played a group of popular numbers before the opening of the play and special piano numbers were given between acts by Mrs. Arnold, Helen Goodwin and Paul Keller.

Members of the orchestra are: Helen Goodwin, piano; Gladys Keener, accordion; Marcia Wade, drums; Ralph Lanum, bass; Eloise Hook, trombone; Betty Kees, cornet; Sylvia Washler, cornet; Paul Keller, cornet; Iris Jackson, saxophone; Mrs. Arnold, violin; Leslie Wilbern, saxophone.

The first meeting of the P. T. A. was held Tuesday evening with the president, Mr. Allen Haller presiding. Community singing was led by Mrs. Arnold with Mrs. Fred Leighty at the piano. Mr. Wilbern introduced the teachers. In the talk, Mr. Wilbern emphasized the need for educating our boys and girls so that they show the same loyalty to our form of government that is learned by the children of the dictator countries. He also spoke of the efforts of teachers to give not only the three r's but also to help each child develop any particular talent or interest he may give evidence of possessing. Special music was given by the high school band.

Four new students have recently been transferred to this school. Three children of Hugh Drake came from the Waterloo school, Betty, a senior, Frank, a freshman, and Bernice in Mrs. Oberlin's room. Irene Hartranft, daughter of E. O. Hartranft, was transferred to the seventh grade from Hablawetz school in Wilmington Township.

The Seniors are having class pictures taken today.

School will be dismissed Thursday and Friday to allow teachers to attend the sessions of the Northeastern Indiana State Teachers Association at Fort Wayne.

TRAINING INSTITUTE FOR CHILDREN'S WORKERS

DeKalb County Sunday School teachers, pastors and superintendents of Sunday Schools met at the Auburn Church of Christ Friday to attend the fourth annual training institute of the Children's Division of the DeKalb County Council of Religious Education. Thirty were registered at the morning and afternoon sessions.

At the morning session Mrs. Fred B. Leighty, of St. Joe, called the meeting to order, after which devotions were given by Daniel Eynon, pastor of the host church. Mrs. Arthur Emerick, of the Hopewell U. B. Church and Mrs. O. D. Sherer, of the Auburn Methodist Church, gave book reviews on "The Church and The Children' 'and "Children's Work in the Church," respectively. Miss Dora Carnahan, of Jackson Township, chairman of the Childrens' Division, also spoke at this session. A potluck lunch and a fellowship hour were enjoyed in the social rooms of the church at noon.

Miss Carnahan also presided at the afternoon session. After Harold L. Dunson, pastor of the Garrett Church of Christ, opened the session with a prayer, speeches were given by Mrs. H. M. Casebeer, of the Auburn Methodist Church, Carl F. Stallman, county superintendent of schools, and superintendent of the Sunday School of the Auburn Church of Christ, and Rev. Danold J. Dunkin, pastor of the Garrett Baptist Church.

Mrs. Casebeer incorporated in her speech those elements necessary in the life of every child, namely, security, prayer, patience, praise, joy, his work to do, and understanding on the part of his parents. Her speech dealt with the influence of the home upon the child.

"The School and the Home" was the title of Mr. Stallman's talk. He emphasised the importance of a good home environment as a most important factor in the life of a child. He said that the school aids in preparing the child for life and continued by saying that often if there is friction between the home and the school, it usually is only a misunderstanding. He also spoke of the necessity of each generation learning for itself and said that only by living and doing do the young people of each generation learn.

The Rev. Dunkin discussed "The Church and the Home," bringing out that the two institutions are so closely related that if either advances or deteriorates, the other follows and he remarked that the history of nations may be traced in this manner. Terming the church a divine and permanent institution, he said that it provides the principles upon which can be founded a Christian home.

The 6 months old baby son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Gerig, of St. Joe, met with quite a serious accident Sunday afternoon. The youngster was placed in a high chair while Mrs. Gerig was reading, and in some way worked itself out under the table and fell to the floor. Injuries were such that the little fellow was unconscious for about an hour. Monday he started vomiting, but today is feeling better and smiles. Dr. DeMuth is taking care of the baby and it is hoped nothing serious may result.

The St. Joe fellow who always looks ahead, had better give a thought to the rear view mirror now and then.

In Chicago the ladies decided to call off the contest naming the town's glamour boy. Think what some fellow is missing!

There are going to be some mighty cold toes in St. Joe this Winter from the looks of the new foot wear.

Our biggest problem, after reading propaganda, is to find out what is the truth.

There are some folks who are so desirous of peace they will celebrate Thanksgiving on both the 23rd and 30th.

A nation chuckles over some women tourists buying cockle burrs for porcupine eggs. Anything for a laugh in these days!

Is there any comfort in the thought that you aren't cheated if you are aware you are being cheated?

What those countries need over there are some folks like the early settlers who came from there over here a long time ago.

A St. Joe sage says the best way to make friends is to just listen.

A movie magazine takes an awful risk appearing a month in advance with their marriage dope.

A doctor writes for his medical magazine that work on the farm is dangerous. Yeah, and so is crossing the street in the city, or taking a bath in a bath tub.

Now that Winter is almost upon us, it is about time for stores to start displaying Spring hats.

DID YOU KNOW?

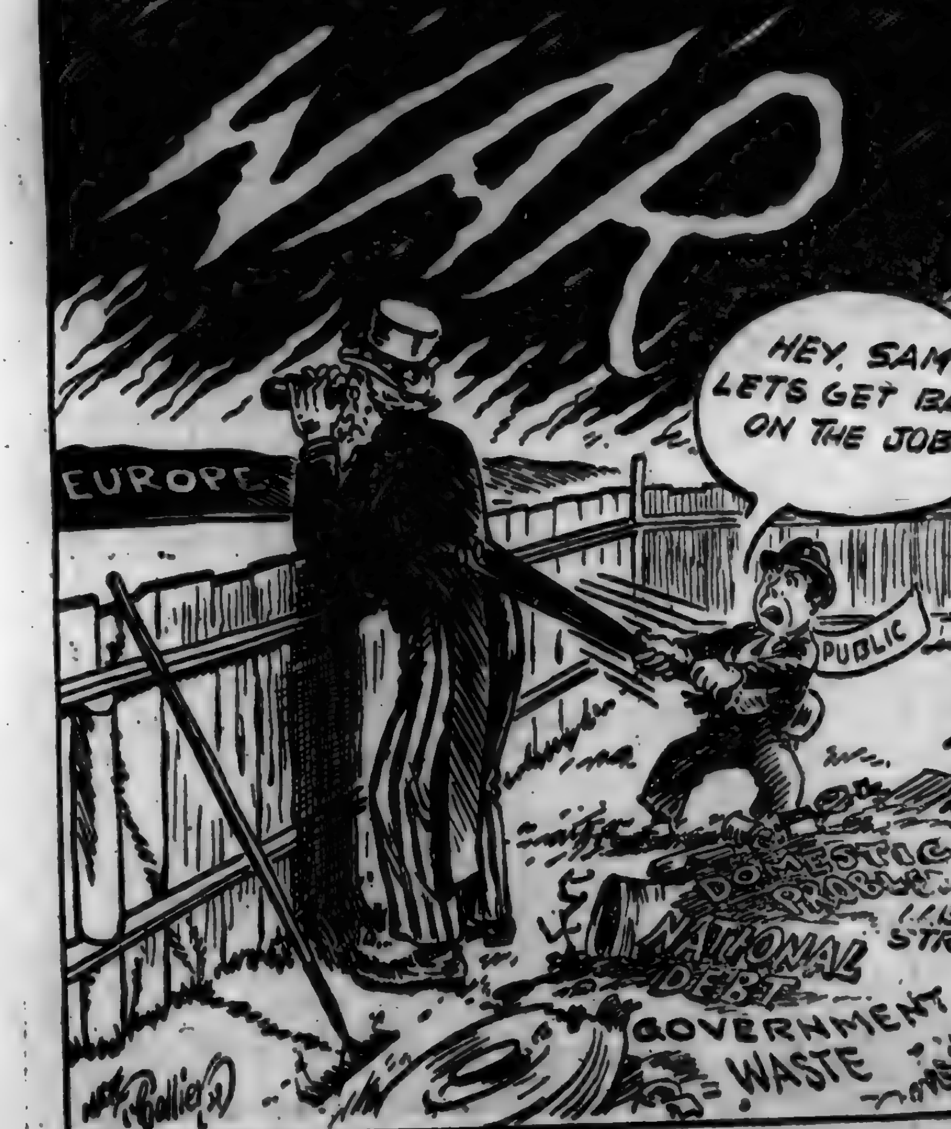
The 1940 aspects for a big time in the automobile business are reaching this desk daily with predictions as to beauty, price, durability and so on. The manufacturers launch designs and advertising that fascinates us, even though many of the old models will remain in the family garages unmolested by enterprising salesmen.

Has it ever been brought to your attention that over fifty per cent of the auto dealers are in the small towns, that is in towns under ten thousand population? When you visit any metropolis and pass showroom after showroom, building after building, where autos are sold, you figure that most of the cars travelling the highway must come from the sales of the large cities. But the small town dealer is doing his share of the business and 69% of them are going to do a lot of business in 1940.

EVER ONWARD

It would be no easy matter to settle and adjust a million wandering people. We talk of these families uprooted by economical conditions, looking for a place to begin a new life, and the average News reader concludes we are discussing a foreign situation brought on by war conditions. This fact exists in our U. S. and the number is estimated by the American Humane Society. 330,000 families with no settled homes, only a few thousand of them being gypsies who are known as roamers. Too many children born on the roads, too many experiences depressing and discouraging to parents where wandering is their way. Many foreign problems demand out attention but this domestic one within our own country, the wealthiest nation in all the world, should be considered!

FIRST THINGS FIRST



COOLING OFF

Admiral Byrd makes plans to explore the Antarctic this Winter, hoping to claim new land for the United States. There will be somebody in St. Joe who will remark that we have a hard time taking care of the land we already own. But we are inclined to receive something if it doesn't cost us too much, and this looks like we might get something for practically nothing except the hardships and great endurance of the exploring company headed by the brave Rear Admiral Byrd! The fact that a five-gallon ice cream freezer is an item on the list of equipment for the Antarctic, is a feature of the expedition that we can't seem to appreciate. This ship was in Ft. Wayne Tuesday evening and was witnessed by thousands of people.

When Admiral Byrd arrives at the South Pole in a few weeks it may be that he will be called upon to carry out a formality of abandoning "Little America," inasmuch as the British are claiming that area of the South Polar region.

News reports are to the effect that the Byrd expedition, which is official and has the authorization of Congress, with appropriations sufficient to carry on work, will make claims to vast new areas of the frozen polar-regions where no other government has ever landed one of its citizens, or attempted to place its flag.

The expedition is bound to be an historic one, particularly because for the first time it will establish permanent stations, always to be occupied by American citizens.

It sounds like "looking far ahead" to think of the Antarctic as a place which in a few thousand years may grow trees, food and become habitable. But Byrd proved that it once was—all that—and likely will repeat, some day, sometime.

WONDERS OF ELECTRICITY

The telegraph was invented by Samuel F. B. Morse and Alfred Dail in their workshop at Morristown, New telephone communication existed, with gave a thrill to Washington and Baltimore when a message was telegraphed by code, between the latter two cities.

The original key used in the transmission of the first telegraph message is in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

It was nearly 50 years later before telephone communication existed, with a few optimistic subscribers in important centers like New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

The World was better prepared for wireless-telegraphy when Marconi was conducting his experiments 30 years ago, but there were very few optimists who had any faith in the predictions that have been fulfilled by radio.

Now comes television, which works successfully in limited areas.

Thousands of modern wonders are due to electricity, through which medium automobiles travel the earth, and airpalnes lift themselves high into the skies. Electrical supports that keep planes from falling will be next.

WORKING FOR UNCLE SAM

It is a little difficult to realise that nearly 950 thousand persons are employed in the executive branch of the United States Government. It keeps on going on and up, as shown by the U. S. Civil Service reports which indicate an increase in one recent month of 4,758 persons. The payroll for that month was $141,670,976, which was nearly three billion dollars more than in July.

In the breakdown the number of employes in the District of Columbia total 124,610, or about one out of every 5 of the entire population in Washington and those parts of Maryland and Virginia that are now being called "Greater Washington"—with a population of between 600 and 700 thousand persons.

The total number of Federal employes in the country as a whole, outside the District, are 808,343.

The Civil Service reported that on June 30, 1932, that there were 527,517 Government employes in the United States of which 69,960 were in the District of Columbia. When Hoover went out of office the total number of Government employes were less than 600 thousand.

The Tracy Heirloom

By EDNAMAE SMYTH

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

ANN NORTON turned from the telephone with a sigh. She had done a big washing for her numerous family, and was in the midst of the ironing, which she hoped to finish before supper time, when her Cousin Maud Adams called up. "Come right over. We're having a conference on the heirloom."

"I suppose somebody has made them another offer," Ann said to herself. "I don't see what they want of me. They never pay any attention to what I say. If they had they'd have got rid of that pesky old chair a long time ago. Maybe Washington did sit in it. But I'm privileged to have my doubts."

Four women were seated in Maud's softly lighted living room when Ann entered.

"Now we're all here together," she said to Ann. "Nell, Julia, Carrie, you and I, the principals in the case." She laughed. "And there's the heirloom." She pointed toward the ugly and honored chair. "Mr. Jones tells me he'll give five hundred for it."

"That makes one hundred apiece," said the greedy Carrie Mains. "I don't know as I want to sell out my interest for that."

"You'll never get any more," Maud returned sharply

"I paid to have it advertised in some of the best magazines," snapped Carrie.

"Pinfeathers on a humming-bird's wing!" Ann spoke softly. "Don't quarrel, girls. There have been hard feelings enough about the old thing already."

"You've never exerted yourself to sell it," Julia exclaimed hotly. "But I dare swear you'll take your hundred just the same. That's the Smith coming out in you, Ann Norton."

Ann flushed painfully at this scathing reference to her mother, who had dared to marry a Tracy although she was of no importance herself.

"Yes, I guess no one in your circumstances, Ann, is going to pass up a hundred dollars," sneered Nell Ogden.

Ann bit her lip. She was tired, she had left her work just to see a group of well-to-do women squabbling over an old chair that nobody had sat in for years.

Yes, she wanted that hundred dollars all right.

But something else looked bigger still, her pride, her self-respect, which was not all a Tracy inheritance. Maybe she hadn't lured prospective buyers or paid for advertisements or photographs, but she had taken off four coats of black paint that obscured the chair's glory and pieced the little patchwork cushion which looked as natural as if it had grown there.

She stood up quietly but firmly.

"I've got to go," she said. "Settle it to suit yourselves. I don't want that hundred dollars. You're welcome to my share in the heirloom."

"If you feel that way—" Julia murmured. She looked meaningly at Maud, who added coldly: "Just as you feel about it, of course." While Carrie and Nell exchanged a wink. Twenty-five dollars apiece extra wasn't to be sneezed at.

Ann had got half-way home when she missed her purse. She remembered that she had left it upon the sofa where she had been seated. She hesitated about going back after it then, but it held all the money she had.

As Ann mounted the steps of the Adams house she saw that Maud was admitting a caller, a man, stout, very stout, decidedly prosperous in his appearance. She recognized him. It was Will Owen, who had gone to school with all of them, whom she hadn't seen in years.

He saw her almost as quickly as she saw him. He grabbed her hand, pulled her into the house. There was a tremendous flutter. For Will Owen was a rich bachelor. Instead of gazing at the spinster Carrie or the widow Julia he kept his eye on Ann.

"My gracious!" he wheezed. "You haven't changed a mite."

"Considering how fat and blowzy Ann is I don't call that much of a compliment for the rest of us," Julia said, giving Will a playful push. As he started back from her, he skidded on the slippery floor and sat down with a bang in the nearest chair—the Washington chair. It crushed like an eggshell under him.

"My gracious!" he groaned. "What have I done?" Then as his agonized glance swept the faces of the women who stood frozen with consternation—"I hope," he muttered, "it isn't an heirloom."

"It—was," breathed Ann. Then frightened, she snatched up her purse and ran out of the house.

Ann's invitation to dinner was the only one Will Owen accepted. Julia, Nell, Carrie and Maud all asked him but he declined. He did, however, send each one of them a costly chair to take the place of the one he had shattered. Ann was delighted with her chair, no matter how her cousins felt about theirs. And she felt a bit wickedly, perhaps, that now the famous heirloom was out of the way they should be better friends than they ever had been.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

The tumult and the shouting which comes from abroad has almost drowned out the eloquence of Capitol Hill, but those accustomed to search the papers for details will note that Congress still is in session, and still busied with the neutrality matter. The leaders on both sides feel that by the first of November, the fire of debate will have burned itself out, and perhaps a vote will be of record by that date. A large armful of fuel was added to the burning pile when a Senator stated flatly that the allies must win. Upon the whole the discussion has brought forward very little in the way of new food for thought.

The records have it that back in the old days, an hour glass stood in legislitave halls and other places where public speakers did their duty. It was a common thing to have the glass turned several times before the message came to an end. Paul spoke at Troas "until midnight," and a young man named Eutychus went to sleep and fell out a window. No doubt aforetime audiences expected their money's worth and generally got it. At present, hearers have a warm spot in their hearts for orators who can boil it down, but there is still room for improvement. It is reported that Senator Rufus C. Holman, of Oregon, had his say on repeal of the embargo in two minutes by the clock. He is the herald of a better and a brighter day.

The President's proclamation barring the submarines of warring nations from ports of the United States, saving in the instance of accidents not the result of conflict, is a move in the right direction. A submarine has no utility apart from war. There is every reason for tightening down upon their activities in the interest of neutrality. One cannot assume that the President has said the last word, or that he will be the final arbiter, but at least he has made a start, and has given the world a foundation upon which a structure of sound discussion, if nothing more, can be erected.

The British have held up American ships, taken off mail intended for Germany, and censored and returned it. General Washington once refused to receive from Britain, communications which failed to recognize his standing as commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the United States. Although not precisely alike, the situations are analogous. Thus the British have balanced to their own advantage one item of that old Revolutionary War account, even though they show no particular concern about the state of the World War ledger.

The treaty effected between Turkey, France and England was not received kindly in Berlin, and the Fatherland has "warned" the Turks. Though perhaps not an authoritative and formel notice, Turkey has been given to understand that she is in a position to receive what Poland got. Middle-aged persons can remember the day when the papers had much to say about the "terrible Turk." The center of the traffic in terror seems to have shifted northward from Constantinople.

At a dinner in Tokyo, Ambassador Joseph C. Grow announced that the United States looked with high disfavor on the bombings, indignities and manifold interferences with American interests in China, due to Japanese operations there. The attitude of the United States was stated fairly by Mr. Grow. Though not to be construed as a threat, this country is entitled to point out in friendly but straight forward words, that there are bounds beyond which a war of conquest cannot go, either in the Orient or in Europe.

The Duke of Windsor, having rested in the obscurity of an unwelcome retirement, has come to the "front," literally as well as in a figurative sense, in that he is upon the battle line of France. Few monarchs have been so well liked as he; by the world at large, right up to the present time, and in his own land until a few years ago. If the war accomplishes nothing else, it may serve to rehabilitate a friendly gentleman, for whom there should be nothing but good wishes, and toward whom there should be nothing but good will.

BIG LIVE STOCK SHOW PLANNED FOR CHICAGO

Predictions that all previous records for number of entries will be broken are made by the management of the International Live Stock Exposition for this year's show, which will be held at the Chicago Stock Yards December 2 to 9.

According to B. H. Heide, secretary-manager of the exposition, the early entry is the heaviest it has ever been and more than the usual number of stockmen have made inquiries relative to listing exhibits.

$100,000 in Prizes

More than $100,000 will be awarded to stockmen in cash prizes. The premiums will be spread over competition for 30 different breeds of cattle, horses, sheep and swine, which will total well over 12,000 head.

An unusually large showing of Canadian live stock is expected this year, officials of the show state, owing to the cancellation of the Fall Fairs in Canada this year. In recent years, all provinces of the Dominion have been strongly represented in both the livestock and crops divisions of the exposition.

Entries for the purebred and individual fat stock classes of the exposition will be accepted until November 1st, he says; and for the International Grain and Hay Show, the largest annual showing of corn, small grain, seeds and hay in the country, exhibits may be entered until November 20.

Distant Lands Exhibit

Among the first entries to be received for this year's crops show are samples of wheat from Argentina and Australia, the latter consisting of first prize winning wheat from the Sidney agricultural show last Spring. It will be the first time that South America will be represented.

The Exposition will be staged in the huge International Amphitheatre, situated at the east entrance to the Chicago Stock Yards. It includes a central conliseum with seats for 7,500 and adjoining display areas encompassing six acres.

A large crowd was in St. Joe Saturday night. The free pictures were shown in the Zonker Motor Sales room and it made a fine place.

LOG
UNITED STATES
MARINES

SWORD OF TRADITION

Mameluke swords are the traditional blades worn by officers of the Marine Corps. Nowadays they are rarely used in battle, as the use of automatic pistols and trench warfare have changed certain principles of combat, and the use of swords as weapons is rapidly becoming obsolete.

But the Mameluke still remains as a side-arm of the sea soldiers, and is used for parades or ceremonies or for formal military affairs. The fighting Mamelukes, after whom it was named, were prominent in Egyptian military history for more than 500 years.

Marine officers of Revolutionary days apparently used any type of sword they preferred, or could secure. It was not until 1804 that the Secretary of the Navy issued orders for a "yellow-mounted sabre" to be carried by officers of the Corps.

At the close of the war with the Barbary States early in the last century, Lieutenant Presley N. O'Bannon, of the Marines, returned from the Shores of Tripoli with a handsome sword of the Mameluke type. The State of Virginia presented him with a similar blade. Many believed that O'Bannon's heroic exploits helped to make the sword popular in the Corps.

It was not until 1825, however, that the Mameluke was mentioned in Marine Corps regulations, and it appears to have been worn thereafter for about thirty--four years. Then the Corps adopted the army type blade, returning in 1875 to the Mameluke pattern, virtually the same as that worn by them today.

Topped with a Mameluke grip, which is fashioned somewhat like that of an old-style duelling pistol, the sword has a rather thin, slightly curved blade, 28 to 32 inches long, with a straight cross guard. The name of its owner as well as the words "United States Marines" are usually inscribed on its blade.

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Any person who drives a car or truck with poor brakes is violating one of the very first rules of safety. He may live to regret it.

It reminds me of the story of the farmer and his son who were working in a field where a crew from the power company was repairing damage done by a previous storm. Abner, the farmer's son, while fussing around the operations, got hold of a live wire. His father yelled to him, "Put that down, Abner. It don't belong to you." But Abner couldn't let go of the live wire.

Poor brakes put you in the same position. You want to stop and apply the brakes, but they fail to hold and the result may be a serious accident and possibly death.

It's smart to Drive Carefully.

NEW LAW RESTRICTS SETTING OF TRAPS

While Indiana's open season for the taking of fur-bearing animals does not begin in the Northern Zone until November 15, and in the Southern Zone until November 25, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, today called attention to provisions of a 1939 law which provides that no traps or parts of traps shall be set more than twelve hours in advance of the opening of the trapping season.

This statute provides: "It shall be unlawful for any person to make any set or place any part of a trap, including chain, stake, or drag, for taking raccoon, opossum, skunk, mink, or muskrat before noon of the day preceding the first day of the open season. Proof that any part of the trap, including the trap itself, stake, chain, or drag was set or placed before noon of the day preceding the first day of the open season on raccoon, opossum, skunk, mink, or muskrat, shall be deemed prima facie evidence of violation of this section."

NATIONAL COMMANDER STRESSES ARMISTICE DAY'S SIGNIFICANCE

A message by Raymond J. Kelly, National Commander, The American Legion, calling for a nationwide observance of Armistice Day, 1939, as an occasion for demonstrating America's love of peace.

To the World War veterans of the United States, Armistice Day is an anniversary for rejoicing and thanksgiving. Our America has given us that day as a National Holiday—and in the past has rejoiced with us in its observance.

In The American Legion we have noted, with sorrow, the development of a feeling that is expressed in the idea that it is futile to celebrate the anniversary of a day that closed the first World War—a war which was to have ended all wars, but failed of its purpose.

But we in The American Legion—representing more than four million men and women who served in the armed forces of the United States during the first World War—feel more deeply about the observance of this Armistice Day than at any time since 1918.

The penalties paid in dead and maimed in that war were dedicated to the purpose of ending that conflict. It was a duty ardently and determinedly performed. It was the glory of American arms, called in defense of an ideal, that shone forth on the fields of France.

The false ideologies came afterward, and in their train came the dictator who ground down man's individual rights in other lands. But the glory that symbolizes America's greatness as a Nation remains untarnished. The American who was "hurried into eternity in the Springtime of youth" did not make that sacrifice in vain. The God given rights of man are still the supreme law of the land here in our Nation.

The American Legion remembers Armistice Day each year as a privileged time to renew his pledge to the World War dead—a pledge to keep the faith. We honor a sacrifice worthy of their heroism. While we yet remain, there shall be no denial of that privilege.

In that spirit I urge all elements of our population, veteran and non-veteran, to aid in rallying a united Nation on this coming Armistice Day. Let all of us join in making clear that we are determined to adhere to a positive program of peace for the United States.

Today, The American Legion has a rendezvous with destiny—a destiny completely interwoven with the future of the country we love. In asking all communities to join with us in a serious observance of the true significance of this Armistice Day, The American Legion pledges you its strength in return. It will promote constructive efforts for peace in the most vigorous manner possible.

On this Armistice Day let all our voices ring out to tell the World that so far as our Nation is concerned, the World War did end on that chill November morning in France twenty-one years ago.

Yes St. Joe will observe Armistice Day. High School Band will parade with Legionnaires and citizens assisting. 11 o'clock is the time. Lutheran Church lawn, the place.

Armistice Day dinner in the evening at Legion Hall. Pot luck for Ex-Service men and families. You fellows, you served come on out and meet with Buddies.

TO CHECK POULTRY THEFTS IN INDIANA

State police in Auburn Monday stated that a check of all counties in the state reveals the fact that few poultry dealers are observing the Indiana regulations governing dealing in poultry.

Briefly, the law requires that any person, firm, or corporation desiring to engage in the business of purchasing poultry in this state must apply at the clerk's office of the Circuit Court of any county for a poultry dealer's license.

Any person, firm, or corporation licensed to deal in poultry must keep a record in duplicate, open to the public for inspection, showing number of fowls bought, variety purchased, weight in pounds, post office address of seller and date of purchase, with signature of person from whom the poultry was purchased.

Any person, firm, or corporation who buys for re-sale any poultry, alive or dressed, must ascertain as nearly as possible whether the seller is in lawful possession of the poultry and must take registration number of motor vehicle in which the poultry was delivered; and have the seller sign his name and address on the poultry record of sale.

Duplicate copies of all purchases are to be filed with the sheriff of the county in which the purchase was made at least once each week.

A check of the entire state is being made by the state police with the assistance of the sheriff of each county to see that the poultry laws are beind adhered to by all dealers and the officers hope in this way to greatly decrease the theft of poultry in Indiana.

They point out that only 10 per cent of stolen poultry is recovered and that poultry thefts are a serious problem for farmers and the police.

WILLIAMS-SEEMAN NUPTIALS

The lovely Autumn wedding of Mrs. Carolyn Davidson Williams, and Mr. William J. Seeman was solemnized at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, October 14, in the Little Chapel of the Dawn at Santa Monica, California, with the Reverend Clifford B. Holand, officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Donald R. Davidson, was attired in a sapphire blue velvet gown with matching hat and veil. She carried a white prayer book with a white orchid and lilies of the valley knotted in streamers of white ribbon.

Attending the bride as maid of honor, Miss Gertrude Jerry, wore a pale, grape taffeta dress with harmonizing flower hat of grape and wine tones. Mitzi Williams, lovely daughter of the bride, as Junior bridesmaid, wore a dusty pink frock with matching heart shaped hat of flowers. Each carried bouquets of pink roses.

Mr. Joseph Meyers served as best man and acting as ushers were Mr Robert S. Kemp and Charles C. Compton, Jr.

The entire ceremony was recorded by Radio Tone and has the distinction of being the first wedding to be recorded in this manner. This was a complete surprise to the bride as well as her friends and was presented as such at the reception held at the home of the bride in Westwood Village following the wedding.

The lawn was a veritable movie set as the scene of many moving pictures and "close ups" of the entire wedding party and guests.

Immediately after the reception, the couple departed for a several weeks trip to Mexico City. The bride wore a deep, brown dress with a fur lined hood and moss green accessories for her traveling ensemble.

Upon their return, they will reside in Beverly Hills, California.

You can't believe much a fellow says when he insists he is the boss of his family.

There is a binding tie between father and son, and usually son is wearing it.

Will two Thanksgiving days be enough for this country that is so grateful that the Pilgrim Fathers found her on this side of the ocean?

What perfume smells as sweet as the aroma from a cellar that is stored for the Winter?

Fortunately for many of us the fellow who smokes the strongest pipes usually is a lover of the great outdoors.

We stop to consider all the trouble there is in this world, but how often do we halt to consider all the joy there is in it, too?

Any smart girl in St. Joe can tell you that a hundred rings on the telephone don't mean always one ring on the finger.

TRADING ON IT

With the difficulty arising over the changing of Thanksgiving we are made aware of the commercializing of almost every holiday that Americans celebrate. Editors do not score increased business to manufacturers and merchants, they too profit from the trade at such times. But it is best to face the fact that perhaps we have become too commercial for our own good.

Easter and Christmas, our most religious of days, are greatly commercialized, with Mother's, Memorial and Arbor Days a boon to florists and nurserymen. The Glorious Fourth and Labor Day come in for their share of money making with increased traffic in gasoline and travel tickets. The honored birthdays of our famous statesmen add to the ring of the cash register and what a difference all these holidays make to the balance sheet of business houses!

Along comes the changing of the Thanksgiving date when 23 states will observe the day on November 23, and 23 other states on November 30. There have been wide-spread remarks regarding the act from a political angle, and horrified gasps considering the change to help the Christmas trade. "Commercializing Thanksgiving!" There is nothing unusual in this aspect however else we may consider the move. There is no way of avoiding this matter of trading in on the name. We commercialize our food products, churches commercialize with suppers and bazaars, schools with football games. Is it possible to avoid commercializing, even if folks wanted to do so?

NO CIRCUS

A recent announcement by the management of a circus company in Germany, tells us that elephants and camels, are being trained to replace tractors on many Germany farms. It is supposed to be a solution to a problem in rural Germany where exists a situation that calls for replacement of labor. Maybe this will solve the problem and the animals work to the advantage of farmer and state. But we do not take the news too seriously for too many astounding bits of information of Germany's solutions have we received. But one thing we have heard in St. Joe that we repeat for Nazi benefit, "an elephant never forgets."

DO NOT FORGET

Our legal public holiday, Armistice Day, celebrated the eleventh of November through proclamation issued by the President, reaches us this year when it will be most solemnly observed by the nation. It asks that we the people, observe the occasion in "schools and churches or other suitable places, with appropriate ceremonies." The most fitting observance, by those who have not forgotten the first Armistice Day, is with heart-felt prayers for our protection against the turmoil that writhes on the door-step of Europe. We beseech for help in averting a danger that might engulf St. Joe, and we ask for assistance in preventing the need of additional days of armistice for the future.

SELF-HELP

Here in DeKalb County we like to hear of cases where help and understanding is given young people through worthy projects sponsored by adults with an insight to the needs of youth. In many cases outside aid is necessary to continue in school. One woman in Michigan worked out a farm project where 25 students have continued education through farming a few acres of potatoes, planting onions and raising turkeys. The youths repay the loan and earn money for school needs. The crops are planted to give the enterprising youngsters a chance for an education. Every act such as this, worked out by an understanding citizen, deserves recognition and praise.

A MATTER OF OPINION

There are many readers of The News who disagree about the article printed in a medical journal concerning the hazards of farming. The study was made by a doctor who reports that about 50% of the accidents happening on the farm occur in the barnyard or barn. From his report, "Farming is an exceedingly dangerous occupation." This is true to an extent, but statistics show that more accidents occur in the home itself, and this would appear that housekeeping would also be a dangerous occupation. It seems to us that any sort of work of small consequence even, would be dangerous if carelessness is a part of it. Caution is a factor necessary in whatever endeavor one might undertake and certainly farming is no exception. Consider the newsprint to ascertain the number of accidents that occur on the farms and you will not find so many incidents that you will consider farming dangerous. The handling of farm implements, of farm animals, may tend to be of a dangerous nature at times, but these are not frequent enough accidents to appall the reader as he scans his paper. Care and caution will avoid farm mishaps the same as the casualties occurring in homes and on highways, in manufacturing plants and business offices.

LIGHTING THEIR BUSHELS

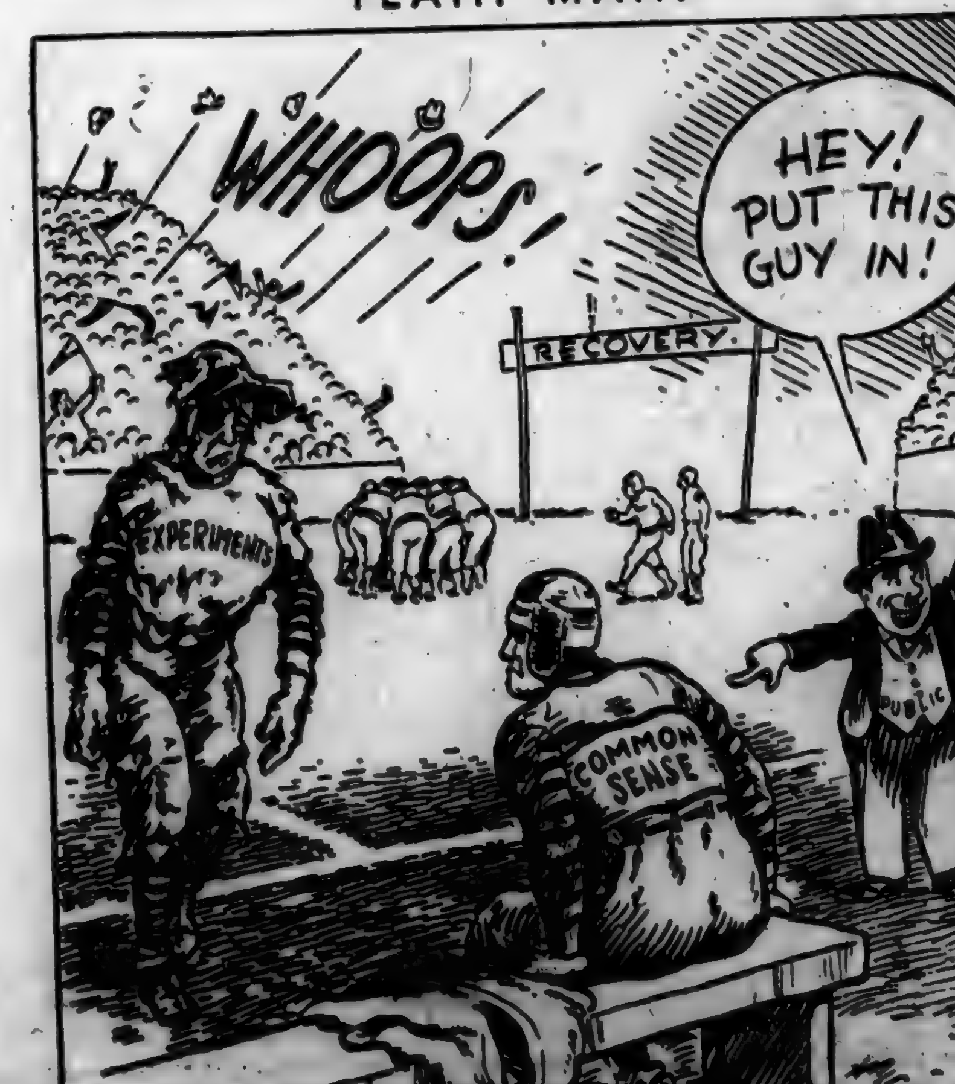
We go from the World Series to foot ball as the big attraction and tune in or attend the events with great anticipation of witnessing real sport. The month of November brings to the attention of The News fans another performance that calls for action with a capital A. That is the National Corn Husking Contest when twenty men from ten major corn-producing states, start down a field more than five hundred yards long and six corn rows wide, to bring the title of champion home to the farm.

The husker waits for the bomb to start the task of shucking, two rows at a time in eighty minutes of real he-man labor that calls for speed, action, tension and endurance. The average husker loses between six and eleven pound per man during the eigthy minutes of work. Tractors follow him and he plunks the ears of corn against the bangboards sometimes at the rate of fifty or more a minute. Nothing stops this contest as hundreds of thousands of people swarm over the field as each contestant moves down the line. It is November and chilly but the husker is sopping wet, his clothes stick to him and his brow drips sweat. But he has kept in condition for the game and can take it! The majority of huskers are veterans and when you shuck fifty ears a minute for eighty minutes you are really a veteran. The event is important enough to be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up for this most thrilling and action-packed event and the hero deserves as many cheers as hall from gridiron and diamond. They deserve to hide their light under as many bushels as they can shuck.

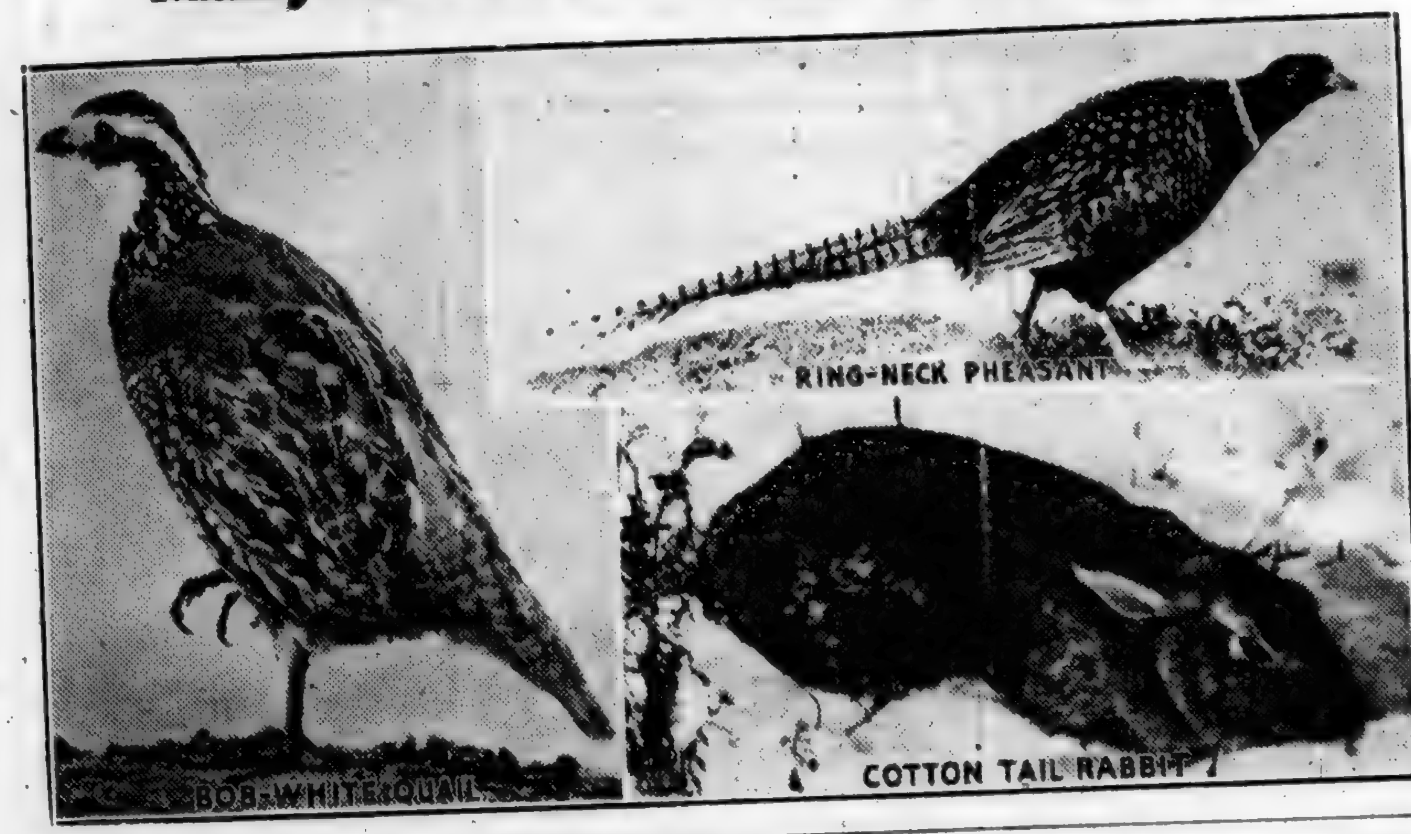
TOUGH JOB!

We received a letter the other day in which the writer implored us "do every-thing you can to keep the President out of war."

YEAH! MAN!



Rabbits, Quail and Cock Pheasants to Attract Many Hoosier Nimrods November 10



A record-number of Hoosier nimrods will take to the fields Friday, November 10 for the opening of the 1939 hunting season, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, predicted today.

Cottontail rabbits, Bob-White Quail and cock pheasants will provide sport for the army of hunters in all parts of the state while in some areas the nimrids will also have a chance to add Hungarian partridge to their bag. Hen pheasants, prarie chicken, wild turkey, ruffed grouse, chukar partridge and doves are protected by law.

Hoosier hunters must observe a daily bag limit of ten rabbits during the open season which begins November 10 and ends January 10, 1940; a daily bag limit of 10 quail during the season which extends from November 10 to December 20; a daily bag limit of five Hungarian partridge in the season from November 10 to December 20, and a daily bag limit of two cock pheasants in the six days of hunting—November 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, and 16.

Indiana laws provide that all hunters must have a license. (issued by county clerks and agents at a fee of $1.50) and must have this license in their possession while hunting. It is a violation of the law to hunt on the lands of another without permission; to shoot game birds or animals along, upon or across any public highway; to hunt or shoot rabbits with or by means of an artificial light; to use or possess a silencer while hunting; and to buy or sell any quail, Hungarian partridge, pheasant, ruffed grouse, prairie chicken or chukar partridge.

Reports indicate a greater abundance of quail, rabbits and pheasants in most parts of the state this year than at the opening of the hunting season in any recent year. Favorable weather conditions during the breeding and nesting seasons, the liberation of approximately a hundred thousand quail and pheasants, and progress in providing better food and shelter conditions for wild-life, are credited with this increase.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

When heavy federal expenditures are present or in prospect, the specter that walks most frequently before the eyes of the general public is increased taxes. There is ground for apprehension. According to the adage, nothing is so sure as death and taxes. It is simply a matter of asking and receiving, since, the government has a highly effective method of coercion should the request happen to fall upon a deaf ear.

Mr. John W. Hanes, of the United States Treasury, speaking in New York City, affords a grain of comfort in the age-old conflict with the tax collector. It seems that even his powers have metes and bounds. According to Mr. Hanes, no matter how drastic the tax levy, the federal income cannot be brought up to the federal outlay by that means. The remedy lies in an uptrend in business, and in putting the unemployed to work. Just how that can be done remains to be determined, but the statement of the Treasury official justifies at least a sigh of relief.

There are a number of things that never fail to attract attention. One is the falling of a tree, and another the launching of a ship. There was more than one request for an hour off back in 1920, when the steamer City of Flint slid off the ways at Wyandotte, Michigan, into the waters of the Detroit River. Probably it was expected that she would pursue the even tenor of her way during a useful and uneventful life, through the waters of the Inland Seas, and end her days conventionally in a Great Lakes boneyard. No one could have foretold that the career of the City of Flint was to include an international incident.

Having been impounded in a Russian port, and then turned over to the Reich, the vessel will be returned to the custody of the United States only in the event that a German prize court decides that such a course is proper. Offhand, that is a procedure which is somewhat dampening to the dignity of the U. S. A.

Scintillating patriotic indignation aside, and admitting that Russia and Germany are in the wrong, possibly the case of the City of Flint affords no reason why boys from Iowa should take their places on the battle line of Europe. Anyhow, the State Department, although actively inquiring, is not urging that the country should be put upon a war footing. To the soberly thinking average mind, it seems as though the owners of the craft simply took a business man's risk, which did not turn out well, and that the populace owes them no more than that the Europeans should be given a liberal measure of diplomatic "sass."

Who is to blame for the War? The Pope has placed the blame by implication if not directly, at the German door. His conclusions are not without support in other non-combatant quarters. The Germans would have it that they are a patient people, goaded beyond endurance and forced to defend themselves against English aggression. The view of Britain is well known. It seems that a huge-scale game of Button, Button, Who's Got the Button is going on. Germany may be able to whitewash herself, but she will have to look for a large brush, a deep pail, and a workman who does not insist on union hours.

Te Senate repeal of the arms embargo did not come as a great surprise. Prompt action along the same line in the House is promised but not assured. The Allies are pleased. Germany says that the repeal will move her to greater activity. If the measure becomes law, it may at least serve to bring matters more quickly to a head. The Senate action can hardly be claimed as a victory for the Administration, although it is referred to as such. The President's promptings started the ball rolling, but there was a widespread opinion that repeal was in order, before the views of the President were announced: yet probably in the absence of White House approval, the old order would not have been disturbed.

Fire.. on schedule

Do you know that 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies maintain a nationwide organization to survey cities and towns so that dangerous fire hazards may be discovered and corrected? Such a survey of fire hazards and fire-fighting facilities in a certain mid-western city a few years ago called attention to an important business district and warned:

A fire in any one of the large area buildings could readily assume conflagration proportions and, under adverse conditions, involve the greater portion of the block.

A later report repeated this warning. Unfortunately, the remedies suggested were not taken. Early this year, fire broke out in a department store in this very block. Within 2½ hours most of the block was in ruins . . . with a property loss of over $750,000. Worse, stores lost valuable business, employees lost jobs, and this in turn meant lost business to other stores.

These surveys are made without charge. It is one of many similar "plus" services that do not appear in your capital stock company fire insurance policy. Fortunately, community officials usually use the findings to make their communities safer. And because of these and other efforts by these insurance companies, it has been possible to steadily lower the average fire insurance rate for many years.

The open season for pheasants which extends from November 10 to 16 this year applies only to cock birds and the hen pheasants are protected by law. An impression has been found in some parts that there would be an open season on hen pheasants this year. The state's first open season on cock pheasants was in 1936. That original two-day season has been lengthened gradually without any apparant damage to the pheasant stock, until this year six days of pheasant hunting has been authorised.

COPP

With the passing of Mrs. Anna Alice Copp, Sunday morning, at the Columbia City Hospital, following a stroke on Monday morning, October 30, St. Joe has lost another of its highly respected citizens.

She was born August 15, 1865, and departed this life November 5, 1939 at the age of 74 years, 2 months, and 20 days. On September 22, 1883, she was married to Abner Copp, who preceded her in death on October 25, 1919.

To this union were born two daughters, Mrs. Vera Stout, of Fort Wayne; Mrs. Flossie Widney, of Columbia City; one son, Jesse Copp, who resides at New Haven. One step-son, Ora Copp, of Hamilton, also survives. There were four grandchildren, Blanch Vernell Jacobs, Fort Wayne; Melba Joan Copp, New Haven; Russell Copp, Hamilton, and Eloise May Widney, deceased.

The funeral services were conducted from the Kinsey funeral home, Tuesday afternoon with Rev. Robert Treat, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiating, and burial was made in Riverside Cemetery.

Since the passing of Mr. Copp in 1919, Mrs. Copp kept her home in St. Joe, leaving for a few weeks in the Winter months to be with her daughters. No other place was home, because she had lived in St. Joe for these many years, where she and her husband had built their home.

Mrs. Copp was very active up to the morning she was stricken, and had been working at the Widney Orchard where she had assisted for the past 25 years in the sorting of the apple crop. She will be missed about St. Joe by many of its citizens.

Doctor Townsend Says......

THE two greatest democratic rights of the American people are freedom of the press and speech. Paraphrasing Voltaire, we must defend the right of a citizen or any group of citizens to express a viewpoint, regardless of our own objections to that view. That is democracy.

The recent act of the National Association of Broadcasters, owners of radio stations, in barring from the airlanes paid programs which the broadcasters themselves deem "controversial" clearly abrogates the privilege of free speech. Our democratic senses revolt against any form of censorship, and especially that censorship established by a private industry which controls a public service.

FINDS BREAD AND MOLASSES IS A REMEDY FOR ANEMIA

Bread and molasses is one of the best remedies for nutritional anemia in children, Massachusetts Institute of Technology announced after a series of experiments.

The department of Biology and Public Health said that molasses, a rich, easily available and inexpensive source of food iron, compares favorably with chemical injections used for anemic persons.

Experiments showed that bread and molasses had a higher content of "usable iron" than even beef liver. It ranked far ahead of the previously highly-rated spinach. In fact, the scientists said, so much "usable iron" is present that the body cannot absorb all of it in building hemoglobin—the red coloring matter in blood corpuscles.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Much has been said about safe driving. Many lessons have been read, and also many lessons have been learned through bitter experience, disappointment, accident, and death.

The lesson of safety when once learned thoroughly should stick with us like our shadow. It should become a part of us like our arms or our legs.

Let's adapt these safety methods we read and hear about. It doesn't cost anything. The main job is to make up our minds once and for all that we will drive safely, and then stick to the resolution.

It's Smart to Drive Carefully!

ODE TO AUTUMN

A time for dreams and reveries,
When hasy Autumn skies
Hang o'er faded landscape,
Where dying verdure lies.
No more fragrant blossoms fill the air with their sweetness,
No more warbling songsters thrill our hearts with their music—
Only the Autumn winds,
Over the dead leaves sighing:
All the beautiful Summer—
Dying,
Dying,
Dying.

A time for thougths of loved ones,
When a pale, Autumnal moon
Shines into eyes that wonder,
Why our joys must fade so soon.
May dreams of Summer sunshine gild Wintry hours with brightness!
Like hopes—tho oft-times shattered—imbue our lives with sweetness.
How sadly the South wind whispers,
While over the dead leaves, sighing!
All the beautiful Summer—
Dying,
Dying,
Dying.

—Mrs. Meade Baker.

It never takes as long to find something unpleasant to say as it does something complimentary.

What has happened to the rumor that this fellow isn't Hitler but a man who looks like him?

Too many luxuries have become necessities in a number of homes.

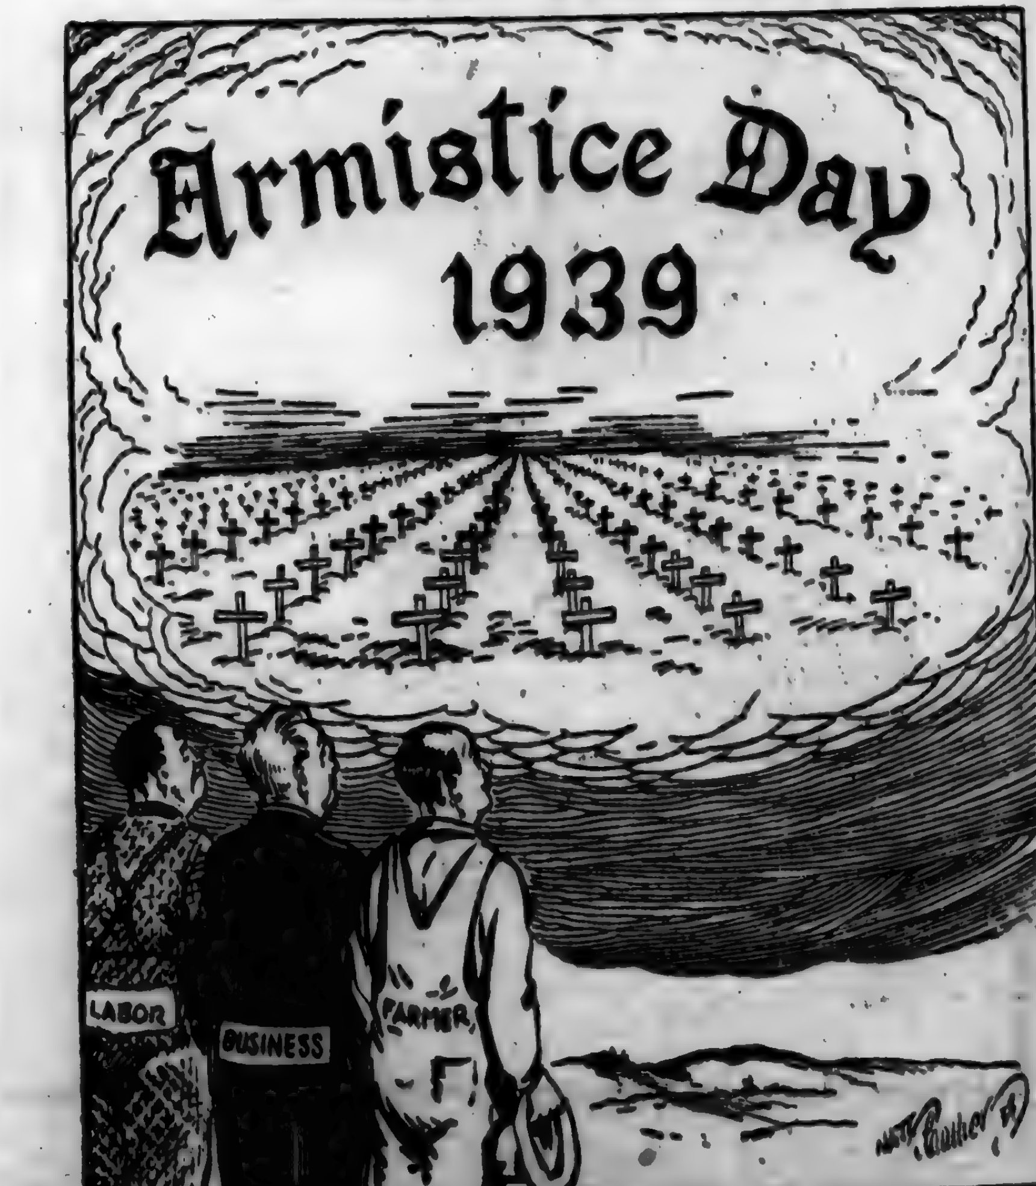
MORE ABOUT IT

Each issue of the paper brings to readers of The News new data concerning the much discussed celebrating of Thanksgiving on different days in varied states. The most recent idea is the one propounded in a Wisconsin county where Thanksgiving is to be commemorated for eight days, from November 23 through to November 30. It wouldn't hurt any of us to remain thankful for eight days in a row and after all, those who celebrate on Nov. 23 will probably still be eating turkey leftovers on the 30th.

FOR REMEMBRANCE

The Girl Scout national convention brought forth a splendid exhibition of over 100 samplers. From all parts of the country and each with its original pattern these samplers were judged. Some of them were on linen woven and wools dyed by the young needlewomen. Our vote goes to this organization for furthering an interest in the old art that dates way back beyond the days of our greatgrandmothers. We cherish those samplers made by our ancestors not only for their material value, but because we are a very sentimental people. We think of the hands that moved over the linen, the needle that was guided up and down as the colors and figures took form. Each old sampler weaves a personality in its threads.

A TIMELY REMINDER



WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

With the embargo repeal passed and Congress adjourned, the nation will have to sit down and await the next new thrill. Efforts to prolong the session for the transaction of other business failed. Considering the seriousness of the subject matter, the legislators made good time. It may be suspected, however, that if it had not been for the City of Flint incident, the debate would have been drawn out much longer and perhaps either the text of the law, or the vote, or both, would have been different from what is now a matter of record.

The request of Mr. Dies that his committee be continued until January, 1942, should be granted by Congress. The large amount of un-American activity smoke that has been long visible, has given rise to the belief that there was a fire somewhere. The work of the committee has changed that belief into a certainty. There are those who say that they will "have that Dies so thoroughly discredited in a few months that the people in Texas will ride him out on a rail." Mr. Dies has provided many uncomfortable rail seats for those whose Americanism is to be questioned. The rail on which he is to make an exit has not been brought forward, nor will it be.

The English are disturbed by the fact they have been rationed as to butter and bacon. On theoretical grounds, the regulation is condemned because it creates a feeling of uncertainty regarding the food supply. Practically, the English miss the hog meat. Esau traded his birthright for a mess of "pottage," perhaps the despised spinach. The demands of the digestive tract are not to be overlooked. Orators would have it that patriotism is a matter of the heart. It will not do to put the stomach too far in the background.

The United States temporarily is in the bad graces of Russia; first on account of the rapid progress made by the repeal of the embargo, and second because of alleged meddling by the President in the Finnish situation. The Soviet Union declared itself ready to sell to anyone who would buy. It is said that the relations between the United States and Cuba are not essentially different from those of Russia and Finland. If ever a war was prosecuted for purely altruistic reasons, it was the Spanish-American conflict, carried on by the United States in order that another and a smaller nation might be free. Russia has some task on her hands when she attempts to convince the world that her aim is to make a self-governed Cuba out of Finland.

According to Mother Goose, "the King of France, with ten thousand men, marched them up hill and marched them down again." Mr. Hitler seems to be in much the same position. He cannot break the Maginot Line. He does not dare repeat a fatal World War mistake and take a short cut thru Belgium or Holland. Air raids are not the easily consummated affairs they were a quarter of a century ago. It is possible that the Leader, in spite of his power at home, is beginning to feel the pressure of a constituency forced to sacrifice in order to maintain a huge army, with nothing for it to do.

Although letting out a cabinet member does not mean so much in Europe as in the United States, when four such officials at once are deprived of their portfolios, it is safe to assume that there is something in the wind. Mr. Mussolini parted company with a group of his ministers who were strong on the axis proposition, replacing them with men known to be pledged to neutrality. A wise statesman will not urge one war too rapidly on the heels of another. The African conquest was an affair of no great magnitude, but it was a war nevertheless. Sound policy suggests a breathing spell. Neutrality today does not mean neutrality a few months hereafter. Italy is to be congratulated upon taking a seat with the spectators, but none should assume that she will occupy it until the game is over.

Orla Dwyer, of Spencerville and Mr. Laurence and Mr. Fillman, of Allen County and Frank Johnson, of St. Joe, visited the Decatur sugar beet factory and McMillan feed plant Monday. They were shown through the plants in connection with other guests and were eye witnesses to the plant in operation.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

Jerry Varner Receives DeKalb County Distinguished Muck Crop Farmer Award

Jerry Varner, Troy Township farmer has been declared DeKalb County's most distinguished Muck Crop Farmer for the year 1939. Mr. Varner had the following yields which entitled him to be so honored. In his check-up in the 400 bushel potato club, his yield was 402 bushels of U. S. No. 1 potatoes per acre; in the check-up in the 1000 bushel onion club, his yield was 1077.8 bushels per acre; and his field corn checked 141.8 bushels per acre. County Agent C. E. Baker declared that any of these yields taken individually are outstanding but to have such yields in all three of these important crops is remarkable.

Mr. Varner this year raised 24 acres of potatoes. The variety on which the above yield was checked was Katahdin. Onions were grown on the field in the 1938 season and rye was plowed under in the Spring and the potatoes were planted May 18, using 30 bushels of seed potatoes per acre. 0-12-12 fertilizer was applied at the rate of 400 lbs. per acre by means of a fertilizer attachment on his planter. The potatoes were treated with Semesan Bel and sulfured before planting. The crop was of excellent quality at harvest time with very few not meeting U. S. No. 1 requirements.

Three acres of onions were grown of the Sweet Spanish variety. Potatoes had been grown in the field for the three preceding years. Rye was seeded following potato harvest and plowed down in April for the onions. Four pounds of seed was drilled per acre on April 20 at a depth of 1¼ inches in rows 13½ inches apart. Five hundred pounds of 2-8-16 fertilizer was applied prior to planting by a grain drill.

Twenty-three acres of corn was grown on this farm this past season. The variety grown was Indiana Hybrid 416, the seed of which was produced locally by L. N. Chapman of Waterloo. This corn followed clover and was fertilized in the row. The corn was planted May 18 in rows 36 inches wide and 11 inches apart in the row. This yield of 141.8 bushels per acre was one of the best in the county this year.

Mr. Varner made an educational display of his high yielding crops at the County 4-H Potato and Onion Show held at Garrett, Friday, November 3. He will also make an educational display at the State Muck Crops Show which will be held at Nappanee November 7, 8, 9 and 10.

HOOSIER SPORTSMEN TO OPEN SEASON FRIDAY

Indiana's open season on rabbits, quail, cock pheasants and Hungarian partridge begins Friday morning with every advance prospect of exceptional sport for both rabbit and bird hunters, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

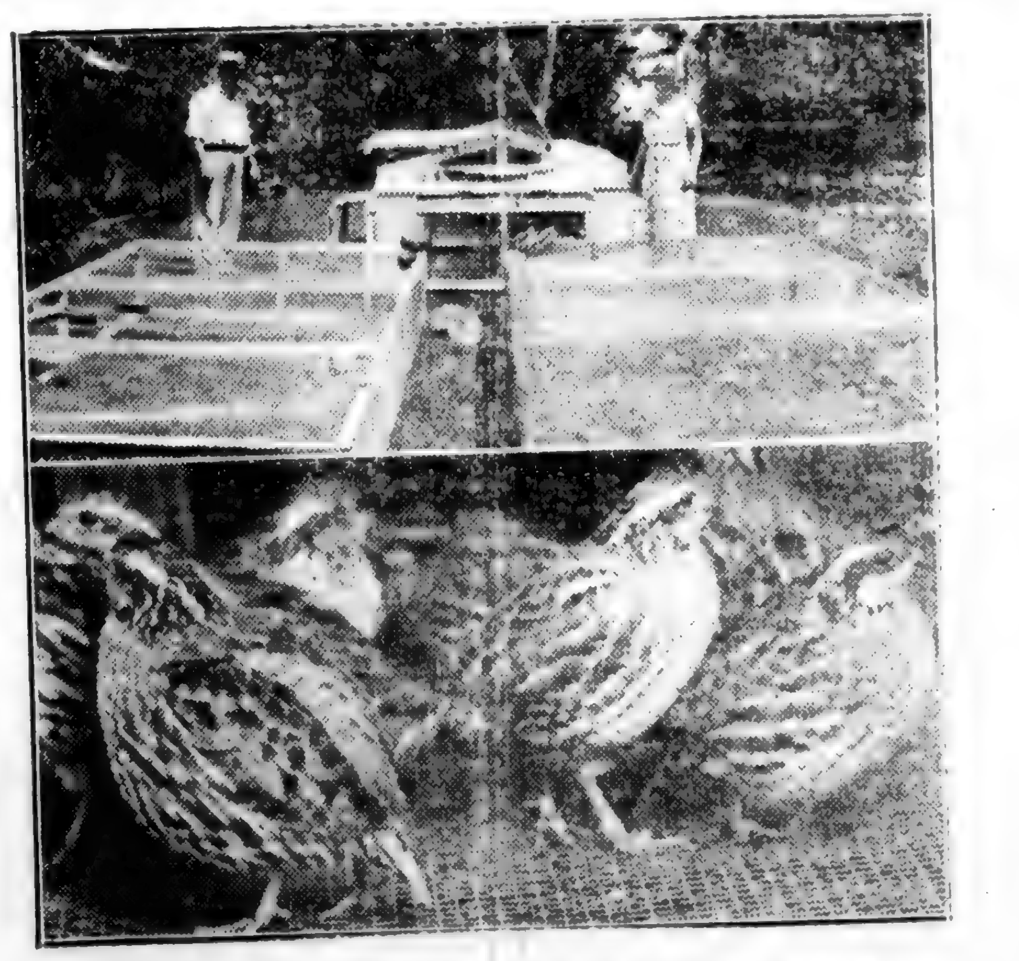
Cooler weather and light rains during the past several days have contributed to the prospects for a successful hunting season, with the result that a record number of sportsmen will be in the field on the opening day. Througohut the Summer and early Fall, reports to the Department of Conservation have indicated that in most sections of the state the supply of quail, pheasants and rabbits is greater than in the past.

As a rule Indiana's best pheasant hunting is found in the northern part of the state; the best quail hunting is in the southern counties and rabbits are well distributed over the entire state. There are exceptions however—counties in the southern part of the state where there is an abundance of pheasants and some areas in northern Indiana where quail thrive. Most of the Hungarian partridge are found in the northeastern part of the state.

Rabbit and bird hunting in Indiana is a sport for all members of the family—young and old—while there has been an increasing number of feminine hunters in the field in recent years. In many cases the women have proven the equal of the men in the field—both as good shots and as good sportsmen.

While a majority of the hunters taking to the field Friday and in the following days will be after rabbits, quail, Hungarian partridge and cock pheasants, many of them will continue enjoyment of one of the best duck seasons which they have experienced in Indiana during recent years. Colder weather has brought an increasing number of the migratory birds south from the nesting grounds.

Closing dates for the hunting season are: Cock pheasants, November 16; ducks and migratory waterfowl, December 5; quail and Hungarian partridge, December 20, and rabbits, January 10.



Typical Club Brooder (above) and Quail Ready for Release

Liberation of 40,977 Bob-White quail—reared in conservation club brooders from chicks furnished by the Division of Fish and Game—has established a record production of these popular game birds and assured Hoosier sportsmen better hunting during the coming season, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

Club production of quail in brooders approved by the Division of Fish and Game, was nearly three times as large in 1939 as in 1938 when only 16,470 quail were reared and liberated by the clubs. During the 1939 season, Indiana conservation clubs working in co-operation with the Division of Fish and Game, operated 250 quail brooders. They were furnished 60,025 quail chicks form the Jasper-Pulaski and Wells County state game farms.

For 1939, 68.2 per cent of the quail chicks furnished the clubs were reared and released. This was a better record than was established during the 1938 season when 60 per cent of the chicks received by the clubs were liberated. The higher percentage of chicks reared is credited to improved methods in brooder operation and in handling the birds.

Bob-White quail are Indiana's most popular native game bird and are found in all parts of the state, although th greatest concentration is in the southern half where food and climatic conditions are most favorable. Reports by game wardens and sportsmen indicate that there was a large natural reproduction of quail this year and that more birds have been seen during the summer months than in past years.

With this natural increase and the liberation of nearly forty-one thousand quail by the conservation clubs, in addition to liberations made directly from the game farms, Hoosier sportsmen can anticipate still better quail hunting than they have experienced in recent years.

Quail produced in the club brooders were liberated in suitable locations selected in advance by the club members and will contribute materially to better hunting in these areas.

Fire.. on schedule

Do you know that 200 leading capital stock* fire insurance companies maintain a nation-wide organization to survey cities and towns so that dangerous fire hazards may be discovered and corrected? Such a survey of fire hazards and fire-fighting facilities in a certain mid-western city a few years ago called attention to an important business district and warned:

A fire in any one of the large area buildings could readily assume conflagration proportions and, under adverse conditions, involve the greater portion of the block.

A later report repeated this warning. Unfortunately, the remedies suggested were not taken. Early this year, fire broke out in a department store in this very block. Within 2½ hours most of the block was in ruins . . . with a property loss of over $750,000. Worse, stores lost valuable business, employees lost jobs, and this in turn meant lost business to other stores.

These surveys are made without charge. It is one of many similar "plus" services that do not appear in your capital stock company fire insurance policy. Fortunately, community officials usually use the findings to make their communities safer. And because of these and other efforts by these insurance companies, it has been possible to steadily lower the average fire insurance rate for many years.

A. J. MOORE TO SHOW AT INTERNATIONAL

DeKalb County's first entries for the 1939 International Live Stock Exposition were made November 2 by A. J. Moore, well known sheep breeder, of Butler.

He will exhibit 12 head of purebred Shropshires in the competitions for this breed at this largest annual live stock show which will be held in the 40th anniversary celebration December 2 to 9.

A record entry in all divisions of the exposition is predicted by the management when a final tally of exhibits is made later in the month. They report that the advance entry has been the heaviest in the history of the show, with exhibits listed to date by stockmen from 32 states and four Canadian provinces.

Cash prizes exceeding $100,000 will be paid to exhibitors this year in contests featuring 30 breeds of live stock. The total entry is expected to be well over 12,000 animals.

One of the big features of the exposition is the International Grain and Hay Show, which will be held for the 21st time this year. According to officials of this event, which includes competition for corn, small grain, seeds and hay, entries will be accepted until November 20 and are made free of charge to the grower.

DECORATE YOUR TABLE

Make your center piece for the Thanksgiving table in season. Dip colorful leaves in melted paraffin and lay them around a wooden bowl filled with gourds or small squash....Dip grapes in white of egg, then into granulated sugar. Let them dry without touching anything, if possible. Heap the bunches of frosted grapes around a small pumpkin. To pile the frosted grapes on a table mirror is also very effective.

A THANKFUL PEOPLE

Perhaps we have had more reason to be thankful other years, it may be that there are some homes in St. Joe where little gratitude comes from the hearths, but there is no one living in these United States of America who has not one very good reason for raising a prayer this Thanksgiving.

We add another year to those celebrated by our forebears who enjoyed the blessings of civil and religious liberty. We too are aware of blessings abounding in food and clothing and shelter, freedom and opportunity, of all the material and spiritual benefits enjoyed by all of us. This country affords us truth and justice, though we often question this. It is not until we read of the bigotry, intolerance and prejudice that floods Europe that we are alive to our own rights and benefits. Few of us who would exchange what we have for what THEY have! Our sympathy goes out to the oppressed and crucified, but we continue to be grateful we are on this side.

Consider our rights as Americans as this Thanksgiving Day finds us gathered round festive boards. Say a prayer that the airplane flying overhead isn't pointing out our community for destruction, that our newspaper and radio is not controlled by the government, that the noonday meal isn't being eaten with a gas mask hung over the chair back, that the streets are lighted at night and our shades open to send a friendly glow to passers-by. None of us who sit at this table are registered with the local police as spies or political enemies, nor is our conversation carried on in whispers to prevent our friends from being put in jail.

The heads are bowed, the tears gather, as a successful harvest finds us observing another Thanksgiving with the prayer for America and her grateful ones who have a deep appreciation for the benefits and mercies bestowed by a kindly God.

About the only time some folks grow mellow is around Thanksgiving.

Many grindstones are still, now that the political axes are stored away until another November.

One thing about voting in St. Joe, they don't have to wait until the gun smoke clears in order to count the ballots.

Too often the fellow who used to boast of keeping all the laws, now brags about how many he can break and get away with.

It is always well to remember there are two words that go into the making of "Thanksgiving."

What has become of the St. Joe gallant who always stood with his hat in hand when talking to a lady?

The fellow who has always ridden the fence is fattening two turkeys this year.

Give me the fellow who isn't too proud to ask for dried apples and salt pork, and I'll show you a real man.

Now that the war in Spain is of the past, who was it we hoped would win?

What difference if your shirt front isn't clean, as long as it is spotted with Thanksgiving turkey!

You can bet the old frontier days have disappeared, when they are busier stealing autos than horses.

Man may be likened to an auto, there is only so much mileage in him at whatever age he uses it up.

A FAIR TRIAL

Let us judge Earl Browder purely on the grounds of his violation of the law. Let us try him for travelling abroad on an American passport under a false name. Let us dismiss from the suit that he serves as general secretary of the Communist Party in the U. S. His trial is dated for the end of this month. We shall see then the penalty for violation of our laws. He is being tired impartially, on legal grounds. To be tried as a Communist would benefit his party for they would contend a man was being persecuted for his beliefs rather than his crime. He stands trial as any citizen, believing any religious or political way he may choose.

THEY'LL TRY AGAIN

Now that the two fairs have added and subtracted, they close up shop with the budget far from balancing. The loss on each coast, is a let-down from the great expectations of the advance literature when the expositions first came to town. There have been many reasons given for the failure to put it over, but the one most generally agreed upon by those who know, point to the lack of proper advertising. Often we have warned in St. Joe the need of advertising, and the satisfactory results when the right goods are put over in the right way we have pointed out. They hope to make up this deficit when they reopen the fairs next year. Being wiser due to this experience, they may manage to take some of the red off the books.

AT IT AGAIN!

As is our yearly and unpleasant custom, the editor needs must sit himself down and type on the topic of the "game hog." The subject comes with each hunting season and is surely a ditsasteful one for those who believe in sport as "sporting." If the fishing season hasn't brought the game hog to the fore the hunting season will be sure to do so. There is the sound of many shots fired all over the country where sections are open for game. And everywhere there is the game there is the game hog. The man who slaugthers illegally without thought of prosecution, killing game protected by law, is the hunter who is the menace to clean sport. What would be a better term for the fellow who bags his game over and above the appetites of himself, family and friends, and lets the over-supply spoil or feeds his dogs! The way some hunters kill, hunting will indeed become a lost art and a sad sport. States should tighten up on their proescutions and though a good sportsman may hesitate to report infringement of the law, he is harming his own chances and killing his own sport if he doesn't.

TASTY BUSINESS

There is many a News reader who would favorably entertain the thought of an appointment as official turkey taster. There is a large number of people who didn't know there was such a thing, and a job that is a serious business, too. Every year, before our Thanksgiving, four tasters gather round a table at the Agriculture Departmeent and proceed to work on a fowl to determine whether government experiments for a model turkey, are more successful than the one worked on last year. Turkey lines change and today's fowl has shorter legs, a plumper body and a broader back than ye olden bird. It would be difficult to get the huge twenty-five pounder of grandmother's day into the kitchen of many modern apartments. You will see lots of housewives scurrying around trying to find a roaster large enough to accommodate the fifteen pound one she is cooking. And so these official tasters begin their meal, judging whether we are better off than at this time last year, and they taste with a thought to the future. Considering the fact that this land of gobblers consumes about 17½ million a year, it is evident that we must attempt to supply an A-1 model.

OIL AND WATER

Fifty years ago one of the great national problems related to water supplies for cities. The question was where to get water for all these people. The quantity of water was ample, but the problem was one of quality. While the answer was being sought likely a few million people died from contaminated water. The scientists and engineers and the health officials came along with their cures that included chlorine, plus filtration plants, and every device that would aid in producing pure water.

About the time the water problem was being solved a general fear gripped the country as to the shortage of oil, particularly during the great World War. Apparently authoritative estimates were published which showed, in 1919, that the oil wells would all run dry by 1939.

Therefore it seems pertinent to report that recent estimates of oil reserves of 17,500,000,000 barrels of oil are now ready to be pumped and that this supply is sufficient to meet any petroleum emergency that may exist in years to come. To support the estimates basic figures show the daily demand for petroleum is about 3,000,000 barrels. Texas alone can produce 15,000,000 barrels daily.

These statistics concerning oil resources combat the suggestions that the Federal Government be given authority to fix production quotas.

Conservation of oil has been a live question for many years and every time some brain-trusting idea is proposed—such as was applied to pigs and corn control—old Mother Earth seems to respond with new discoveries of fresh millions of barrels of oil. The Nation's oil wells apparently reach down through the center of the earth to points near China.

Oil has been as scientifically refined as water. And it is our guess that there is plenty of oil and water to last until Noah shall float his Ark again.

L. L. C.

The last meeting of the L. L. C. was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Staman. Fine arts was the general subject of the lesson with Mrs. Allan Haller discussing literature and art and Mrs. Lester Baker music and drama. A particularly interesting account of the development of the tools and mechanism of writing was included in Mrs. Haller's paper and a description of how music is printed was a feature of Mrs. Baker's paper. Mrs. Garman gave high lights of the World's Fair.

At a recent meeting devoted to a discussion of character education, Mrs. Sadie Krise very ably substituted for Mrs. George Beugnot, of Auburn, who was unable to be present. Included in her talk was a resume of an article given by the Federated chairman of character education of Georgia. One of the statements which reaches the heart of the subject and applies to every phase of character eduaction was: "Children learn to be unselfish not so much by seeing mother be unselfish as by being given opportunity to do acts of unselfishness themselves."

SCHOOL NOTES

A large number of students are planning to accompany the basketball team to the game at Woodburn tonight. St. Joe has been showing much improvement in their playing and is expected to give the strong Woodburn team a good game.

Hamilton will play at St. Joe Saturday evening.

Metz defeated St. Joe in a hard fought, well played game last week at the local gym. Three six-footers on the Metz team placed our team at a slight advantage, but St. Joe played good basketball and kept the game interesting to the final whistle. The final score was 41-25.

The second team provided a thriller for an opener winning over Metz second team by a single point 15-14.

Five representatives of the senior speech and dramatic class are planning to attend the conference for students and teachers of speech and drama which is being held on the campus of Indiana University Saturday, November 18. Presentation of a three-act play, several one-act plays, and a radio play, by students of high schools throughout the state will be followed by discussion and criticism. A high light of the day's activities is to be a rendition of AIR RAID by the verse choir of St. Mary's of the Woods College. This is considered an excellent example of choral reading at its best. Those from the class attending are Helen Goodwin, Marcella Wiers, Betty Kees, Maxine Woodcox, Opal Likens.

P. T. A. Notes

An importont P. T. A. meeting will be held Tuesday, November 21. The program follows:

REDUCTION IN POOR RELIEF TAX RATES

Important reductions in some of the poor relief rates of DeKalb County for the year 1940 have been ordered by the state board of tax commissioners following a hearing held at the court house in Auburn recently.

The levies were cut in eleven of the fifteen townships, as follows: Wilmington from 35 cents on the $100 valuation to 25 cents; Butler Township, from 18 to 14; Concord, from 76 to 40; Grant, from 10 to 6; Fairfield, from 33 to 23; Franklin, from 45 to 31; Keyser, from 81 to 61; Newville, from 65 to 41; Richland, from 13 to 7; Smithfield, from 19 to 13; Spencer, from 34 to 28, and Union, from 25 to 19.

The state board contends that less money will be required by the townships for poor relief than the county officers figured.

Reductions in other levies were ordered as follows:

Concord Township: special school fund cut from 74 to 70; township fund from 12 to 11, and tuition fund, from 37 to 34.

Smitheld: township fund, from 15 to 13; bond fund, from 33 to 22.

Waterloo town: general fund from $1.49 to $1.29.

Franklin: township fund from 13 to 11.

Newville: tuition fund from 38 to 28.

Spencer: bond fund from 42 to 22.

Butler town: general fund from 80 to 79; and street fund from 26 to 25.

Auburn: street fund from 6 to 2.

St. Joe: general fund from 54 to 52.

The reductions were all ordered as a result of new computations by the state board as to the needs of the respective units based on the budgets adopted by the local officers.

County Auditor Burley Ensley has prepared a table of total rates as follows:

Butler Township, $1.52; Concord, $2.52; Fairfield, $1.86; Franklin, $2.14; Grant, $1.96; Keyser, $2.36; Newville, $1.74; Richland, $1.40; Smithfield, $2.13; Spencer, $2.56; Union, $2.18; Wilmington, $1.36; Jackson, $1.42; Stafford, $1.24, and Troy, $1.54.

Auburn, $2.60; Garrett, $3.44; Altona, $3.02; Ashley, $3.37; Butler city, $3.28; Corunna, $2.34; St. Joe, $3.04, and Waterloo, $3.32.

The only units whose totals were not changed as a result of the state board's orders are Jackson, Stafford and Troy townships.

CONFESSES STEALING AN AUTO IN AUBURN

Clarence Henly, of Hicksville, O., is an inmate of the DeKalb County jail pending arraignment in the DeKalb Circuit Court on a vehicle taking charge. Ora Lyons, acting police chief for Auburn, said Tuesday that Henly confessed that he stole the 1935 Auburn sedan belonging to Bud Grube of Auburn, last Thursday night.

Accompanied by Bob Moore, also of Hickvsille, Henly drove to Auburn last Thursday night and parked his car on W. 8th Street. Officers say that when Henly and Moore attempted to start it later it stalled and they took the Grube car from where it was parked back of the Auburn hotel. Henly left his car parked in Auburn and drove the stolen vehicle to a point near the state line. He told officers that he knew that if he drove it over the state line it would be a federal offense. The two then hitchhiked the rest of the way to Hicksville.

Henly returned to Auburn Sunday for his own car but since he had no money, was not allowed to take it from a garage where it had been taken. He was asked to come later and Monday night when he returned he confessed the theft.

The Grube car was reported by farmers on the highway east of Auburn and Sheriff Artus Coyle was called and returned it to the owner.

Don't take my WORD for it!

FRANK COLBY

MORON

Do not say "muh-RON."

Psychologists classify the feebleminded in three groups:

The idiot, who is unable to speak connectedly or manage the ordinary affairs of life.

The imbecile, who has a higher degree of intelligence but is incapable of earning a living.

The moron, who is moderately feeble-minded, and can work under supervision.

This word must be accented on the first syllable which rhymes with toe. The "o" in the second syllable takes the "ah" sound as in don.

Correct pronunciation: MOE-rahn

(Capitals indicate syllables to be accented.)

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Bomb throwing or planting is bad business. It was the favorite method of the Nihilists of old Russia, persons who believed in no government at all. It is in disfavor, and justly so. No one is so callous as to feel disappointed that Mr. Hitler escaped. The foregoing granted, one is entitled to speculate what change would have been brought about if the bomb had found its mark. Guizot pointed out that, considered by and large, prominent men have not cut so important a figure in the history of civilization as is commonly suposed. There is no certainty that with Hitler dead the war would stop: and no certainty that his existence assures ultimate success for Germany.

No matter who may perish, it seems that there is always someone on hand to do the right thing at the right time now and then, and to make the necessary mistakes quite as often. Probably with Kaiser Wilhelm out of the way, the World War short cut thru Belgium would have been made, and the Lusitania would have been sunk, nevertheless; two palpable ships that in their final workings, gave the war to the Allies.

Will Hitler commit himself to errors similar to those of his predecessors of a quarter-century ago? The reported massing of troops at the Dutch frontier, and skirmishes there, indicate that he may be about to lay himself open to one of them. A back door entry into France, through the territory of a small and neutral nation, might be the thing above all others that would start an avalanche which not even the Reich could withstand. In the meantime, Holland and Belgium are very much on the hot spot. They may well recall the words that Mr. Shakespeare puts into the mouth of Henry VI: "When lions war and battle for their dens, poor harmless lambs abide their enmity."

It is alleged that the White House will oppose the transfer of eight American-owned vessels to registry in the Republic of Panama. The effect of a shift would be to remove them from the operation of the recently passed neutrality measure, and enable them to operate into and out of the war zone. Congress may have legislated wisely, or it may have been guilty of a grave blunder. That point is not involved. The statute must stand, and should be respected until it is repealed. The general reader of average intelligence is able to see in the proposed switch of shipping to the Panama flag, no more than an attempt to circumnavigate the law.

In the face of other though perhaps not more important affairs, the third term issue has been almost forgotten. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace persists in his conclusion that the third term is something that must be. Rumor has it that at the proper time, the President will speak an emphatic "No." At present he is content to follow the wise course which consists in keeping his mouth shut. It is alleged that in any event he does not favor third term talk and has rebuked some of those who have spoken too pointedly in that direction. The Republican attitude is well known, and there is a Democratic group, respectable in numbers and in judgment, which holds that nobody is good enough for a third term. There is, as yet, no data upon which to base a sure conclusion as to whether or not the casting aside of the rule laid down by President Washington would prove a party asset.

Once more a scientist has come forward with the statement that he has found the "missing link," the discovery region being Africa in the present instance. Years ago, the annoucement would have added fuel to the fire of a bitter controversy. Nowadays the proposal to annex monkeys to the human race hardly raises a comment. Considering that Europeans are busy tearing each other apart, very much after the manner of apes, it looks as though the chain were reasonably complete and that there is no missing link to justify scientific search.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

I am frequently asked, "Is it safe to travel as fast at night as it is during the day?"

Some persons feel that they can see oncoming cars better at night, especially around curves and over hills, because their lights reflect into the sky. This is dangerous confidence.

The driver has less visibility at night than during the day. He cannot see what lies beyond the beams of his headlights, and the glare of headlights from oncoming cars affects his vision.

Remember, at 50 miles an hour you are traveling approximately 75 feet per second. Could you stop within the range of your headlights if they brought an object on the road into view?

TRAPPING SEASON TO OPEN WEDNESDAY IN NEW NORTHERN ZONE

Harvesting of Indiana's fur crop—valued this year at more than $600,000—will be started Wednesday (November 15) in the new Northern Zone, located north of U. S. Road 40, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today. The trapping season in the Southern Zone, located south of U. S. Road 40, does not open until Saturday, Nov. 25.

Establishment of the two zones was provided by the General Assembly at its last session, the opening of the season in the southern part of the state being delayed ten days due to climatic conditions. Since temperatures are normally higher in the southern section of the state, much of the fur taken during the early days of the season was of poor quality and brot low prices.

The fur bearing animals which may be taken during the open season include:

North of U. S. 40
Opossum	Nov. 15 - Jan. 31
Raccoon	Nov. 15 - Jan. 31
Skunk	Nov. 15 - Jan. 31
Mink	Nov. 15 - Jan. 31
Muskrat	Nov. 15 - Jan. 31

South of U. S. 40
Opossum	Nov. 25 - Jan. 31
Raccoon	Nov. 25 - Jan. 31
Skunk	Nov. 25 - Jan. 31
Mink	Nov. 25 - Jan. 31
Muskrat	Nov. 25 - Jan. 31

Beaver—Unlawful to kill at any time.

Red Fox—No closed season until 1941.

Grey Fox—No closed season.

Indiana laws require that all persons have a license; that permission be obtained to trap on the lands of another; that no trap or any part of a trap be set before 12 o'clock noon of the day immediately preceding the opening of the trapping season; make it unlawful to smoke, chop or dig fur-bearing animals from dens; prohibit the setting of a trap within five feet of the opening of a tile drain eight inches or larger in diameter; bar the use of ferrets or mechanical device to frighten animals from their holes; provide for the confiscation of equipment and appliances used in violation of the trapping, hunting and fishing laws; and make it unlawful to engage it the business of buying untanned furs of fur bearing animals without a license.

KILLED AT AUBURN RAILROAD CROSSING

Alvin Wyatt, 40, son-in-law of Ira Williams, and living just west of Auburn, was instantly killed Monday night when he drove his car into a freight train at the N. Y. C. crossing at West Seventh Street.

Mr. Wyat had just taken his wife to a party at the home of Mrs. John Haggarty on Midway Drive and was driving west on Seventh toward his home, only recently completed, to change clothes. He planned to go to the Auburn Recreation Center and bowl. The train which he hit was No. TFW2, which was bound for Toledo, going north to Waterloo and switching to the east and west tracks there.

Mr. Wyatt was thrown against the steering wheel and winshield, suffering a broken neck, a skull fracture, a crushed upper jaw, a mangled leg, and a crushed chest. Almost any one of the injuries might have proved fatal, it was said. He was not thrown from the car.

Mr. Wyatt was well known about Newville, being the son of the late Clarence Wyatt. He was employed by the Citizens Lumber Co. Besides his widow, he leaves his mother and eleven brothers and sisters.

The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the Auburn Methodist Church.

Mrs. Lyon receiving the prize, then Miss Frances favored us again with a vocal solo, accompanied at the piano by Leila Hurni. The remainder of the evening was spent playing Hop Ching checkers. MORTUARY

BLUE

Marion C. Blue, aged 64, resident of St. Joe, died suddenly at his home last Wednesday morning, after an illness of only seven hours.

Mr. Blue was well known in DeKalb County as one of the few pony breeders.

He was born November 12, 1875, in Ohio, and resided in St. Joe for about fifteen years. He was an employe of the Ohio Power Company for many years until 1928, when he retired, making St. Joe his home, when he married Mrs. Elnora Kinsey.

Surviving are his wife, Elonra; three children, Harmon Blue, of Fort Wayne, Fred, of Chambersburg, Pa., and Lela Blue, of Williamsport, Pa.; three stepsons, Glen and Donald Kinsey of St. Joe, and Gerald Kinsey, of Chicago; a step-daughter, Mrs. Madonna Wade, of St. Joe, and fifteen grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon from the Kinsey funeral home, with Rev. Frank Stevenson, officiating. Burial in St. Joe K. of P. cemetery, by Mayola Kinsey & Son.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our sincere appreciation for the kind acts shown by our many friends and neighbor in our recent bereavement.

100,000 TURKEYS RAISED IN DEKALB COUNTY

With Thanksgiving just around the corner, DeKalb County residents are rejoicing that their turkey will cost less than usual this year while the thousands of the majestic birds raised on farms in the county are blissful in their ignorance that many of them will achieve a magnificent suntan later this week. Experts predicted an all-time high record in the turkey crop this year, and DeKalb County breeders have done their share to make the uptrend possible.

Ralph Kepler, of Franklin Township is, perhaps, the largest turkey raiser in DeKalb County. He has his own turkey hatchery on his farm. Other large growers include Claude Hollinger of Troy, Ethelyn Anthony of Grant, Burl Enzor of Newville, and Lynn Fisher and Roscoe Walter of Spencerville. Many local farmers raise a few birds for their own consumption.

SOMETHING TO BE THANKFUL FOR

Those of us who have good health have much to be thankful for this Thanksgiving Day. Sound health, before wealth, even before happiness, is the greatest gift of the gods. Without physical well-being, riches mean little, and joy and contentment can never be complete.

Tomorrow and the next day we will be receiving through the mail sheets of the 1939 Christmas Seal, the Seal to finance a program of tuberculosis prevention control. Here is an opportunity for those of us who are enjoying good health to insure its continuance. And here is an opportunity to assist others to share in that good health.

These brighly-colored little stamps aid a cause which is concerned chiefly with those persons who have to count their own pennies carefully. The money realized from their sale is spent wisely and thriftily in fighting this dread disease.

The Christmas Seal idea is sound year after year. It cuts into spending budgets but little; it decorates and makes more festive the whole Yule season; it provides true promise of great joy for people who are ill and who in this stimulating season can find little jubilance.

"Protect Your Home From Tuberculosis" is the slogan of this year's campaign. We have come far in the fight against the disease. Let us be thankful that we can help finish the job and bring the eradication of tuberculosis within reach.

CHANGE OF DATES ARE MADE IN BASKET BALL FINALS

The Indiana High School Athletic Association's board of control has changed the date of the state high school basketball final tournament from March 23 to March 30.

The action was taken to co-operate with religious groups which opposed conducting the state tourney finals during Holy week, and specifically the day before Easter.

All the other state final tournament dates remain unchanged. The sectionals will be held February 29 to March 2; the regionals March 9 and the semi-finals March 16.

There had been some agitation for conducting a 16-team, three-day tournament on March 16 but the board vetoes this idea.

STUDENTS TAKE FIRM STAND AGAINST WAR DUTY

So opposed are students of the University of California to America's involvement in the European war that many of them, a campus poll revealed, declared they would not fight and furthermore would prefer to go to jail rather than serve in armed forces.

The poll covering 2,300 students, showed that a majority opposed repeal of the present neutrality law.

The main questions on the ballot and the replies: 1—If the United States became involved in a war what would you do?

A—Volunteer, 484.

B—Wait to be drafted, 1,242.

C—Refuse to fight and face a possible prison sentence, 558.

BIBLE IS BEING PUBLISHED IN OVER 1,000 LANGUAGES

The Scriptures now have been published in more than 1,000 languages, according to the Rev. George G. Dilworth, of Philadelphia, secretary of the American Bible Society.

"Total circulation has fallen because of the war in China and a combination of circumstances in Japan," he told the Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey. "But in spite of these handicaps in these two great mission fields, a grand total of more than seven and one-third million copies of Bibles, Testaments, Gospels and portions have been distributed throughout the world."

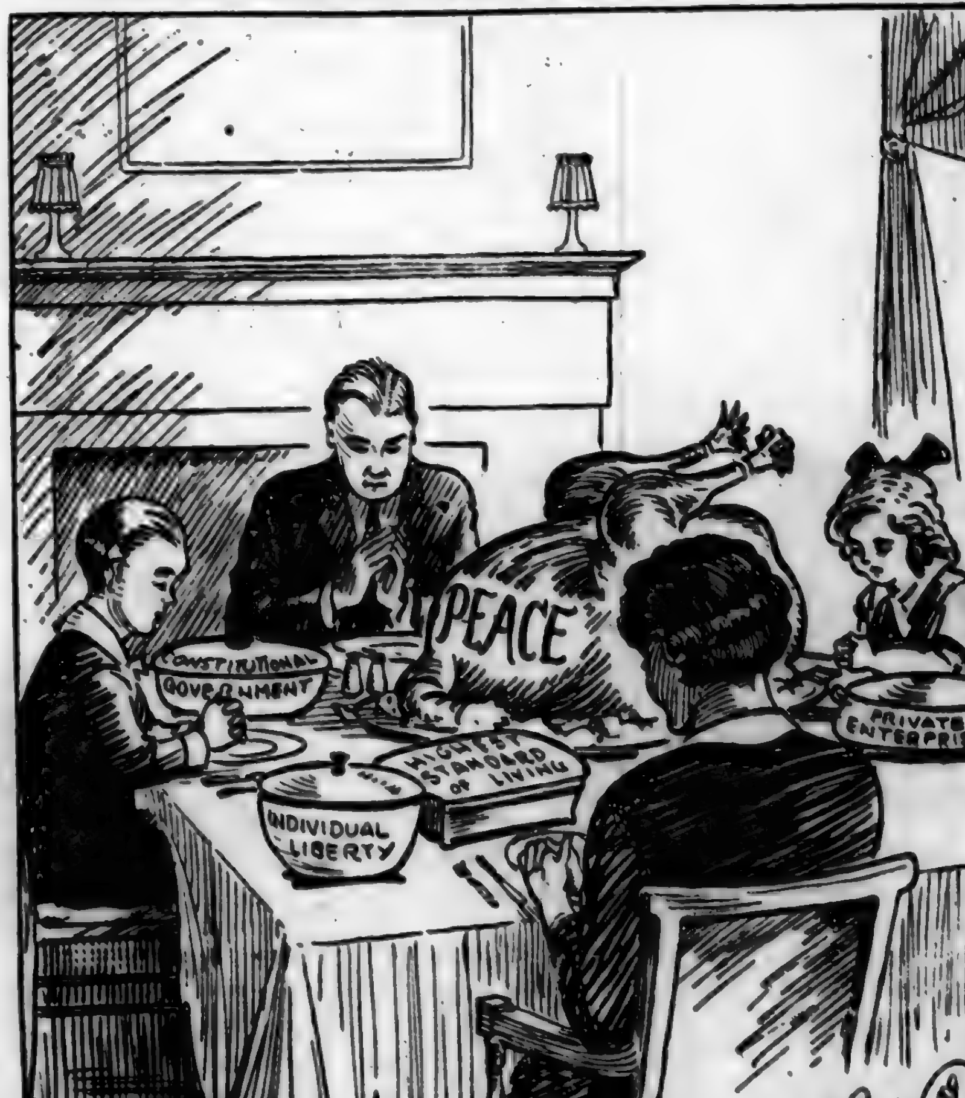
THANK GOD, WE'RE AMERICANS!



When things look bluest, think of all the younger generations that Methusaleh had to worry about.

A wise child of St. Joe never argues with his parents whether there is a Santa Claus.

The trouble with being a self-made man, so often you have a home-made look.

The family who is "trying to keep up with the Jones' " may be giving the Jones' a race for their money.

I've seen one thing that will turn a man's head quicker than money, that is a woman.

Many a woman will say she doesn't care what the neighbors say about her and there isn't a woman who doesn't.

Many of us would be awfully disappointed if we saw ourselves as others see us.

There is a substitute many of us would welcome, and that is a substitute for kindling.

Paul Perry believes the trouble with the sound of conscience, is that many can't hear it until after they are in trouble.

SAD BUT TRUE

And who should know better than J. Edgar Hoover who tells us that so far in 1939 more youngsters of 19 years of age have been arrested than those in any other age bracket. Arrests of 18-year-olds come next. Our youthful crime problem is far from being solved from this recent report. It reminds us that there is a steady increase in this age criminal and the solution of the problem is not in sight. The same story of unsatisfactory background, improper associations, lack of education, all help to keep our youthful crime problem on the incline. We pay heed to the words of Mr. Hoover, here in St. Joe, for he knows!

NEW BUSINESS

France is reputed to have ordered over 3000 new trucks from America, England rumored to be placing orders of such fantastic numbers that automobile manufacturers are planning to start mass production of airplanes. With mysterious orders from Sweden and South America countries for American tinplate, steel production hopes to continue to keep its new high. And Russia reprimands us for trying to make money from the war of European nations! We are scolded for refusing to fight but willing to sell, but to Russia we will continue to be a good listener and practice the art of keeping quiet. What they say is true, but Indiana representatives are not responsible.

TOO EERIE

There are few of us never to experience a drive through fog, the sort of fog that is thick enough to cut, dense enough to be dangerous and heavy enough to be fearsome. If you have had to meet the fog alone, you have probably suffered the same eerie sensation along your spine, the same timidity and wonderment. Science tells us that fog is the meeting of moist air and cold air, only in terms scientific. The words concern tropical and polar fronts meeting. However, after experiencing a heavy fog, walking or driving, we wonder how a Londoner can manage so easily. How to figure streets, lights, traffic and residences would be a problem. We can fly over the clouds, radio through the heavens, climb a mountain above the clouds, but when fog enfolds us we are lost.

AN EXTRAVAGANCE

Americans are criticized by some of their European cousins for their extravagance in spending. And when they reproach us with the true data, four million dollars a day at the soda fountains, we do feel a bit guilty for our pleasure-loving appetites. We consider our watsefulness for these quoted sundaes, "cokes" and malted milks, and we contemplate going on the wagon. Of course we would miss the visiting and chatting as we tilt in our chairs and sip through the straws. But as we think further we give a moment to what those European cousins are doing with their soda-pop and gingerale money. Although our four million dollars a day sounds migthy impressive, and this for a luxury, we can't help but wonder what is spent each day over there to kill each brother in their fight for—right! We might well be doing something more worthwhile with our millions but we aren't buying munitions when we are buying sodas. We do not excuse our extravagance here in St. Joe, but we think they would be far better off over there with a sundae topped with a cherry than with their nickels and dimes going for shells.

DAPPER AND DANGEROUS

With the many new autos flashing by in fashionable, and more to come, we think of them as grandeur on a large scale. Seldom do we look at each car as it rolls along and think in terms of how many accidents will that car cause, how many people will that driver hit, how often will children graze that fender, where will a wrecking crew pick up that chassis. Doleful and pessimistic the thought, but such magnificence one sees and such destruction one refuses to see. The emergencies that arise in our land, of floods and winds, droughts and fire, hunger and strikes, we heed and try to overcome. We are successful in most cases, by perseverence and co-operation. Why can't we do as much for our traffic toll through these same means. How gleams the pain, how pleasing the upholstery, how powerful the motor, and how sorrowful the loss in lives and in injuries. With the change in gear shifts, in lighting, in dashboards, there is no change in the human nature of the hands on the steering wheel. A delightful paint job, makes no home happier when it has hit a beloved member. Because insurance rides along doesn't mean that a child in St. Joe will return to his teacher each day. A new model needs renewed morals for traffic driving.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

The death of Mr. Justice Butler of the Supreme Court of the United States, creates on that bench the fifth vacancy that Mr. Roosevelt has had to fill. Justice Butler looked askance at the New Deal, but the relations which existed between him and the President were none the less cordial on that account. With Mr. McReynolds, he was all that was left of the conservative Supreme Court group. It is believed that Mr. Butler's place will be taken by Attorney-General Frank Murphy, between forty and fifty years old, and so far as the principles of the New Deal are concerned, that philosophy will be likely to tinge Supreme Court decisions for a generation to come.

Al Capone has been released from a federal prison, after serving seven years of a fifteen year sentence. Of all the crimes whereof he stood charged, an income tax violation alone could be pinned on him. Surrounded by bodyguards, in terror of gangsters bullets and afflicted by a mental disorder for which there is no cure, Capone is out of jail but not free.

War news has dwindled to a single column on the front page, the sinking of a single tank ship being the backbone item. There is something mysterious about the progress of the war, and the facts probably will not be known for years to come. Mr. Hitler seems ready and makes threats of dire consequences. The Allies invite him to go ahead and do his worst, but nothing happens. The Germans may be accumulating vigor for a major offensive, but the effect of the delay is to create a suspicion of the alleged German strength, which did not exist a month ago. Nevertheless, those on the lines probably have war enough on hand to satisfy their personal requirements in that direction.

War planes built in the United States cannot make a non-stop flight from the American factory to Canada. They can be operated as far as the border, where they must land to have title transferred. Signing the papers at the place of manufacture would be a breach of neutrality, but signing them at the margin of the country would be quite a different matter. No doubt there is sound reason behind the technicality, but everyone other than the traditional Philadelphia lawyer will be confirmed in the view that law is fearfully and wonderfully made.

The memorial to Thomas Jefferson, the cornerstone of which was laid by Mr. Roosevelt in Washington a few days ago, will serve to perpetuate the fame of Mr. Jefferson as a financeer and as the third President of the United States. Nothing in the building will indicate that as a side line he was an inveterate tinker, a patron of arts and crafts he would be called today. Nor did Mr. Roosevelt say anything about his own stamp collection. There is no occasion for suppressing news that touches the interest of either of the great men in a fad. A bond between high and low is created when it comes to light that both like to fuss with the same small thing.

Interest is created by the mailing, directly from Germany, to citizens of the United States, of circulars purporting to prove that the English steamship Athenia was sunk by the English themselves. Timed explosives planted by Englishmen wrecked the vessel, but she still floated. Fourteen hours later, there English destroyers appeared and sent the ship to the bottom, thereby removing all traces of the "chime." The leaflet makes a good scrap book piece, but otherwise the sender has wasted his postage. That the Athenia was sunk under orders from London is quite as improbable as that Mr. Hitler was a party to the setting off of the bomb in the beer hall. Years ago, some who did not like the late Theodore Roosevelt, spread the report that he had caused himself to be shot at by a dummy assassin. Propaganda is not without effectiveness, but it becomes a joke when spread on too thickly.

SCHOOL NOTES

Good basketball and a will to win finally brought victory to the St. Joe Tigers. The team has been improving steadily and although defeated in their first three starts has exhibited a true fighting spirit.

The game Saturday night with Hamilton was thrilling from start to finish. The first half ended 12-11 in favor of St. Joe. During the second half the lead changed back and forth several times and no one was sure of the outcome until the final gun. When the smoke cleared away St. Joe was leading 27-24. It is certainly a grand feeling to be on the winning side again.

Another added attraction was the new suits worn for the first time. To really appreciate their keen appearance you will have to see them. Plan to attend our next home game on Dec. 13 when we play Spencerville.

Our second team after losing to Woodburn last week, came back to defeat Hamilton.

P. T. A.

Although it was a bad night, several patrons attended a very interesting P. T. A. meeting Tuesday evening. The program consisted of community singing led by Mrs. Arnold; devotions led by Rev. Stevenson; two numbers by the high school chorus; a talk by Mr. Clyde Hart on Thanksgiving, and the business meeting in charge of Mr. Haller.

During the business meeting Mrs. Rude reported a membership of 98 at present. The group voted to accept the invitation of the High Scohol to hold their next meeting at the school after the Christmas program. Come and enjoy a program with us.

There was some discussion of the P. T. A. sponsoring the purchase of Projection Machine for use in classes. The matter was left open until next meeting at which time we will have a machine here for demonstration.

Friday evening, the senior English Class went to Fort Wayne to see the mystery comedy, "Whistling In the Dark," a three one act play put on by the Old Fort Players.

Speech Conference

Those who attended the Dramatic conference at Indiana University November 17 were very well pleased with the results. The conference in itself was a most interesting one. Some of the outstanding events were: The cutting from "Our Town" put on by different schools and portrayed in various forms. "When They Say Stutter" put on by the speech department of the University was also interesting. A scene from "Little Women" was given with the characters attired in the 18th century costumes. Scenes using one word speeches was amazing in that it showed what can be done by not using lengthy speeches. A portion of the play "New Fires" was put on by Kendallville High School which proved to be interesting. A radio play entitled "The Killers" was given producing sound effects around a microphone. This play was recorded. The most interesting event from the standpoint of the representatives was the choirc reading by the verse choir from St. Mary's of the Woods College. "Air Raid" was their outstanding work and will be something that will not be forgotten by anyone. The campus in itself was beautiful. Everyone had a wonderful time. Those who attended were: Mr. Wilbern, Miss Leffel, Opal Likens, Betty Kees, Maxine Woodcox, Helen Goodwin, and Marcella Wiers.

Safetygrams

BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

You cannot see it—you cannot taste it—you cannot smell it—you cannot feel it.

Yes, this is carbon monoxide gas. You have all heard about it, and much has been written and said about it; but every year thousands of lives are lost because of carelessness on the part of the victims protecting themselves against it.

Do these things:

Always leave your garage doors open when the motor of your car is running.

Always have a car window open while driving.

This gas is so deadly that the amount produced in three minutes by an ordinary car motor running in a closed single car garage will prove fatal to the occupants.

Be careful!

Recently the safety department of the Wisconsin Highway Commission stated that the "man on the street" is less careful about oncoming cars than the woman pedestrian.

The safety department reports these findings:

"The safest place to walk on a rural highway is on the left side, facing oncoming traffic.

"The most dangerous place to walk on a rural highway is on the right side, with traffic coming from behind you.

"The safest place to cross a city street is at a marked intersection, with the traffic signals.

"The most dangerous place to cross is in the middle of a block."

Statistics prove conclusively that these are the prominent causes of automobile accidents. Laws will not abolish them. It will require the definite safety conduct of each and every one of us to help eliminate some of these causes of accidents from our highways.

"It's Smart to Drive Carefully."

Throat ornaments are more popular this season than ever, to wear with a demure, off-the-shoulder evening frock. A medallion of rich colored stones, fastened to a bright band of velvet or satin, is most flattering. It breaks that bare neckline and brings color near your face.

Doctor Townsend Says......

HENRY Ford has discovered the famed fountain of youth. At seventy-six, three years my senior, he has all the alertness, imagination and fire of a young man. He cherishes the past but looks ever to the future. His whole philosophy seems to be that nothing is too sacred to be changed, if there is a better way.

His farm camp for underprivileged sons of disabled war veterans, where they are trained to coordinate muscle and brain is an example of his own youthfulness. Every man may have that same gift, if he will turn his eyes eternally to the future and interest himself in human affairs.

Muskrat, Raccoon, Opossum and Skunk form bulk of Fur Harvest

Furs with a market value of more than a half million dollars are being collected by an army of Hoosier men and boys as they follow their trap lines this Winter, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, pointed out today.

Success during the trapping season which ends Jan. 31, will mean that approximately three-quarters of a million pelts will be taken, a majority of them muskrat hides. The muskrat, trapped along streams and ditches in all parts of the state furnishes the greater part of the trappers' catch and revenue.

Racooon form a growing percentage of the annual fur crop, a result of the artificial propagation of these animals by the Division of Fish and Game and the conservation clubs. The skunk, avoided for its odorous scent, is an important part of the fur catch while the opossum is increasingly popular.

Mink and fox are minor but valuable additions to the trappers' catch during the Winter months.

Pelts taken by the Hoosier trappers reach the markets through approximately five hundred licensed fur-buyers, some of whom maintain buying headquarters and a staff of buyers who canvass surrounding counties. An increased number of buyers from outside the state will operate in Indiana this year as a result of reduced licensed fees voted by the General Assembly. Many of the buyers operating in the state have been in the business for a number of years and are widely known.

Trapping is done chiefly by men and boys in the rural communities as a source of revenue during the Winter months but Indiana does have a number of professional trappers who regard trapping as a seasonal occupation and are experts in the setting of traps and preparing the pelts for market.

A number of laws have been enacted from time to time, governing the taking of fur-bearing animals and the purchase of the pelts, designed to prevent the extermination of any species of fur-bearing animal.

GIRLS ARE NOT PERMITTED WITHOUT A CHAPERONE

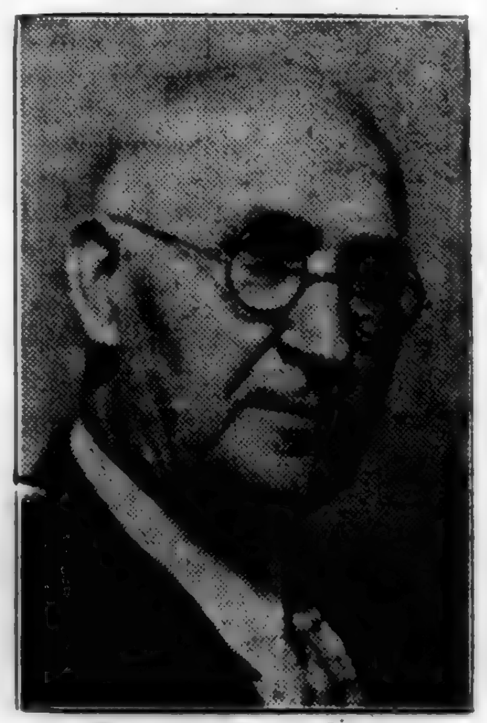
Because legal requirements pertaining to cars and highways have not been revised to meet changing conditions in all localities, there are still some amusing statutes on the books of cities and states throughout the country, Joseph H. Braun, general counsel of the Chicago Motor club, revealed recently.

Here are a few of the most unusual:

In Milwaukee, Wisconsin, an ordinance never stricken from the records still prohibits motorists from allowing their car to stand on the street for more than an hour unless there is a horse attached to it.

The state of Nevada holds that it is illegal to drive a camel on the main highway, and the "buckeye" state of Ohio declares that riding a jackass at the rate of more than six miles per hour is violating the law.

Young ladies who live in Monmouth, Oregon, are prohibited from entering an automobile unless accompanied by a chaperone, and in Berea, O., an ordinance states that all animals on the streets after dark must display a red tail light!



IRA P. NELSON

Members will please bring all questions regarding conservation that they wish answered by the department representative, as well as suggestions for future activities.

The warden for this disrict is expected.

LEGAL ADVERTISING A PROTECTION

Many newspaper readers may have wondered why so-called "public notices" by local government bodies are published in the newspapers. Critics of the latter have sometimes suggested that this is a needless public expense and that no one except the newspapers benefits from such legal advertising ordained by law. To such critics the present plight of Louisiana furnishes an eloquent answer.

As everyone knows, Louisiana recently has been shaken by terrific scandals disclosing irregular handling of finances by public officials. Now it is freely admitted in Louisiana that one of the main reasons why the higher-ups became involved in questionable financial dealings, is because the publication of certain financial statements through newspapers was abolished during the Huey Long regime.

At the time he built his formidable political machine and began to plunder the State of Louisiana, the late "Kingfish" perceived that certain kinds of publicity were harmful to his designs. Among these kinds was the newspaper publication, required by law, of the accounting of taxpayers of public funds spent by officials. So Huey did away with that, and very soon no one in Louisiana, outside the boodlers, knew or could find out just what was being done with the people's money.

The legal advertising carried in your newspaper affords a double protection to the public in that all accountings of public money are put on record, available to every person, and the integrity of officials is also safeguarded. The attempts which are made from time to time in state legislatures to do away with such public advertising should be viewed with suspicion and defeated in every case.

After getting the World Series off our minds and Thanksgiving football games off our hands, perhaps we can get children started on pre-Christmas godliness.

One is reminded of old-fashioned winters now that ear muffs are popular with the youngsters.

THE YULE TREE

We see the evergreen trees stacked along the sidewalks, lined in front of stores or carried by us on trucks for the markets, and we wonder yearly if such destruction can go on without our forests suffering. Few of us who do not feel pity for the cutting of these evergreens and those who have seen them in their native woods, wonder at our Christmas demands. We are glad to be reassured by foresters who point out that much timberland need an annual weeding out and that the large-sized trees which we usually prefer are not the essential growths for the forests. Of course too many trees should not be cut from the same area but thinning is the same for trees as it is for gardens. Stealing trees, cutting them along highways or removing tops of them to secure a shapely tree, is unwarranted.

A living Christmas tree seems essential in St. Joe. It is a custom dating far back of the Christian era to when pagans used to revere certain trees and placed gifts under their sacred ree's branches, on the ground. The exchange of gifts comes to us from the early Romans and the idea of hanging them on a tree originated in Germany. The choice of the evergreen is due to its being the only tree ready to serve such a purpose at this time of year. What could be more satisfying as a symbol of peace, calm and beauty?

St. Joe will again have a living Christmas tree and the festivities will be in charge of the American Legion.

A NEW ORDER

Not so very long ago we read a comment of an American minister who had returned from Germany, regarding what he termed "a revival of religion" in that country. His report indicated that due to persecution and repression Germans have realized how much their religion means to them. We have since received word that deals with the same subject but not so encouraging. The German Minister of Propaganda has forbidden bookstores to stock the Bible, for "the Bible is a Jew book" and "teaches peace." There is a stipulation though, for if a customer should order a copy he may obtain one, but in Germany they may hesitate to place their order! We ask, here in St. Joe, can a nation so endure who repudiates the Book, who believes that "God is on our side" but who won't listen to God's side?

PLAIN TIRED

Overheard a chap in St. Joe say the other day, when asked how he was, "I'm fatigued." It sounded to effeminate to us for the word seems purely a ladies way of letting you know she is "all in." Another thing, the word fatigue doesn't sound quite as weary as "tired out." It doesn't convey the impression of complete physical exhaustion but more of the idea that the body might be in shape to go again without too much effort. But to this editor's way of thinking, when the body seems taxed by labor and the mind is overworked f r o m strain, fatigue isn't strong enough for meaning you are dog-tired, more dead than alive, ready to drop, played out or worn to death! Few of us who do not feel this weariness and are not sapped of energy during days of labor, but how refreshed a night of restful sleep passes off this backache and sore muscles. We arise to a fresh start and begin another day with a zest in our endeavor to do as much as lies within our power in the new, untouched hours offered us. For the man who has never been exhausted we have a sigh of regret for has he not missed the grand feeling to be renewed and refreshed, to pursue one's work.

THE OLD REFRAIN

What kind of a newspaper would we be if we didn't give the yearly message of "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early?" The wise shopper has had her list made our for months. She has worked over Aunt Jennie and Uncle Fred's needs weeks ago. Perhaps there is a dresser drawer in which reposes some handwork accomplished for this occasion during the Summer. This is a wise lady. The holiday rush finds frayed nerves and tired feet. The crowded stores and delay is avoided by the shopper who purchases before the last minute. Consider not only your own comfort but give a thought to the workers who remain courteous in the face of inconsideration and fretfulness.

OF IMPORTANCE

A boon to womenkind is the new hose put on the market for trial last month. These stockings a r e made chemically from coal, water and air. The hope is to find a stocking that won't run and will last madame longer than the flimsy affairs she has to replace too frequently. The news of bottling milk in paper cartons to cut down on expense for housewife is welcome to almost everyone, but does not create the concern to women as does a no-run pair of stockings.

PROTECT OUR CHILDREN

Boys and girls will be flocking back home from school and college for the holiday season within the next few weeks. Boys and girls of whom we are all so proud. Gaiety, courage and good spirits will abound in homes of many of us because John and Mary are back in town.

In the midst of Christmas cheer, it may seem out of place to mention a constant threat which hangs over the heads of these youngsters, and yet we would be hiding our heads in the sand if we did not look clearly at the facts as they are presented to us. We all have read that "death loves a shining mark" and we all should know that tuberculosis is the arch-killer of youth. It causes more fatalities between the ages of 15 and 19 than any other disease.

As in every other year since 1907, we are asked to buy Christmas Seals, shields to protect the lives of our boys and girls. These little seals are the sole support of a movement to educate the public in tuberculosis prevention and control. One case of this disease in Mary's sorority house might infect many other girls. That is why so many colleges insist upon tuberculin testing, a simple test to ascertain the presence of tuberculosis infection, or X-raying their matriculants.

Buy Christmas Seals and provide for other children and growing boys and girls the means of safety by knowledge of good health through the prevention of diseases such as tuberculosis.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Before beginning the time-honored journey which consists in going somewhere for Thanksgiving, the President gave voice to a hope which, if realized, will afford added cause for gratitude when the day comes around in 1940. During the next year, plans should be made whereby the deficit can be cut a billion dollars, notwithstanding the fact that national defense will make a heavy drain on the public purse, and perhaps call for a special tax levy.

The debt reduction, it is said will be governed by two considerations, neither of which is fully worked out, or capable of being forecast with certainty. Business improvement must be so pronounced as to make certain a larger contribution to federal reserve. That, perhaps, is the thing on which a reduction in the deficit will depend chiefly. Furthermore, there should be a trimming of the outlay that is not essentially of a military nature.

Considered from the standpoint of politics, the stopping of benefits on the year of a presidential election is something that has to be handled with a great deal of care. Upon the other side of the question, a damming of the outflow would tend to draw together both the New Dealers and the more conservative. The view point of the conservatives as to spending perhaps is best stated by Senator Glass, who, in substance, sees no alternative between curtail on the one hand, and repudiation, inflation and torturing taxes on the other.

In certain groups of the economical wing there is open declaration in favor of reducing relief payments and farm aid, as an offset to military appropriations which conditions of the hour seem to make necessary. Avoiding a discussion of the wisdom of such a plan, or even the wisdom of attempting any reduction in the deficit, it is likely that few legislators will be eager to carry back home the heavy news that relief and farm aid have suffered through the pruning knife, in favor of so abstract a proposition as making Democracy safe, desirable though such safety may be.

Congress will have to free the electorate from fear of the tax-raise spectre, and at the same time provide funds sufficient to insure practically no change in existing benefits. The problem is not a party matter, and is as annoying to the Republicans as to the Democrats.

Passing from the woes of men to the less important troubles of animals.

the list of those rescued from a mine-sunk Japanese ship included a canine. England thus far has held up more than twenty-five American boats bound for neutral ports, with delays running from several days to many weeks. This has not been done in a high-handed manner, and there are many indications that Britain has no desire to rub the feathers of the American Eagle the wrong way, or to reenact the incidents that caused international relations between the two countries to run none too smoothly during the opening portion of the World War.

The State Department at Washington reserves decision, and is even niggard of comment, remarking merely that for the time being, the United States regards the matter as something that must be arranged between our shippers and the London government. At the same time, it is remarked that the United States does not endorse any principle of interference with genuinely neutral trade. Back of the somewhat frosty attitude of the State Department lies the conviction that the United States already has gone more than half way regarding curbing the export of contraband, and that the shipment of goods into neutral territory should go on with the smallest possible degree of hindrance. It is reported to be the White House attitude that by docking our ships under the embargo, wtih the probability that they will have to be subsidized out of tax-payers' money, the United States has reached the limit of hands-across-the-sea courtesy......

SCHROEDER—VOLKERT

Delicate shades of pink and rose marked the wedding of Miss Hilda Volkert, and Mr. Wayne E. Schroeder, both of Fort Wayne, which took place in a ceremony at 6 o'clock last Thursday evening at the Emanuel Lutheran Church, with the Rev. Fred Heidbrink officiating.

Preceding the nuptials, Mr. H. G. Nuoffer presided at the console of the organ and "Mr. Carl Getts sang two selections, including "Prayer Perfect," by Stenson, and "The Lord's Prayer," by Mallotte. The Wagner and Mendelssohn wedding marches were used for the processional and recessional respectively. Two large bouquets of white chrysanthemums and roses were used in the altar vases and were flanked by two candelabra, seven-branched, holding lighted white tapers. Palms and ferns formed a background in the chancel.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Harold Volkert, of Lansing, Michigan, and was attended by her sisters, Mrs. Merl Guilford, of St. Joe, as matron of honor, and Mrs. Olin Yinger, of Hillsdale, Michigan, bridesmaid. Mr. Paul Schroeder served his brother as best man. Ushers were Mr. Earl Volkert, of Quincy, Mich., and Mr. Norman Schroeder, brothers of the bride and groom, respectively.

A gown of slipper satin in a shell pink shade was chosen by the bride for her wedding. Tiny buttons fastened the dress from the neckline to the waist in back and the soft folds of the skirt were draped into a long train. The bodice was shirred at the waist, finished with a high neckline and had short puffed sleeves. The bride's veil of pink illusion fell in two tiers and was caught to her hair with a cluster of pink sweet peas. She carried pink roses and baby chrysanthemums tinted a shade deeper than that of her dress. A gold watch, her gift from the bridegroom, was her only jewelry.

Mrs. Guilford was attired in a gown of cyclamen rose taffeta with a slight train and a bodice shirred at the waistline and finished with a sweetheart neckline. Mrs. Yinger's dress was fashioned on the same lines and was of the xenia rose shade. Both carried roses and baby chrysanthemums and wore clusters of the chrysanthemums in their hair. Rhinestone clips worn on the dresses were gifts of the bride.

Mrs. Elmer Volkert, of Quincy, Mich., mother of the bride, wore a dress of navy blue crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow chrysanthemums. The bridegroom wore a gardenia boutonniere and the other men of the wedding party had white chrysanthemums.

A wedding dinner was served to the immediate families and the bridal party following the ceremony at the Aulton House. Lighted white tapers and fern decorted the two long tables at which the guests were seated. Intimate friends were invited to call at the reception which was held from 8:30 to 10 o'clock at the home of the bridegroom.

The couple left on a wedding trip and upon their return will reside temporarily on Elm Street until their new home is completed. For travelling the bride chose a dress of black with pink trim, a black coat with a persian lamb collar and black accessories.

Those attending the wedding from out-of-the-city included the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Volkert, of Lansing, Mich., Miss Florence Baals, of Jonesville, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Olin Yinger and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Trease, of Hillsdale, Mich., the bride's grandfather, Mr. Joseph Volkert, of Hicksville, Ohio, Mr. Lessie Koch, Mr. and Mrs. George Koch and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Koch, of Antwerp, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Gorrell, of Woodburn, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Eastman, of Coldwater, Mich., Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kiessel, of Ypsilanti, Michigan. —News-Sentinel.

YOUTHS APPLY AT WELFARE FOR CCC ENLISTMENT

County welfare departments throughout the state are now taking applications for the first 1940 enrollment in the Civilian Conservation Corps, Miss Nora I. Brown, Director of Public Welfare for DeKalb County, announced today. The selection period extends from January 1 to January 20.

"Young men interested in CCC work are urged to make early application at the local welfare office so that necessary certification and investigation may be taken care of before the close of the enrollment period," the director stated. Welfare offices are located in the county seat of each county in Indiana. "Investigations are made on a first-come, first-served basis, so that youths who make early application stand the best chance of being enrolled during the next period."

Youth will work on erosion projects, tree-nursery program in the state forest preserves, flood control and numerous other projects which aid in the preservation of the nation's natural resources.

In addition, the CCC camp offers an educational program by which an enrollee can further his academic training. "It is even possible for a young man to complete his high school work and receive a high school diploma which will admit him to any state college or university," said the welfare director. All camps in the Indiana district have educational buildings equipped with woodworking machinery where instruction and practice in woodworking and other crafts are given. Classes in auto mechanics, blacksmithing and correspondence work are a few of the courses offered in many of the camps.

To be eligible for CCC membership, youths must be between the ages of 17 and 23½, unmarried, not in regular school attendance, unemployed and in need of employment.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1939 NUMBER 49

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

PROGRAM FOR DEKALB CO. POULTRY SCHOOL ANNOUNCED

The following program for DeKalb County Poultry School which will be held in the Assembly Room of the Court House in Auburn on Wednesday, December 13, was announced by County Agent C. E. Baker today.

At 10 to 10:45 A. M. Scott Hinners, Purdue Poultry Specialist, will be in charge. Poultry questions will be discussed.

From 10:45 to 11:15 the Outlook for Poultry in 1940 will be discussed by County Agent C. E. Baker.

11:15 to 12 noon, Mr. Hinners will discuss "Securing Economical Laying Rations."

At 1:30 to 2:15 Mr. R. R. Shipperd, Manager of the Northwestern Ohio Poultry Association, of Napoleon, Ohio, will discuss "How Auctions net the Farmers more Money for their Eggs."

From 2:15 to 3 o'clock Mr. Hinners will discuss "Sanitation." The poultry questions to be taken up by Mr Hinners will bring out the latest information which has been discovered by the various experiment stations and actual practices.

In talking of the poultry situation for 1940, County Agent Baker will show both favorable and unfavorable factors. Although the poultry feed price is about the same as a year ago, the consumer's demand is improving. Storage holding, size of farm plots and the production of those plots however, must be considered before one can get any general idea of the poultry conditions for the coming year.

"With the large supply of farm grains this year, many poultry raisers may find the use of a home-mixed ration a possible solution to the problem of lowering production costs," said Mr. Hinners, Purdue extension poultryman, who will be one of the main speakers on the DeKalb County poultry school program. Mr. Hinners also added, "that interested poultry raisers should bring along to the school a pencil so that they can estimate the cost of some good rations as several practical ones will be suggested.

Mr. Shipperd, the manager of the Northwestern Ohio Poultry Association, will bring us a topic of considerable interest to poultrymen in this county, especially those poultrymen producing a good quality of egg and are interested in an outlet where they will receive a premium for producing quality eggs.

Disease control to be featured at poultry school. "Doctoring sick birds is the poorest possible means of improving poultry flock health. The best cure for sick birds is a good sharp "ax" was the statement made by Mr. Hinners. "The best breeding, feeding, and management known will not compel a bird to convert feed into eggs economically if she is the host of disease germs and parasites." Mr. Hinners will discuss the causes of some of the more common poultry diseases, and give an 8-point disease control plan.

This poultry school is the first to be held for some time in DeKalb County, and people interested in this farm enterprise should make an effort to attend this school.

There will be time for discussion of individual problems during the school.

HIGHWAY WORKERS ON JOB AS SNOW, SLEET HANDICAP MOTORISTS

State highway workers were on the job during the past week as scattered snow and sleet gave motorists their first Winter driving tests, T. A. Dicus, chairman of the State Highway Commission, said today.

While the snow and sleet slowed up traffic in some parts of the state for only a few hours, it did give the highway maintenance forces an opportunity to test their preparations for emergencies to come during the Winter months when heavy snows and thick coatings of ice cover the roads.

A ten-point Winter driving program to increase motoring safety during the months that snow, ice and lessened visibility add to highway hazards was proposed by Mr. Dicus. This program is based on research carried on by the National Safety Council thru its Committee on Winter Driving Hazards. Included are:

1. Check electric and exhaust systems, windshield wipers and brakes. Keep tire chains, defrosters and other equipment in good condition.

2. Drive at low speed on ice even with chains or when abrasives have been spread over the ice. With these safety factors 20 miles per hour on ice is reasonably safe.

3. Reduced tire pressure gives only slightly more traction, not nearly sufficient for all-round safety.

4. Chains on rear wheels reduce stopping distance on ice 25 to 35 per cent, and on all wheels 40 to 50 per cent over bare tires. The effect on packed snow is only slightly greater.

5. Maintain adequate vision and circulate fresh air through the cowl ventilator rather than opening windows wihch may suck exhaust gas through the floor.

6. On wet and even dry pavement anticipate ice on bridge floors, in shaded spots, around curves and over hills; and when temperatures are dropping after a thaw.

7. Start by releasing the clutch slowly and accelerate cautiously. Allow at least a half-mile of clear road ahead to overtake and pass vehicles on icy roads.

8. Pump the brakes in stopping, even when using chains, to keep the wheels turning and slow down in gear before releasing clutch.

9. Keep a steady pressure on the accelerator to avoid spinning the rear wheels. If a skid starts, turn front wheels in the direction the rear is skidding.

10. When the surface is slippery try out the brakes occasionally to keep the "feel" of the road. Keep the speed down and avoid the necessity for quick stops and sudden turns.

ST. JOE MAN RECEIVES DEGREE IN EDUCATION

Leslie Wilbern, of St. Joe, is included in the group of 311 people announced Friday as making up the Fall graduation list of Indiana University. The degrees were awarded last week by the board of trustees and brings the total number of 1939 graduates up to 1383 as 1072 were granted degrees at the commencement exercises in June. The 1938 list contained 1290 recipients of degrees.

Wilbern received the master of science degree in education.

The Fall list of graduates is made up of students who are counted as members of the class of 1939 and were eligible to participate in the regular commencement exercises in June but due to occasional delays in completion of student records and to technicalities their diplomas were issued in the Fall. Awarding of degrees in the Fall should not be regarded as being to the discredit of the recipient since students completing the four-year course in shorter time are often included in the list, I. U. officials point out.

The degrees awarded Friday were as follows: master of science in education, 119; bachelor of science in education, 51; master of arts, 43; bachelor of arts, 26; graduate nurse, 21; bachelor of science in business, 19; bachelor of science in medicine, 10; master of science in business, 6; bachelor of law, 6; bachelor of science in home economics, 5; bachelor of science in chemistry, bachelor of public school music, doctor of medicine (cum laude), master of science and doctor of philosophy, 1 each.

TOMORROW

He was going to be all that he wanted to be—
Tomorrow.

No one should be kinder or braver than he—
Tomorrow.

A friend who was troubled and weary, he knew—who'd be glad of a lift—and who needed it, too—on him, he would call and see what he could do—
Tomorrow.

Each morning he stacked up the letters he'd write—
Tomorrow.

And thoughts of the folks he would fill with delight—
Tomorrow.

It was too bad, indeed, he was busy today, and hadn't the minute to stop on his way. "More time I will have to give others," he'd say—
Tomorrow.

The greatest of workers, this man would have been—
Tomorrow.

The world would have known him had he ever seen—
Tomorrow.

But, in fact, he passed on, and he faded from view, and all that he left here when living was through, was a mountain of things he intended to do—
Tomorrow.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Accidents usually leave scars—different kinds of scars. There are physical scars, of course—the cuts, bruises, burns, or whatever they may be.

But the kinds of scars that hurt most are those that sear into our minds and leave unhappy memories. These scars seldom heal.

We can all think back to some tragedy in which someone we know very well, or perhaps someone in our family, played the leading part. The vividness of such a memory depends on the seriousness of the accident.

Why take chances in driving an automobile carelessly or recklessly? Why try to cheat time? What do you gain?

It's Smart to Drive Carefully!

HERE'S TO THE ORDINARY MAN OF ST, JOE

The News overlooked him, for he never beat his wife,
He never tried to rob a bank or take another's life;
He wasn't very brilliant and he didn't try for fame,
So there was no occasion for the News to print his name.

The News overlooked him—he was never deep in debt,
He never slipped away from town with all that he could get,
He never made a million, never wrote a modern play,
So there wasn't much about him for the editor to say.

And the more I think about him, it's the ordinary man
Who's the glory of the nation and the strength of every clan,
So I pay a tribute to him—not the genius or the crook,
But the honest, normal, average man the News had overlooked.

CONSERVATION CLUB TO SPONSOR PEST HUNT

Plans were inaugurated Friday night at the Conservation Club meeting for the annual pest hunt again this year, and it will run for two weeks, starting on Monday, December 18 and ending Monday night, January 1, at 8 o'clock, when all pests will have to be in for final count. In order to make the counting easy and fast, Walter Keesler will have charge and pests can be delivered to him any evening of the drive, and the counts will be tabulated, and the member will be given a slip showing what pests were turned in, and the date.

The points to be considered on the pests are as follows:

Hawk	1000
Great Horn Owl	1000
Crow	500
Ground Hog	250
Rats	100
Mice	5
Sparrows	5
Starling	25
Red Squirrel	25
Red Fox	5000

The membership drive is on and on Saturday night, December 16, the list will be divided between W. L. Hurni and Robert Coburn, who will serve as captains.

The club has also decided to consider building an electric brooder for pheasants, and in this way be able to make money so that projects might be undertaken of a worthwhile nature. With the membership fee only, does not guarantee money sufficient to make a club venture.

About thirty members of the club were present at the Friday night meeting at the school house to see the pictures of the State Fair and to hear Mr. Ira P. Nelson, of Montpelier, Indiana, who represented the state department.

He stated that in the Division of Forestry the demands for trees has grown from 20 to 128 acres. If bird life becomes extinct, man will perish. Many species are fast passing out of existance due possibly to lack of protection and shelter. Reforestation is a solution to retaining much of our bird life.

With all our trade relationship with foreign nations, has brought new diseases and pests to our shores, and this taxes the wisdom of the conservation department in combating these problems.

WIDOW OF M. C. BLUE GIVEN LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION

The widow, M. Elnora Blue, and a son, Harmon Blue, both having applied for letters of administration in the Marion C. Blue estate, Acting Judge J. D. Brinkerhoff, Jr., Tuesday granted the application of the widow.

Soon after Mr. Blue's death Nov. 15 at St. Joe, DuWayne Kinsey was appointed administrator upon application of the widow. After both the widow and son applied for letters, the court revoked the letters issued to Mr. Kinsey.

The estate consists of $2,000 in personal property and $250 in real estate. The heirs besides the widow and one son, who lives in Fort Wayne, are another son, J. Fred Blue, of Chambersburg, and a daughter, Lela Picking, of Williamson, Pa. Mrs. Blue filed $4,000 surety bond.

Nearly 90,000 tons of fish were caught in Denmark in the last year.

USE THE HEAD

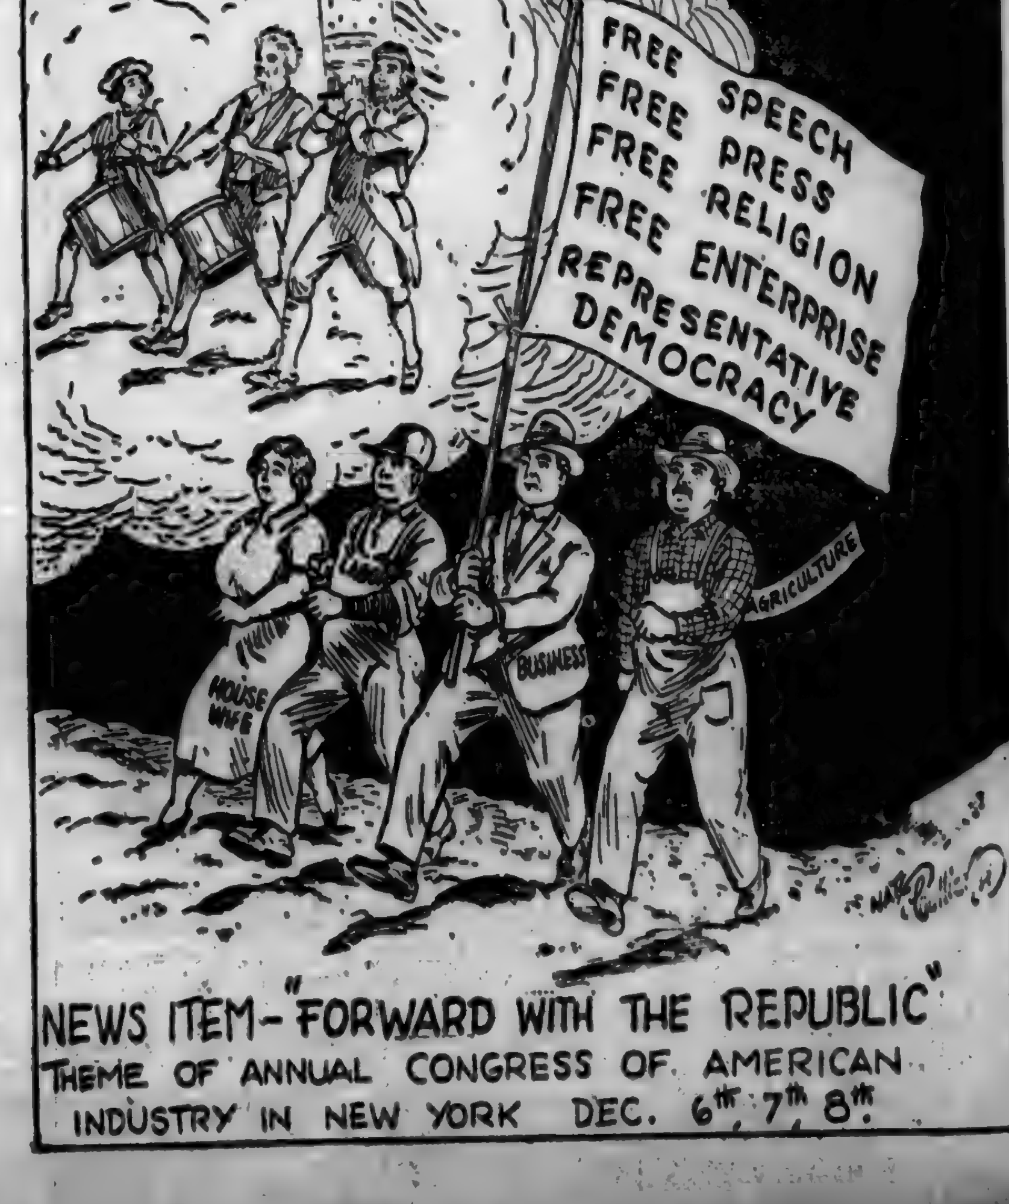
It approaches us again, as night follows the day, the season for colds in the head when paper tissues appear in all folds and pockets. The men of medicine have given us much but they admit they are stumped by the common cold which is too common indeed. There didn't seem to be much use, in early days, of guarding against this unpopular complaint. If you had it you snuffed and sneezed, coughed and blew, and continued to carry on your numerous duties without much thought for yourself and your neighbor. Today, after research has shown the light, the child who carries a common cold to school, carries it into many of the homes of town. The husband and father who uses no care in spreading his sneeze, hands it around to all members of the family who show little appreciation for the donation. The mother who fondles her young transmits this small head cold to another who can't fight it quite so well. We are much wiser in manners of prevention and sanitation due to our physicians, scientists and their investigations, but of what avail their research if we do not practice their advice. We migth use our heads for something besides an arena for a sniffle and a snuff by using precaution and consideration. Keep the child home from school for a few days and protect the schoolmates. Stay home yourself from the office and give your fellow workers a break. No one loves a good provider when he is providing a common cold.

A RECOLLECTION

A regional director of the Farm Security Administration, has suggested that ruralites with small farms and small incomes, dust off the old family churn of their yesterdays and go back to making butter as of yore minus electrical gadgets and mechanical devises. This request comes in the interest of economy but to many a local reader it deals with a far more picturesque way of life.

There is the recollection of careful hands bringing the crock of cream from a cool cellar or pantry when the churning was in order. There is the remembrance of a lad sitting in a spotless farm kitchen, munching an apple or dipping into a pan of popcorn with a book propped up in front of him as with swishing and plunging he helps to form the thick cream into golden butter. A churn was evident in every farm picture and the sound of one is vaguely familiar to many of us in St. Joe to whom it recalls days gone by. The family churn has since become an antique in many cities. It used to stay in the nearby woodshed until needed while today the machine is probably lined up with an electric washer or sweeper. The way may be more progressive and the result more satisfactory but it does mean that sentiment has become practical through the power of current.

THE SPIRIT OF '39



NEWS ITEM—"FORWARD WITH THE REPUBLIC" THEME OF ANNUAL CONGRESS OF AMERICAN INDUSTRY IN NEW YORK DEC. 6th 7th 8th.

WATCH FOR IT

We repeat, watch out for propaganda. The press is trying to label it for the readers, but the means to an end goes on all about us and often hard to distinguish from facts. German propaganda dropped in America stating that England sold poisoned gas to Poland and Poland used it in fighting, was one instance to create criticism. In Switzerland colored balloons bore part of a Hitler speech printed in French, on the sides. These were meant for French soldiers but a strong wind miscarried them into Switzerland. Each time we read of such means we wonder if this is a war of the pen rather than of the gun.

TO BE SURE

You can't help but notice how well-oiled is the machinery. The old family differences don't seem to arise as frequently these weeks. Duties are accomplished without much fuss. Short answers and pouting is very infrequent. Studies are undertaken with vigor and clothes hung up without a great to-do. The general air is one of unusual accord and harmony. In fact, it is almost too good to last and it won't after the 25th in most homes. As we recall, we used to brush our teeth extra hard, give ears a thorough cleaning, hands and elbows a harder scrubbing, when Christmas was in the offing. And after all nothing essential to the real spirit of Christmas has changed with the years. We are the same and so are the children.

A GOOD SLOGAN

The ink never seems to dry on those many cases of graft and wild speculation where investors lose small and large sums of money daily on wild schemes concocted by easy consciences. The St. Joe man who has money to lay out, should inquire carefully, thoroughly and painstakingly into the groundwork of the organization that is to handle his money. The "other fellow" learned too late and you are able to profit by his carelessness. Be prudent rather than unguarded and consider wisely the slogan of the nation's Better Business Bureaus, "Before you invest—investigate."

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Aside from the view which prevails in some parts of continental Europe, it is a shame for a large nation to fall upon a small one. In the case of Finland and the Soviet Union, it will be well to form a concrete notion as to what is implied by the use of the words "large" and small.

Without making an adding machine job of it, the contest, as to area is closely allied to pitting the state of Montana against the United States, including territories and dependencies, the Dominion of Canada, and Mexico. In point of population, Finland faces about what the state of Missouri might expect if assailed by continental United States and France, with Norway thrown in for good measure.

According to Russia, Finland is guilty of "profound hostility." If that is true, the Finns in Europe must be characterized by an aggressiveness and a lack of sound judgment that makes them markedly different from their brethren in America. The rumored truce is nothing reassuring. The Russian desire for a Finnish government which will represent all parties, has a ring very much like that of the high motives of Germany respecting Poland.

It can hardly be expected that the United States will take up the cudgel in favor of Finland, since the problem there is much like those of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, yet there is a warm feeling in the United States for the invaded land. While everything cannot be reduced to a matter of dollars and cents, the Finnish course regarding the World War debts has not been forgotten. There must be sound morality and high worth in a nation that does not forget conveniently to lay the correct amount on the line at the appointed time, and without resort to the expedient commonly known as "beefing."

It has to be admitted that the outlook for Finland seems gloomy, at least so far as present prospects are concerned. Few will care to go beyond the statement of former President Hoover that even if Finland falls, the day will come when it will rise again, since the forces of righteousness are not dead in the world: but perhaps the Finns can get at least a grain of comfort out of that thought. Great things seem promised by the empires of the Babylonians, the Medo-Persians, the Greeks and the Romans, yet at present they are no more than topics, to be hastily digested before examination time. The mills of the gods grind slowly, but, to complete the quotation "they grind exceedingly small." Finland can afford to wait. Unfortunately, in a short time she will be in a position where she cannot do much else.

The concluding words of the President's latest note on the subject of unrestricted warfare have been widely spread, but deserve all the added publicity that can be given them:

"I am therefore addressing this appeal to the (Soviet, Finnish) government as I have to governments which have been engaged in general hostilities, publicly to affirm its determination that its armed forces shall in no event, and under no circumstances, undertake the bombardment from the air of civilian populations or of unfortified cities, upon the understanding that these same rules of warfare will be scrupulously observed by all of their opponents."

That is a long sentence. The next is curt. "I request an immediate reply." Probably the Finnish typewriters were soon rattling away on the desired reply. The same promptness hardly can be expected from the Soviet Union.

After the answers are received, the situation will remain practically unchanged, and there will arise the heavy question: What can be done about it? It is to be regretted that Mr. Roosevelt and others of kindly disposition, will be substantially in the position of Glendower, who said that he could call spirits from the mighty deep, to which Hotspur repsonded: "Why, so can I, or so can any man, but will they come when you do call them?"

ILLINOIS FARMER RAISES 1,028 BUSHELS OF CORN ON SIX ACRES

Although 50 bushels per acre corn yields are not at all uncommon in this community in a favorable crop year and most farmers are not surprized when a test plot of an acre or so yields 100 bushels or over, still, hardly any farmer here has been prepared to imagine a yield of 171 bushels per acre on Illinois soil.

But that amazing yield was authenticated last week from a six-acre field on the farm of Roland Resler in Champaign County. Mr. Resler picked 1,028 bushels of DeKalb hybrid corn from six acres, as much corn as the average farmer in the United States grew on 41 acres this year.

farmer in his community, harvested, weighed and checked what is probably the biggest verified corn yield ever produced and corn-belt farm authorities are expected to recognize it as a new and official world's corn yield record.

Last Spring Resler planted the hybrid seed on a six-acre field that had been in sod for several years. He Spring-plowed the sod in March, dragged it down with an ordinary road drag, double-disked it twice and in May planted his corn so thick that an entire bushel went into the six acres. The usual planting rate in the corn belt is eight acres per bushel. No commercial fertilizer or manure was applied to the land.

"The corn was planted so thick that there for a while I didn't think it'd make a crop at all," Resler explained to a group of neighboring farmers who were out to his farm last week to see the field that grew the amazing yield. "The corn kept right on a-growing, and when we pickt it, there were five and six big ears to every hill. What a workout for my two-row corn pinker!"

One thousand to one return for his seed! One bushel planted, 1,028 bushels harvested! If that record becomes at all a common occurrence, the AAA will be cutting corn acreage allotments by 100 per cent instead of a modest ten as is forecast for next year.—Reynolds, (Ill.) Press.

MARINES

BORN IN REVOLUTION

Daring exploits on land and sea which have won for it an enviable reputation in the past, gleam like highlights in the career of the U. S. Marine Corps, which will celebrate its 164th anniversary on November 10.

Born amid the first flames of America's fight for freedom, American Marines took an important part in the War of the Revolution, fading into obscurity, along with the Army and Navy, when that struggle was over. Permanently organized in 1798, the Marine Corps has continued to be an important cog in the machine of our national defense.

Naturally the Marines point with pride to the action of the Continental Congress, which authorized the organization of two battalions in November, 1775. In the Revolution and in subsequent periods they have justified their existence by the character of their service on land or sea.

When they chant "From the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli," it is no idle boast. All over the world, from the battlefields of France to the remote islands of the Pacific, they have spread their banners and fought their way to victory, often with the odds against them.

They have the spirit of the expert craftsman who takes pride in his skill. While compiling a record of more than 200 landings from Panama to the Fiji Islands, the U. S. Marines have given their services to their country and corps with an unflinching courage. Their record speaks for itself.

George Washington and John Paul Jones knew them well; so did Stephen Decatur, David Porter, Admiral Farragut, George Dewey, and, in more recent years, General Pershing. Quietly the Marines pass another milestone, leaving behind a record of faithful service in the past, and facing the future with a renewed pride and patriotism.

Rings on bodies of wooloy worms indicate Indiana is to have the mildest Winter in 22 years. Everyone regards the woolly worm as an infallible weather prophet and one of our prophets says that by examining their bodies he has been able to predict correctly forthe last 10 years the kind of weather Winter will bring. Light rings denote mild weather, and dark rings cold and bad weather. If you have any barometer by which you predict the weather, let us know.

Don't take my WORD for it!

FRANK COLBY

FORE-HEAD

Noun. That part of the face above the eyes; the brow.

Do not allow the spelling of this word to mislead you. It is incorrect to say "fore-head" to rhyme with "more dead." Of seven standard dictionaries consulted, only one, the Century, lists "fore-head," and that as second choice.

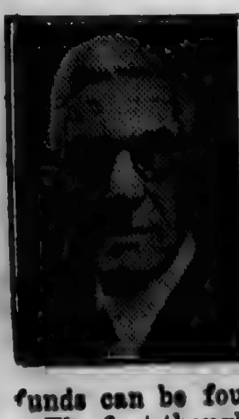
The American poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote this doggerel verse to impress his children with the correct pronunciation:

There was a little girl,
And she had a little curl,
Right in the middle of her forehead.
When she was good,
She was very, very good,
And when she was bad she was horrid.

The "o" in the first syllable should be given the "ah" sound, as in odd. Rhyme the second syllable with bed.

Correct pronunciation: FAHR-red. (Capitals indicate syllables to be accented.)

Doctor Townsend Says......



THE city of Toledo has closed its schools and 40,000 youngsters are on the streets and away from educational guidance. Officials say schools may be reopened in January, IF funds can be found.

The first thoughts of our colonial forefathers were of schools for their children. Education still remains our first consideration. When our educational systems break down, direst consequences may result.

With other great cities on the verge of Toledo's action it is high time our best minds were put to work toward a solution to the ten-year-old problem of depression in the midst of plenty. The future of America depends upon education of our children. The future of education depends upon a quick solution of the whole economic problem.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LIV (54 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1939 NUMBER 50

CHANGES AT COURT HOUSE ON JANUARY 1

Announcemet is made that when the Republicans gain control of the board of county commissioners Jan. 1, the posts of county surveyor and highway supervisor will be merged, with Wayne Van Auken, the surveyor, also assuming the duties of the supervisor. Clark F. Scholes, of St. Joe, is now the supervisor.

Capt. H. C. Springer, of Butler, will succeed Edgar W. Atkinson, of Auburn, a s county attorney. Commissioner Lloyd W. Yeiser of Concord Township, and Commissioner-elect Frank Hilkey, of Jackson Township, have not yet selected a county physician. Dr. Maurice O. Klingler, of Garrett, now holds that post.

George Clouse, of Auburn, will be reappointed court house custodian, with Fred Reeder, of Auburn, as night janitor. Mr. Clouse, Harpster Walter and Wm. Goe are now employed in the court house, one job being abolished under the new regime. Frank Bechtol, of Altona, and Harry Tomlinson of Auburn, will be firemen at the county heating plant. Orville Summers is now employed in that capacity.

Changes will be made in most of the regular highway department employes, who number fifteen. M. K. Baldwin now holds the position of deputy highway supervisor and mechanic.

The late Calvin C. Kain held both positions of county surveyor and highway supervisor until he became ill four years ago, when Mr. Scholes was made the supervisor. The salary of the surveyor is $1,550 annually and the law fixes the pay of the supervisor at $2 per mile of county highways. The mileage is about 750. However, the law provides that in the event both positions are filled by the same person he should receive only the higher of the two salaries. Under the new regime, more deputy surveyor hire will be required, but it is expected that a saving of several hundred dollars a year will be effected.

Board to Reorganize

It is also stated that the salary of the court house custodian will be reduced from $110 a month to $100 and the janitor and the firemen will be paid $75 instead of $80.

When Mr. Hilkey takes his place on the board he will succeed Arthur Grube, of Keyser Township, a Democrat representing the southwest district for three terms. Wm. H. Brecbill, of Smithfield Township, a Democrat, will remain on the board one year longer to represent the north district. Mr. Yeiser has two years longer to serve of his present term. He is the commissioner from the southeast district. Members of the board for the north and southeast districts will be elected next November.

The first action of the new board when it meets the first of the year will be to elect officers. Mr. Brecbill is now president, Mr. Grube vice president and Mr. Yeiser secretary. In addition to making its appointments for the year, the new board will award contracts for highway supplies for the year and for county farm supplies for the first quarter.

The present board will hold its last session Dec. 28 for the allowance of the bills to close the year.

Hess, 61, B. & O. mechanic, of Painesville, O., and husband of Mrs. Nettie (Hull) Hess, died at the Lake County Memorial Hospital in Painesville, Thursday following an operation on Saturday for a ruptured stomach ulcer. Mr. Hess had been a B. & O. mechanic for 45 years, 20 years being spent in the Garrett shops. He was born at Bourbon, Ind., May 10, 1878. He leaves his wife, Nettie, well known to many St. Joe residents, two sons and there daughters. The funeral was held Saturday with Auburn and St. Joe relatives attending.

The News comes to you in an abbreviated form today, due to the force being indisposed and unable to work at normal speed. Sunday evening as we were returning from Painesville, O., where we had gone on Saturday to attend the funeral of Percy Hess, accompanied by Mrs. Will Hull and daughter Mrs. Harry Clouse, and Mrs. Loretta Hull, we experienced an automobile accident 10 miles east of Bowling Green, O., when our car skidded and landed in a ditch, and turned completely over. Mrs. Loretta Hull has been confined to her bed since arriving home and the remainder of the party are trying hard to keep going.

WORE POWDERED HAIR

Powdered pigtails were once popular in the U. S. Marine Corps and every man appeared at dress parade or elsewhere with his hair neatly queued and whitened. Failure to conform to this practice would subject the offender to disciplinary action.

Such was the custom in Revolutionary times up until after the War of 1812, while during the intervening period the locks of the leathernecks glistened under a liberal sprinkling of flour.

Bluejackets, too, followed the seagoing fashion of the times, the American Navy adopting many of its customs from the Birtish. Single twisted braids worn by sailors were tied with a bowknot at the neck, but were not powdered. Collars of present-day naval uniforms are said to hark back to the time when they were first used to prevent soiling from pigtails.

Sometimes the marine flour barrel was empty, causing much annoyance to officers of the Corps, some of whom complained to Headquarters that they had no flour to "powder the sentries" —a grave lapse in regulations at the beginning of the last century.

When the flour barrel failed on the U. S. S. Philadelphia in 1803, a marine lieutenant wrote to his commandant that he would be willing to buy the flour himself, but lacked the necessary cash. Numerous orders of the time direct that the hair shall be "powdered and queued."

Estimates computed in December, 1807, include $150.00 for "flour for hair powder," apparently considered a sufficient sum to keep the hair of approximately 1,000 enlisted men properly whitened.

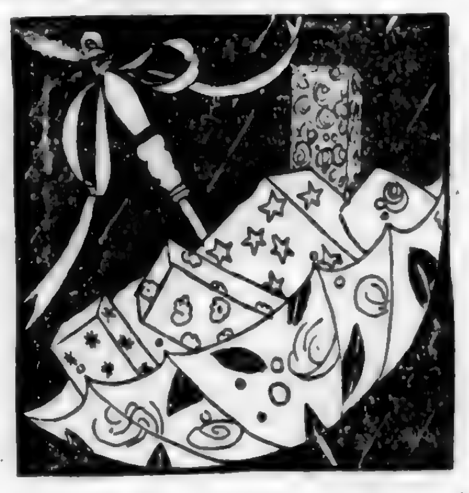
Nowadays Marine Corps regulations require that the hair shall be closely trimmed around the edges and that it shall not be over two inches in lengh, while shaved necks are strictly taboo. Marine Corps barbers must ply their shears freely and keep the sea soldier neatly shorn.

HAVE A BANANA!

Youngsters like this game. Give each one a banana and blindfold each player. Each one has to peel their banana and feed it to their partner. It is amusing to watch two blind-folded players one trying to find the mouth and the other trying to find the banana.

What to Do

BY PHYLLIS BELMONT



I AM to be married in a few months and have a couple of questions which are bothering me. In the first place, I have two sisters, one married, the other single, and I don't know which to have stand for me. They are both older than I am. If I choose one, I am sure the other will be very disappointed. Could it be possible to have both a maid and matron of honor? There are to be two other bridesmaids. If you think it would be all right to have both, which one would come down the aisle first? Another thing that puzzles me. Is my fiance obligated to attend any shower given for me?
Thank you. MISS R. N. Y.

Answer—There is no reason why you should disappoint either one of your sisters. Certainly, include both of them in your wedding party. The procession would be ushers first, then the two bridesmaids, followed by your single sister as maid of honor, walking alone, then your married sister as matron of honor walking in front of you and your father. I quite agree with your fiance, it would be very embarrassing for him to be included in a shower party without other men.

Jap Women Writers
Pagan Mistletoe
Russ Air Trains

Japan is believed to be the only country in which all the best writers are women. In fact, Japanese literature, for more than a thousand years, has possessed few, if any, works of outstanding merit that have been written by men.

Up to a century or two ago, mistletoe was excluded from the floral decorations of churches at Christmastime because it was considered to be an unholy plant, having been tainted with paganism before the time of Jesus through its use and worship by the ancient Druids.

Using "air trains" consisting of airplanes towing seven gliders each, the Russian army has demonstrated that it can drop, by parachute, as many as 2,500 infantrymen at one time.—Collier's.

Since 1789 the office of the chief justice of the Supreme court of the United States has been accepted 11 times and declined six times. Obliging Thief Leaves Own Picture as Evidence

When Dr. E. L. Brunswick's gasoline station was burglarized a second time in Chicago he decided to take steps. A radio and photography fan, Dr. Brunswick arranged a camera and photo electric cell in the station. Then a third attempt at robbery was made. But when the burglar crossed the photo-electric beam a flash bulb and the camera were fired simultaneously. The camera had taken the picture at the right, which resulted in the arrest of Harold Lewis, 19-year-old Woodstock, Ill., farm hand.

Raucous, brass-voiced air raid sirens, like this one in Sydney, Australia, are blamed by Dr. Edward Toulouse, president of the French league of mental hygiene, for a rise in mental disorders. Effects of the present sirens, he says, are worse than bombing.

Pattern includes panties, and it's quick and easy to make.

Gingham, linen, batiste or challis are pretty everyday materials for this frock. A party version will be sweet in organdy or taffeta, dimity or dotted Swiss, with ribbon instead of braid for trimming.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!
When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and cure it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.
Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.
If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such a one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. All-Bran is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

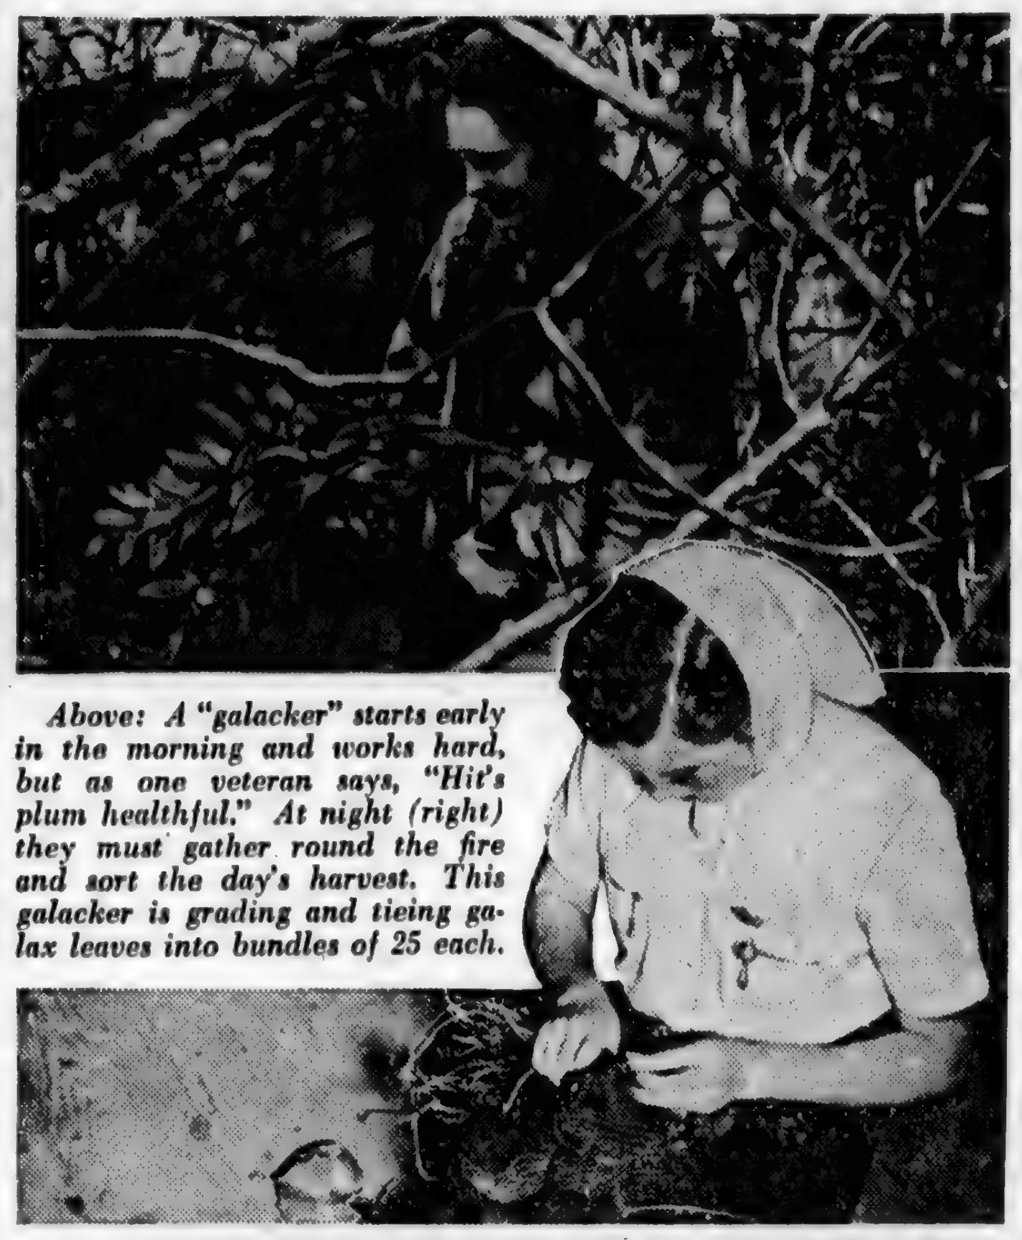
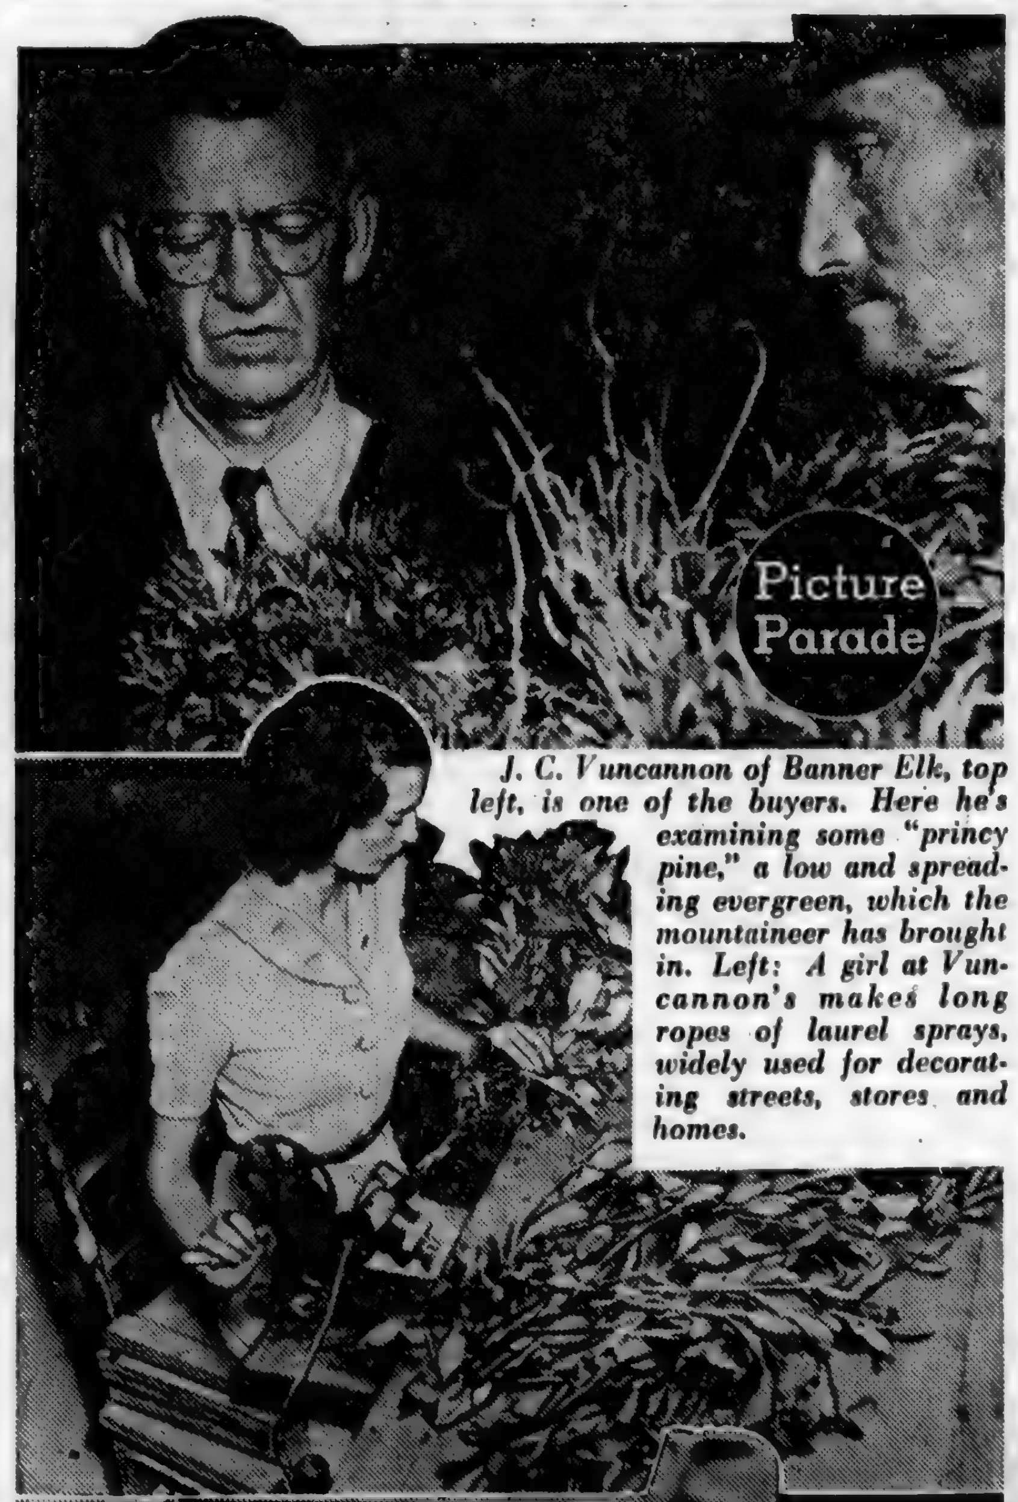
Greenery From N. C. Mountains Helps Spread Yuletide Cheer

"Galacking" is what they call this strange business up in the mountains of North Carolina, where the hill folks go hunting for galax leaves, sprays, hemlocks, holly, ivy and other greenery each autumn when the frost first strikes the pumpkin. Within a few weeks it's all been sorted, packed and delivered to communities throughout the country for decorating their streets, store windows, public buildings and homes during the Christmas week. Most likely there's some of it in your town today. The galackers don't get much money for their pains, but it doesn't cost much to live in the mountains, either. A few days' good harvest and they've added materially to the year's income.



Above: A "galacker" starts early in the morning and works hard, but as one veteran says, "Hit's plum healthful." At night (right) they must gather round the fire and sort the day's harvest. This galacker is grading and tieing galax leaves into bundles of 25 each.



J. C. Vuncannon of Banner Elk, top left, is one of the buyers. Here he's examining some "princy pine," a low and spreading evergreen, which the mountaineer has brought in. Left: A girl at Vuncannon's makes long ropes of laurel sprays, widely used for decorating streets, stores and homes.

HOLLYWOOD casting directors are usually pretty hard-boiled; practically nothing surprises them. But Victor Sutner, casting director for Edward Small Productions, Inc., now filming "My Son, My Son!" for United Artists, was considerably startled when he got the answers to questions asked Schuyler Standish, who reported to be tested for the part of a young boy.

"How old are you?" asked Sutner.

"Twelve."

"And in what grade are you at school?"

"The senior year at high school."

Sutner thought the lad was pulling a fast one. But he discovered that he had a prodigy on his hands. Young Standish is successful as an actor, both on the screen and radio, has won a scholarship as a violinist, writes plays and stages them for inmates of the Veterans' hospital at Sawtelle, Calif., and draws and paints and builds models.

"We Are Not Alone" is a picture you should be sure to see; the chances are that you'll remember it, not just because of Paul Muni's excellent performance, but because of Jane Bryan's appearance in the cast.

For Jane Bryan is being hailed as the new sensation of the motion picture world. Her last name is really O'Brien, and she's an American. When she was a member of Jean Muir's Theater Workshop, in Los Angeles, about four years ago, Warner Brothers discovered her. Bette Davis discovered her too, and has done everything she could to help her along in her career. Perhaps you'll remember her from "The Old Maid." Certainly you're going to do it because of her work in "We Are Not Alone."

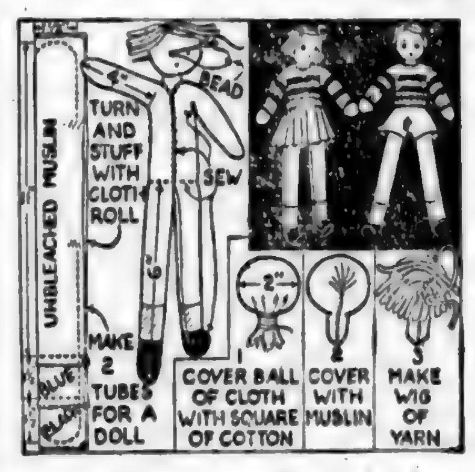
Quickly Made Dolls For Late Gift Choice

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HERE is a boy and a girl doll that you can make quickly. The body is two tubes of material made of fabric stitched together to simulate socks and shoes and then stitched, turned and stuffed as indicated at the left of this sketch. The head is a two-inch ball of cloth covered first with cotton and then with tightly stretched cloth sewed in the back as in steps 1 and 2. The wig is made as in step 3.



The diagram shows how the tubes and the head are sewn together. Sew across the top of the legs to make the doll jointed. Sew the arms down and the tips of the feet up as indicated. Sew clear through the head when adding the bead eyes about half way between the top and bottom. This shapes the cheeks. A few stitches in red make the mouth. The pleated skirt is cut straight. The trousers are slightly shaped in the crotch. The sweaters are made from the striped tops of children's socks.

PIONEER WOMAN OF DEKALB COUNTY DIES AT AGE 89

(Saturday, Auburn Star)

Mrs. Mary A. Ehlers, 89, prominent in W. C. T. U. work and an active member of the Baptist Church for decades, died at the Dr. Bonnell M. Souder Hospital Monday morning at 12:25 o'clock. She suffered a cerebral hemorrhage late Saturday afternoon while walking near the hospital with an attendant and her condition gradually grew worse.

The body was taken to the John R. Clark funeral home, where it will remain for the services, which will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Homer J. Aspy, pastor of the Auburn Baptist Church, will officiate and interment will follow in Evergreen cemetery.

Ten years ago Mrs. Ehlers wrote her own obituary, which is as follows:

"Mary A., daughter of Stephen and Laura Ward, was born in Wilmington Township, DeKalb County, Indiana Jauary 15, 1850. She was united in marriage to John H. Ehlers Jan. 4, 1869. After the death of her husband June 22, 1882, she was employed for twelve years as a missionary by the Women's Baptist Home Mission Society, working in colored churches and schools in the south. On account of eye trouble and failing health, she resigned this work and was for several years in Auburn and for 14 years in the home for retired missionaries in Fenton, Mich. She was always active in church and moral reform work and was a member of the W. C. T. U."

Mrs. Ehlers' father was Rev. Stephen B. Ward, a pioneer Baptist minister in DeKalb County who held an early charge in Wilmington Township and was the first pastor of the Auburn Church, the organization of which was effected September 15, 1852. He traveled through the woods on foot or on horseback to fill appointments, often traveling as many as 20 or 30 miles in one day. He was a member of the Indiana legislature in 1857 and was always a strong advocate of temperance.

Mary Ward, the first of three children, was married to Lieut. John H. Ehlers, of the Eleventh Indiana Battery in the Civil War. He was an Auburn druggist, his store being located on the site of the Hubbard Drug Store.

Although Mrs. Ehlers did a great deal for her church, she preferred that the gifts be given anonymously. Thru out her life she was an active crusader against the evils of drink. She was an instructor in Shaw University at Raleigh, N. C., for a period of about three years and did a great deal of good work among the negroes of the south. She also taught in the Baptist Mission training school at Chicago.

She returned here about ten years ago and about seven years ago she went to live at the hospital. She attended all the daytime services at the Baptist Church and before being stricken Saturday had been present at the regular Saturday afternoon prayer meeting.

Her only immediate relative who survives is a nephew, Dr. W. W. Swarts, 116 East Sixth Street.

THOSE RINGS!

Those bathtub rings! Try making a small bag of turkish towelling with a draw-string at the top. Put inside all the odds and ends of bath soap and hang the bag on the faucet or soap dish in the tub. Ask everyone in the family to rub the sides of the tub with this bag at the water line before beginning their bath. It will prevent a ring if your water is not too hard or the bather is not too dirty!

UNITED STATES
MARINES

THE CHRISTMAS SHIP

Santa Claus has been a familiar visitor to ships of the U. S. Navy in the past, and it is to be hoped that the white-whiskered old gentleman will not have to postpone these annual visits indefinitely.

Not that the sailors or U. S. Marines expect special favors from Saint Nicholas, but for years it has been the custom of our sea-going forces to entertain children from the vicinity of our navy yards when they come aboard ships on Christmas Day. Usually there is a big feast and a "Santa Claus" who has gifts for all the little folk who attend.

It may be that these parties will be curtailed this year, as were some of the activities of Navy Day, when throughout the nation official orders closed navy yards and other naval establishments as a precaution against sabotage and espionage. If so, the blue-jackets and marines may find some way to entertain their juvenile guests.

The custom started aboard the U. S. S. New York in 1915, and spread rapidly to other ships of the Navy. The funds for entertaining the children were donated by the bluejackets and marines who found the smiles of the happy youngsters more than ample reward.

Two years after its first Christmas party, the New York, which had become known as the "Christmas Ship," left suddenly to join forces in European waters. The ship had expected to be in an American port, but Christmas found the vessel at Edinburgh, Scotland.

The crew decided that a child was a child, whether American or Scotch, so about 125 waifs, many of whom were war orphans, were rounded up and brought to the ship in busses. They were given a good dinner, toys, presents and two bright silver shillings—probably the most cash they had ever possessed at one time.

Since then the custom has grown by leaps and bounds, ship after ship adopting an idea which has proved to be equally popular with the youngsters and their seagoing hosts.

DEAR SANTA:
I HAVE BEEN A GOOD BOY.
I DON'T WANT MUCH OF ANYTHING FOR CHRISTMAS. AFTER ALL, I HAVE ABOUT EVERYTHING I COULD WISH FOR. I HAVE COMFORTS OF LIFE UNKNOWN IN OTHER LANDS. I HAVE LIBERTIES THAT ARE MINE AS AN AMERICAN. THIS IS ONE CHRISTMAS, SANTA, WHEN I AM NOT ASKING FOR ANYTHING — EXCEPT FOR THE CHANCE TO KEEP THIS COUNTRY OF OURS AS GOOD AS IT IS, AND TO MAKE IT EVEN BETTER. WE CAN DO THIS IF WE STICK TO THE AMERICAN WAY OF DOING THINGS. THAT'S ALL ANY REAL AMERICAN WANTS.

AN EYE FOR AN EYE

That science has transplanted the cornea from one person's eye to the eye of another, thereby restoring sight to the second one ,is another one of our modern miracles. The operation is being done very successfully and bringing new vision. The discussion of this subject has brought the matter to the attention of all readers. When we heard of three people recently who had offered their eyes for this medical work, to relieve need in their homes, it made us wonder whether even such a blessing as this could not be carried too far. You have heard a St. Joe citizen remark, "I'd give her my right arm," but would he as quickly give her his right eye?

SPEAK UP

A St. Joe News friend and reader had the right idea when he put it to us about his newspaper and himself. He remarked that when he reads an article in his paper with which he doesn't agree, he wants to "have it out" with the editor. Then he realizes, he says, that one of the privileges as an American is the freedom of the press. So he cools off and is glad the editor is publishing what he wants and not what someone makes him print. There is always a variance of opinion and the right of free speech enables the reader to tell his editor just what he thinks. The suppression and control of the news would be far more distasteful to the reader than to disagree with the subject matter. The neighbor not being permitted to "speak his piece" or the editor not being allowed to print his, would not be tolerated by a free American.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Christmas, the next approaching festival, is one of two holidays observed the world over though not in all instances set aside by law, the other being New Years. When the day comes it will be celebrated in the spirit of its origin. Until that time, the mention of Christmas may well recall the warning of the Post Office Department: Wrap securely and mail early. If a Wray securely and mail early. If a person had an auto in good order; and plenty of gas, so that he could keep moving from state to state throughout the year, he would enjoy a sound of jollification, so far as legal holidays are concerned, in all there are sixty-two of them.

With a Presidential election remote in point of days and weeks but near enough to give rise to speculation and keen interest, both parties cannot help but wonder what is going to happen. If unreasonable dislike for the Administration, and blind attachment to it, are ruled out, and if the desire of the heart is not permitted to govern, it will have to be admitted that the future holds its own secret. There is no matter of political importance that will have to be acepted as an indisputable fact. Should the Democrats be hopelessly crushed at the polls in the Fall of 1940, and should the complexion of the House be changed, the Senate majority will remain Democratic. If that party wins as to the Presidency and the House, it need not bother about the Senate. Even though the Republicans make a clean sweep, the Senate will constitute a Horatius guarding the Democratic bridge.

On the twenty-fifth anniversary of a British naval victory in the World War, vessels of that country sent the German pocketship Spee into a Uruguayan port, so badly peppered that her commander thought that wisdom counselled flight. As to actual physical results, the crippling of the Spee was only an incident. The moral and psychological effect is quite otherwise. The fear of the unknown is something that has to be reckoned with. The Spee no longer, or at least for the time being, will turn up unexpectedly and open fire. Speaking of matters relating to naval warfare, an interesting chapter remains to be written about the British failure to send the Bremen to the bottom. The uncharitable intimate that discretion was the better part of valor. Those tinctured with Scottish thrift would have it that later the ship can be captured undamaged and be sailed under the English flag. Until more is known definitely, it will be well to accept the British statement that commercial vessels are entitled to warning before being sunk. Such a policy is not so altruistic as to lie beyond the prospect of belief.

According to all calculations, the Finns are due to catch it sooner or later. On the basis of mere members, Russia could supply the Finns with machine guns, arm her own soldiers with clubs, and win out in the long run. It is highly improbable, however, that the Soviet government will resort to methods so crude and costly as that. In the meantime, the task of putting down Finland has not been the simple military demonstartion that was promised. Regardless of what may happen hereafter, it has been established pretty clearly that man to man, Russians are not fighters of high order. When Napoleon was in flight from Russia, his freezing soldiers could be raised from the ground and started marching again by the cry: "The Cossacks are coming." Finland's present-day reply seems to be: "Well, let them come."

The League of Nations maye hav been a trifle slow in the past, so far as exercising its prerogatives is concerned, but its latest ruling was handed down in record time and was spoken trumpet-tongued. With less than a week of work the aggressor sign was hung on Russia, and all nations were urged to aid Finland. The League has come to be looked upon lightly, but before the war is over, that body may have re-established itself in public opinion and usefulness. It has suffered many "downs." The "ups" may have starter at last.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

December has usually been a bad month for pedestrians. Statistics show that during the last 8 or 9 years years more people have been killed in December than in any other month of the year.

It is a month with fewer hours of daylight than any other, and persons, especially pedestrians, are subjected to hazards because of improper and insufficient lighting from street lights and automobile headligths. Fog, rain, snow and sleet add to this hazard, making it doubly difficult for everybody.

Be on your guard. Do not let an accident mar your holiday. May this Christmas find you healthy and happy, and may you look forward to the New Year with renewed enthusiasm and with a safety consciousness.

Expressing Sincere Good Wishes

OUT OF THE PAST

The Christmas and New Year Season brings to mind the gratitude that is in our hearts for all the blessings that have come our way. In the past the friends of this organization have made possible progress and a certain amount of prosperity. Through these friendships life has been an enjoyable experience, one in which we have the confidence and esteem of the people whom we serve. All we ask is the pleasure of a continuance of these fine relationships—so that we may look with a genuine enthusiasm toward the future.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR BAD COLDS

A high medical authority recently stated that one of the most important things we can do, both to prevent and to correct colds or flu, is to take action against acidosis.

Keeping away from technical terms as much as possible, acidosis merely means that the body is less alkaline than it should be. It is present with every common cold and may even cause colds. It weakens the body's power to throw off germs and lowers resistance so that a cold gets an easy start. When once well started it is likely to "hang on" and get worse instead of better.

Colds are not the simple little thing we once thought them. We may live through dozens or perhaps hundreds of them, and then have one develop into something serious, with fatal results. Although physicians seem to feel that a cold nipped in the bud is a simple thing to take care of, they are constantly forced to do their utmost to save the life of a stubborn man or woman who refuses to seek their services until it is almost too late.

Hundreds of thousands of people have colds at almost any time. When an epidemic gets in full sway, the number leaps into the millions—and usually one or more epidemics, of more or less volume, pay a visit between the first of November and the last of March.

What do you do when such an epidemic hits your locality, or when you as an individual feel a cold coming on? At the first sign of a cold, you should go home as quickly as possible. Of course you may lose a day's time, but you may also save twenty years or more—which is more than a fair compensation. Take a hot bath and get into bed at once. Then drink a full glass of hot lemonade. The "sweat-out" that follows will eliminate the poisons.

In the morning pour the juice of one lemon into a glass of water. Stir in a half teaspoon of baking soda. Drink it while it effervesces. Repeat three times a day until all cold symptoms disappear. Also, see your doctor before the cold becomes serious. If your early home treatment does not seem to get at the root of things, call the family physician immediately, for if this treatment does not suffice that cold has probably taken root and is a very dangerous companion.

It may seem strange to suggest lemon juice in this way, after stating that the body needs to be made more alkaline. The fact is, that both lemons and oranges have a decided alkaline reaction when taken into the system, so that the lemon juice rapidly helps to bring about the alkaline condition desired.

Knowing this, it is easy to go a step farther and suggest more fruit cups, more lemonade, more fruit salads, more spinach, more celery, lettuce, cabbage—in fact more fruit, vegetables and milk while you are well, so that the body may be kept strictly alkaline. Reduce a bit on meat, fish, eggs, bread and other acid-producing foods, and fill up the vacant spots with vegetables and friuts. If you do this while you are well, you may not need to fight a cold this coming year.

But if a sneeze or a chill announces that a cold has arrived, follow the directions given above and forget about the fact that you have sometimes been able to fight a cold while at work. The man so healthy that he can do this latter task, may in the doing infect his fellow workers who will no be able to follow in his footsteps—which, by the way, is something well worth thinking of.

BATTLED WITH BUCCANEER

Odd as the adventures of the U. S. Marines have been, few of them have equalled their contacts with Jean Lafitte, who has been called pirate, smuggler, buccaneer and privateer.

With his early life shrouded in mystery, and with no credentials other than a privateer commission from the republic of Cartagena, he was the leader of a colony of pirates and smugglers located on the Baratarian coast, south of New Orleans, more than a century ago.

For about four years the pirates operated without interference. Then late in 1814, a naval expedition in which U. S. Marines, soldiers and sailors took part, attacked and destroyed the pirate stronghold, seized the pirate ships and scattered the buccaneers, numbering nearly one thousand men.

Soon afterward the apparently repentant Lafitte offered the services of himself and his men to General Andrew Jackson, who was making plans for the defense of the city against the British. This offer, General Jackosn, badly in need of men, accepted and the Baratarians in charge of the artillery signally distinguished tehimselves at the Battle of New Orleans.

Thus the U. S. Marines, and some of the other Americans who took part in that battle, found themselves serving beside the pirate and his men, only a few weeks after they had helped destroy his stornghold and seize his ships.

The pirates were pardoned by President Madison, but two years later they were active again near the site of the present city of Galveston. When pressure was brought to bear by the United States in 1821, because several of the freebooter's lieutenants had attacked American ships, Lafitte suddenly picked a crew to man his favorite vessel, "'The Pride," and sailed away into the legendary realms from which he had come.

FIRST LOG OF MARINES

Battered and worn is an old day book that rests in the archives of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, yet within its covers are some of the most dissimilar entries ever included in a single volume. Its pages reveal records of Masonic meetings, tavern bills, hardware accounts and data comprising the first log of the Marines.

Flames of the Revolution had not yet begun to smoulder in 1749, when a Quaker gentleman neatly inscribed in the leather-bound book the minutes of a Masonic meeting. For some six years thereafter accounts of similar meetings were faithfully entered in the ledger of Tun Tavern, formerly a riverside hostelry near the Delaware in old Philadelphia.

But the Masons moved to new quarters in 1755, leaving their ledger behind. A score of years later when the Marines were drumming up recruits for the new Continental Navy, they made their rendezvous at the tavern, and the book was used to jot down the names and records of the newly-recruited sea soldiers.

Almost as legible as when they were written the book reveals the muster roll, pay roll and other records of these early American Marines, the first of the entries beginning in 1776, and showing the various sums they were paid in pounds, shillings and pence.

Soon after 1779 the Marines abandoned the book and the tavern proprietor found it handy to itimize the bar bills of his customers, these accounts running up until 1786. Nearly fifty years later a hardware merchant used the aging tome as a day book.

TYNDALL BULK PLANT SOLD TO SHELL COMPANY

The Tyndall Oil Co. bulk plant at Spencerville, together with the Service Station, owned and operated by Mark Tyndall, has been sold to the Shell Petroleum Corp., the deal being completed some days ago and possession being given at once.

Maurice Hollabaugh has been retained to manage and operate the bulk plant at the Wabash depot, and the service plant down town Spencerville has been leased by Erving Vendrely, who had operated the place for Mark Tydall since its opening a year ago.

Here motorists will receive the same courteous treatment and the well known Shell products will be sold.

In severing his connections with the Spencerville business, Mr. Tyndall will accept a resposible position with the Shell Company within a couple of weeks, but as yet we do not know where he will be located. Mr. Tyndall has made a real success of his Spencerville plant and the community will miss him, but wherever his new work takes him, The News bespeaks for him success.

CULTURE CLUB

Mrs. Violet Platter, assisted by Dema Curie, and Troas Carpenter, entertained the Culture Club at a Christmas party at her country home near Coburn's Corners last Wednesday evening, December 20th.

There were sixteen active and one associate members present. Following a short business session, Mrs. Helen Schondelmayer and Sally Gerig sang two beautiful Christmas carols, Ethel Wineland gave a Christmas reading. Next all tried cutting down the candy canes blindfolded, some succeeded, others failed.

Ringing the Christmas tree, Mrs. Lena Meek scored highest.

Amid the jingle of bells and laughter, Mrs. St. Nick appeared with a gift for all. Some useful as well as ornamental.

Lunch was served at attractively decorated tables, tall red tapers were placed in the center of each table with the birch yule log and pine cones completing the centerpiece of the large table, tiny green Christmas trees marked the places of each guest.

Beside each plate was a surprise Christmas greeting made and given by the Brownies, under the direction of Mrs. Harriet Oberlin, and sponsored by the club.

The lunch was served in three courses, first course, fruit cocktail; second course, star and candle sandwiches, sugar plums, pickles and Christmas salad; third course, date and fruit cake with whipped cream and coffee.

After the lunch a gift exchange was enjoyed, all parting with Christmas wishes and a Happy New Year.

DAILEY—BREIDENBAUGH

After the wedding, a dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents to the relatives including Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dailey and daughter, of Garrett, father of the groom; Mrs. Ada Messenger and father, James Ervin; Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Rickett, grandparents of the groom, and the bride's immediate family.

On Tuesday evening the bride and groom were entertained to supper in the Rickett home, west of St. Joe.

Keith graduated from the St. Joe High in 1935. The couple left Tuesday evening from the Rickett home for their newly furnished home in Defiance, Ohio, where Keith is working.

Chrimas = = = New Year

The following poem was written by Mrs. Mabel Erick, at Spencerville, her life time friend, Mrs. Georgia Jenkins, also of Spencerville, and it has afforded so much pleasure for Mrs. Jenkins that she has asked for it to be printed, as it will bring pleasant memories to others of her acquaintances.

As Christmas time rolls 'round again
With the New Yeear almost here,
We wonder and dream of the future
Will it bring joy and cheer.

But as the twilight deepens
And Christmas carols fill the air,
While joyous bells are ringing
Sweet peace drives away all care.

And dreams of days and years gone by,
Pass before you as on parade.
Somt almost bring a sigh or tear,
Then almost anything you'd trade.

Could you swing again with the children
Who from the town have strayed,
To the barn up on the river bend,
Where we have often played.

Never knew another swing like that,
It almost took your breath away,
As out the big back door we'd swing.
My, wasn't that a day!

And the old log house where you were born
Back a little from the gate,
Brings back tht fondest memories.
Went there once with Cousin Kate.

Think if I were an artist,
I could picture it again.
The pathway 'ruond to the back door,
And its little window panes.

There were no lofty ceilings,
And rag carpet on the floor,
And not so many rooms or chairs,
But, there was always room for more.

Then down beside the old St. Joe
The wild flowers we would gather,
And picnic on its shady banks
In the lovely Summer weather.

But Winter time was always bes,t
When with our skates and sleds
We'd spend hours on the river
With the moonlight overhead.

Well, a sled, it wasn't worth much,
If less than six could ride.
And it seems the most fun we ever had
Was down the hills to glide.

But the queerest thing of all,
Is how one still can taste it yet!
The maple taffy in the Spring
Just before the sun would set.

'Twas always ready for us
When we got there after school,
In the days when we were Kiddies
And obeyed the Golden Rule.

Well, I'm running out of paper
And thec lock says its getting late,
So I guess I better say good-bye to Dord,
And come back to nineteen hundred thirty-eight.

And may the many, many years to come,
Shower you with joy and pleasure.
And would I wish for you,
Contentment without measure.

—MABEL ERICK.

A NEW YEAR ENTERTAINS

"I wonder what will be the first impression as my door swings wide and they cross the threshold to pay respectful and friendly greetings. Some of them will bow low, while others will straighten as though entering for battle. I must not appear unkind when I want so much to be cordial. If they will but give me the chance to prove my interest and desire to be one of them! I must convince them of my sincerity, though this meeting for the first time in a new world, surrounded by new faces, is not easy for me. I must not be overly gracious or they will be suspicious of me, nor must I permit coolness to make me seem unappreciative of their company. Many of my guests will wonder whether sponsoring me will be worthwhile and others will decide immediately that I am worthy of their time and friendship. I must remember that those whose handclasps are the heartiest, whose greetings the warmest, greatly outnumber the guest who is coldly reserved in my presence. The very air about me seems festive and laden with cheer and good will. How nice if it could always hold an atmosphere of fellowship and congeniality. Far too many times has this house seen unhappiness. Many were the griefs suffered by my predecessor, the renter '39. But she forgot all else but the happiness and joy she gleaned from her friends hereabouts. As she bid me goodbye, with tears in her eyes, she asked that I be gracious to these, my new neighbors. I must further the spirit of brotherly love in this community. Indeed, a lot depends upon me. I must bring something to my associates to enrich their lives as they leave their individual impressions upon mine. May our companionship be one to bring joy to memories in days to come. And when I too move on from this neighborhood, may I leave only the most pleasant recollections of our association."

1940
HAPPY NEW YEAR

IT IS OUR SINCERE HOPE that 1940 will bring to you a full measure of Happiness, Health and Prosperity. And may our friendship grow continually throughout the coming year.

A BUSINESS MAN'S DIARY

Assistant Attorney General Arnold proposes that 150 economists and lawyers be added to his staff to operate throughout the nation for enforcement of the anti-trust laws. This request is in perfect accord with the long-established practice of bureaucracy to increase but never to diminish its activities. It may not be long before almost any page from the diary of almost any business man will read something like this:

9-10 A. M. Arrived at the office to find two visitors, one from the Attorney General's office to inquire about trade practices in my Tennessee branch. The other was from the New York State Labor Relations Board to notify me of hearings on a charge filed against the company by the Widget Fixers Union. I don't employ any widget fixers.

10-11 A. M. The vice president of the Widget Fixers Union came with a statement of demands from Local 1313.

11-12 A. M. Engineer from the TVA called with an estimate of what the government will pay for my Tennessee property, whether I wish to sell it or not.

12 M.-1 P. M. Lunch with my lawyer and an investigator from City Hall who suspects me of withholding $8.13 sales taxes.

1-2 P. M. Man from the FHA came about the loan on my house, and before he left another arrived from the municipal housing authority to tell me my house will be torn down next month to make space for a USHA project.

2-3 P. M. Investigator came from the Wages and Hours Administrator to inform me that our brass polisher is working overtime ten minutes every evening without pay.

3-4 P. M. Woman from the social security office to examine my employment records since 1906; it took me an hour to convince her I have been in business only since 1910.

4-5 P. M. Four visitors at once, while I was buzzed on the telephone by an official of CCC who asked permission to make a camp on land I know is under water. Two of the visitors were from the Internal Revenue Collector's office, to warn me that if the TVA buys my Tennessee plant I must show the profit even if it's a loss. Meanwhile the other two visitors had got into an argument, so I escaped for home wondering who they were, only to learn by phone from my clerk that they had an order for ten carloads, but went elsewhere.

ASK FOR IT!

An advertising survey finds that over 90 per cent of the college students get what gifts they asked for. If Junior wanted a fountain pen and Mary desired a typewriter, Mary and Junior received what they wanted. It didn't need an advertising survey to show us that the majority of our children get what they want. The youth of today surely asks for more, but that doesn't mean they are more selfish than their elders, but that society has placed them in a position where more is required. Probably those watches, shavers, typewriters and pens are becoming necessities. Few of us in St. Joe who don't strive to provide our own with those things they want, and there aren't many of us who hold back those things we can afford. Sometimes we over-do the part of giver to the detriment of our children. Do we raise them to expect life to continue to proffer what they want, merely for the asking?

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

When New Year's Day comes around, the tendency is to look ahead rather than behind, a process that is cheerful but by no means the most safe and uncertain. Leaving the futuer to take care of itself, a year ago there was a real Czechoslovakian nation, functioning as such and with a working congress of its own. Turn back two years and China was busy strengthening her defenses against Japan. Mr. Hitler was making graceful gestures toward Italy. A five year jump finds the Saar territory ready to return to the German fold.

In 1920 the League of Nations was settling down to its first real business. At the New Year Holiday in 1900, the people were excited over the fact that Marconi had succeeded in sending the letter S by wireless telegraph from England to Newfoundland. The whole alphabet slips back and forth across the sea on January 1, 1940, but it spells little else than messages of trouble. Only a matter of days keeps Joe Stalin, one of the chief disturbers of the peace, from celebrating New Year's and his sixtieth birthday on the same date. It is the season of good will, but as to Mr. Stalin, few who are outspoken and sincere can repeat Rip Van Winkle's famous toast: "May he live long and prosper."

In the United States, compared with Europe, the New Year opens in calm content. There is no suggestion that former President Hoover should be sent in chains to Alcatraz prison, nor are those who do not like President Roosevelt formulating a plan whereby he can be shipped into exile. To be sure, the year 1940 must bear the burden of selecting a new Chief Executive, but the worst that is likely to happen is that somewhat less than half the country is going to be disappointed.

German efforts to make a naval hero out of the skipper of the Graf Spee, on account of his suicide, did not raise much enthusiasm in America, and probably did not in the Fatherland, outside of circles under the influence of outworn traditions of the sea. Capt. Langsdorff seems to have put up a good fight. When he saw that a thousand lives and several million dollars worth of property were in danger, he moved them to a safe place and took care of them. All this sounds like commendable humanitarianism and sound-headed business prudence. It is for this that he should receive credit. Upon the whole, it was a good job, not very different from that done by a man who gets his family and most of his furniture out of a burning house. There was neither disgrace, nor ground or adverse criticism.

The President's message on the finances of the nation, due to be delivered early in the year, is awaited with interest and with some degree of anxiety. It was not so long ago that those in charge of the Treasury were quoted as saying that added taxes were not in prospect. At present, rumor has it that Congress will be asked to do some yeoman service in the way of balancing the budget, even though the voice of the tax collector has to be heard more loudly in the land. Prophecy has it that new forms of taxation, rather than an extension of existing methods, are in the offing: all of which may turn out to be but a poor guess when the President speaks.

Enlarged taxation plans proceeding from the White House, will, of course, receive liberal party support, and aid may be expected from external groups that do not like the growing deficit. A tax law, however, does not make an agreeably-reading document for circulation among the constituency, and practical as well as theoretical considerations may build up an opposition of respectable power. If, in view of the approaching Presidential election, either Democrats or Republicans come out for a tax boost, they will have to be given credit for high moral courage, even though they cannot be commended for political sagacity.

Terry Pin's Tips on READING

FREDERIC A. BIRMINGHAM

Consolidated News Features, Inc.—WNU Service.

Everyone should curl up with a good book once in a while. No matter how good the book is, however, curling the wrong way is hard on the back.

Always pick a poor book to read in a comfortable chair, so when you fall asleep, you miss nothing.

Every library should have plenty of classics. They are usually so heavy they keep the books you do read nice and straight on the shelves.

No one knows who wrote Shakespeare. This is not surprising, since the mails were very undependable in those days.

LOG of the UNITED STATES MARINES

MOST HISTORIC ISLAND

Islands with stories as romantic as any which may be found among the tropical islands of the South Seas border the coastline of the United States, but in the modern rush of civilization their early histories are often forgotten.

Among them are Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket, discovered by Bartholomew Gosnold before the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock; Long Island, for years a bone of contention between early Eglish and Dutch settlers; or nearby Manhattan, purchased from the Indians for twenty-four dollars worth of beads, cloth and trinkets.

NEW YEAR'S CHEER
1940

Cape Breton was controlled by both British or French in the early years before it finally became British, and there is evidence of both Norse and Icelandic occupations before Columbus was born. San Salvador and Haiti, visited by the daring navigator in 1492, are stepping stones to continental history.

Long forgotten pioneers once lived on Parris Island, one of the archipelago lying off the coast of South Carolina, which is now a training station of the U. S. Marines. French Huguenots settled there in 1562 and built a fort. A few years later came the Spaniards, leaving behind them when they left two other forts. All of them were burned or destroyed.

More than three centuries later historians remembered the island's early inhabitants. Soon the spades of the U. S. Marines unearthed what they believed to be Charlesfort, built by the Huguenots. Later its well-preserved foundations were found to be those of San Marcos, built by the Spaniards in 1577.

Today a monument to the Huguenots stands near the site of these early forts on what is probably America's most historic island, where Huguenots, Spanish pioneers and primitive Indians dwelt long before American Marines fought in the Revolution.

NEW TOWN BOARD TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Monday evening the oath of office was administered to the new town board by the retiring officers. Willard Hurni, being the old board member was chosen as the chairman for the year.

The other members are Clayton Chorpeniung and Wilbur Yeiser with A. Meade Baker, as clerk and treasurer, who provided a surety bond for the faithful performance of his duties as guardian of the finances of the town. Henry C. Springer will be retained as city attorney, and Lysle McMaken was selected as cutosdian of the city hall.

Four applications were made for the custodian job, but the new board was unable to make a satisfactory choice, to all members, so they went out and made a temporary choice selection to fill the place.

The board decided to meet once a month instead of every two weeks, and this to be the first Monday night. Should this prove unsatisfactory to the citizens the board will then resort to the twice a month routine. It was also decided to comply with the wage scale of last year for all labor and truck hire.

The retiring members of the board were D. B. Ridgway and John Wineland as trustees, and Frank Akins as clerk-treasurer.

CONSERVATION PEST HUNT DRIVE ENDED SATURDAY

The annual pest hunt closed Saturday evening with the counting of the pests and a complete tally of the members signed up for 1940, by Willard Hurni and Cliffton Draggoo.

The pests turned in by Cliffton Draggoo and his men were: Forty rats; 2 mice; 146 sparrows; 13 starling and 1 red squirrel, which gave them 5,090 points. Fifty-six memberships were turned in, bringing the total points up to 6,490 for Draggoo.

The pests turned in by Willard Hurni and members were: One hawk; 17 rats; 4 mice; 892 sparrows; 43 starling, with a score of 8,255 points and with the additional points from 63 new members brought his total points up to 9,830, which made Hurni the winner by 3,340 points over Draggoo.

The victory is to be celebrated by a feed put on by the losing captain and his crew, the date to be announced later.

The captains stated that the annual pest hunts are showing great results in this territory as pests of all kinds were scarce and hard to find, that in past years when it was easy to secure hundreds of sparrows in most any barn, now only a dozen or so were found roosting, and such was the report all over the territory covered by the head hunters.

WASHING WOOLENS

Never dry woolen garments in extremely hot or cold temperatures. Absorb excess water by wrapping in heavy towels. A good way to dry woolen sweaters is by pinning them to a large blanket with darning needles and then hang the blanket on the line. The garmets will hold their shape nicely.

ENGENE HOOK DEFRAUDS AUBURN GRAIN CO. OF $219.85

Eugene Hook, 20, of Jackson Township, Thursday confessed to the crime of grand larceny and was released on $1,000 bond pending arraignment before Judge Endicott Saturday.

Hook admitted that he stole $219.85 in cash from the Auburn Grain Company's elevator at Spencerville. He had been employed there since last April as truck driver and mill hand. The management began to find shortages in July and recently the aid of police officers was enlisted in determining the source of the trouble.

The investigation made by Sheriff Artus Coyle and State Detective Edward Rose led to the questioning of young Hook Thursday. It was found that he made out fictitious weigh tickets indicating the receipt of grain and soy beans from various farmers and he took the amounts of cash from the cash drawer. The officers interviewed farmers and learned that some of them did not make the sales to the elevator that were indicated by the weigh tickets.

Young Hook said he spent the money for his personal use. His parents are Ermal W. and Priscilla Hook. The affidavit prepared by Geo. E. Mounts, prosecuting attorney, was signed by Detective Rose.

A sentence of one to ten years to the state reformatory was suspended when he later pleaded guilty in the DeKalb Circuit Court Saturday afternoon to a charge of grand larceny.

The court showed leniency upon condition that the youth behave well, pay the court costs and make restitution of the stolen amount, $219.85. He was released in the custody of his father.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hanauer and two sons and Mrs. Marjorie Ramsey, of Fort Waye, spent Sunday here with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Curre.

Basketball has never proven as successful in taking the mind off of lessons, as football.

Twixt optimist and pessimist, the difference is droll; the optimist sees the doughnut, the pessimist the hole.

And they say Stalin is a confirmed pipe smoker. The villian in our plays always smokes cigars or cigarettes.

About the only prediction for 1940 that is worth betting on, is that you hear the year will have 365 days.

Chas. Koch is of the opinion that his Christmas was a huge success except for a duplicate in ties, socks and printed Christmas cards.

Leslie Wilbern figures that all England has to do is to say "Boo" and Germany goes out and scuttles one of her own boats.

Even if the world would decide to call it off and settle down, there would always be people who would be bored with the tranquil life.

The time is not far off when the average man in St. Joe will take great pride in asserting he is a plain, old-fashioned fellow.

Great Britain speaks of being low on starch. We hope that Hitler dislikes a soft-collared shirt.

So many people think they need not pay heed to conscience the first time. She might play a return engagement!

Every citizen in St. Joe is born free and equal until he grabs a pen and puts his name on the dotted line.

USELESS DEATHS

A father sues a daughter, a boy shoots his girl because she refused him a date, a mother slays a baby because it kept her home at night, and we call ourselves a civilized people! This is the beginning of a new year and what better way would there be than to think twice and count ten in order to preserve the decencies of living. Too many unwarranted suits, too many unmerciful deaths, all facts horrible and ridiculous. We are a sane people, as a whole, but when we hear and read of these cases of viciousness and crime, we begin to wonder if we are mentally competent, as a whole.

RELIGION IN SCHOOL

"Twenty million American youths are spiritually illiterate." There are some who will doubt this and others in St. Joe who have long felt the need of religious education for our young. We figure this a Christian nation, but it is the younger generation who will keep us a Christian nation. One city starts a course in their public high schools in religious education and there will be many educators waiting to see the results of the experiment. This has been avoided in schools due to the objections of various religious sects. It is a delicate subject and approaches the same explosive tendency as bringing politics into the schoolroom. Perhaps obstacles may be overcome to bring into being a new respect and appreciation, understanding and belief, of this book, Bible.

TOO CLOSE!

"Unless we watch out we will be in it ourselves." These words are used too carelessly and we too frequently dwell on the possibility of the statement being true. The fact that our shoreline has now become a haven of refuge for ships of warring nations, is an item not to be discounted in the summing up. Look at it in the light of sunshine and palms, tropical nights and sandy beaches and you will see how pleasant our southern coast for security. The Winter is cold and raw in climes where pop the guns. Why not stear into a season of warm breezes and bounding surf warmed by the Gulf Stream. What a talking point for a Florida real estate dealer. For those who wish to enjoy the comfort of the sun come south and get into your binoculars and view a few sea engagements of belligerent nations, off our coast! After all, Florida has highly advertised her warm semi-tropical climate. But we may cease to be pleasant about the affair and become slightly cross with them for bringing their private wars to our shores. The fact that England refuses to regard the Pan-American pact is not going to cause us to shoot a gun across her bow, but we have tried to remain out of the hostilities abroad and here in St. Joe we would like to have those hostilities stay home and not dumped in our lap.

ROBERTS GIVEN SIXTY DAYS AT STATE PENAL FARM

Olan Roberts, 20, of Spencerville, was fined $10 and the costs and was sentenced to the state farm for sixty days Saturday in the DeKalb Circuit Court when he entered a plea of guilty to a charge of drunk driving. He also was forbidden to operate a motor vehicle for a year.

The affidavit signed by George E. Mounts, prosecuting attorney, was signed by State Policeman Samuel Patton, of Angola. The officer investigated an accident that took place on state road 6 west of Corunna near the Noble county line the night of November 26 in which an automobile driven by Roberts collided with two new Nash cars that were being driven from the factory.

Roberts was with Irvin Diehl, of Huntertown, formerly of Auburn Junction, who owned the automobile. All three cars were badly damaged. However, Roberts was able to drive Diehl's car away. He was on parole from the Indiana reformatory, where he served time for burglary, and he told officers that he was afraid he would be taken back and forced to serve nine years more to complete his maximum sentence. He therefore decided to leave. He went to Chicago and then returned to his former home at Sneedville, Tennessee. He was caught there and was brought back to DeKalb County by Officer Patton and a parole agent.

He was employed as a section hand at St. Joe at the time of this instance and he left without notifying anyone and the B. & O. made an effort to deliver the check. He worked the entire Summer for Ralph Bechler at the St. Joe salting station.

We are beginning a new year. What will 1940 hold for you as a driver and as a pedestrian as far as safety is concerned?

It is too early to tell definitely what the results of all safety activities in 1939 are, although from all indications, there is a possibility of a slight reduction in accidents. I will give you definite information just as soon as actual figures are released.

In the meantime let's forget 1939 and look forward to 1940, and let every today and tomorrow be a safe day, free from all types of accidents.

LOG of the UNITED STATES MARINES

DON'T TREAD ON ME!

Rattlesnakes bedecked the drums of the American Marines who were rallying recruits to fight in the Revolution. Sometimes these snakes were shown undulating across the striped flags of the period. Beneath the coiled serpent was lettered the ominous warning, "Don't tread on me!"

Startled citizens of Philadelphia noted the odd device as the sea soldiers paraded the streets. Even Benjamin Franklin admitted he was puzzled by the insignia as the Marine drummers thumped a staccato tattoo to the shrill accompaniment of fifes.

Just when the rattlesnake motif first won favor during the Revolution is somewhat of a mystery. The fact that the device appeared on early continental flags used in Virginia and on vessels of the South Carolia Navy indicates that it was of southern origin.

It is rather significant that Colonel Gadsden, of South Carolina, was appointed a delegate to the Continental Congress late in 1775 at about the same time the rattlesnake device appeared on the drums of the Marines. Soon afterward a rattlesnake flag was presented by Colonel Gadsden to Commodore Esek Hopkins, commanding the Continental Fleet.

This rattlesnake flag, or one of similar type, was carried ashore by Marines and sailors who landed at New Providence in the Bahamas in March, 1776, capturing a large supply of arms and ammunition, which was badly needed by the Colonists.

Opinions as to the merits of the rattlesnake symbol were divided, but it apparently pointed to the union of the colonies. A writer of the time remarked: "One of the rattles, singly, is incapable of producing a sound, but the ringing of thirteen together is sufficient to alarm the boldest man living."

Istanbul, Turkey, has ordered all fortune tellers off the streets.

CHARLES A. BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Opening sessions of Congress are always colorful and brilliant affairs, with all of Washington participating. The 1940 edition of the Seventy-Sixth Congress, which got off to a flying start this week on Capitol Hill, was no exception.

The House was acrawl with cameramen, movie men and microphones as the two branches of Congress met jointly to receive the President's message on the state of the Nation.

Photographs were hanging out perilously over the gallery rails, and as the traditional opening ceremony got under way, you could hear the buzzing hum of movie cameras and the dull popping of exploding flashbulbs.

On no other day of the year is there such a wholesale invasion of microphones and cameras. Only during this one session are photographers and radio men permitted access to the staid and hallowed halls of Congress. So they make the most of their rare opportunity.

All in all, it resembles nothing so much as a scene on a busy Hollywood studio set—say of the movie, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

AN AIR OF TENSION hangs over the chamber as the Congressmen appear to take their seats. An air of expectancy hangs over the galleries, brimming with reporters, members of the President's family and the diplomatic corps, and scores of Capital celebrities.

On the floor of the House, as the moment for the President's appearance draws near, the Congressmen seat themselves in solid rows—Democrats on the right, Republicans on the left.

As the Senators file in, arm in arm, they jump to their feet, to applaud Vice-President Garner takes his place on the rostrum beside Speaker Bankhead. Then come members of the cabinet, who are seated in a semi-circle in front of the platform, and the stage is set.

Ututored observers can easily pick out the New Dealers and the anti-New Dealers by the way they react when the President is announced. The clapping and cheering is always the loudest and longest on the Democratic side. The Republicans applaud politely—but as silently and as briefly as possible.

A TINGLE of new life shot through hundreds of lobbying organizations as the new Congress convened.

Duplicating machines that have been silent for weeks were oiled up and given a tentative twirl. The shower of public statements that will soon grow into a deluge began to rain down.

There are over six hundred organizations in Washington that exist to promote the interest of their members, by battling for or against legislation in Congress and in other ways.

NO ONE HAS EVER chartered in advance the course of a session of Congress with any degree of accuracy. Why the same Congress can first defeat and then pass a neutrality bill, for example, and then sock the daylights out of another innocent bill in the House, after it has been passed by the Senate is a mystery that depends upon how the gentleman from Kokomo, Indiana, Walla Walla, Washington, and other points feels on a certain morning.

We are glad to let our friends, the political prognosticators, predict what will happen to the third term resolution, the national defense bill, and tax, spending and labor legislation when they hit Capitol Hill. After seeing the House turn turtle on the Neutrality Bill last Fall, nothing would surprise us very much.

SIDELIGHTS: George W. Gillie and Raymond S. Springer have taken up residence at the Roosevelt Hotel. To inquiring friends, however, they quickly explain: "I, was named after T. R., not F. D. R." . . . Gerald W. Landis is called "Two Penny" by his intimates. The nickname dates back to a childhood incident. . . Louis Ludlow remained in Washington during the recess of Congress. . . . And so did Charles Halleck, who is taking part in the House investigation of the National Labor Relations Board. . . When President Roosevelt blunders in reading a radio speech he never turns back. He knows that to repeat makes the radio audience aware he is reading, not talking. . . Martin Dies that two-fisted foe of imported isms, was married before he was 19. At 38, he has a son who is six feet, two, almost as tall as his Dad. Through the heat of his controversy with the New Dealers, Dies has kept on his office wall a picture of President Roosevelt, together with one of Jefferson.

Roger Amsler, 18-year-old high school boy from Rensselaer, Ind., whose purebred Hampshire hog was declared grand champion barrow of the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, is shown as he was congratulated by President S. G. McAllister of the International Harvester Company. Roger is an outstanding Hoosier 4-H Club member and Mr. McAllister is a member of the National Committee for 4-H Club work.

He was a former county highway employee.

Representatives of the Indiana State Highway commission are in DeKalb County negotiating with farmers for additional right-of-way for the paving of Road 427 south of Auburn to the DeKalb-Allen county line. The present asphalt surface, which is in bad condition, will be replaced with concrete next year. Several changes will be made in the route to straighten out turns in the present road.

The wedding took place at the Brush College Church of God, on the County Line, the Rev. V. A. Chesterman officiating. The couple now are living in Bryan, Ohio, where Mr. Burns is employed at the Bryan Art Works. Mrs. Burns was a 1939 graduate of the Spencerville High School.

What to Do
BY PHYLLIS BELMONT

SOMETIMES I like to give my guests a treat by serving their breakfast in bed: besides, it is really a convenience to me, as I have many things to see to, getting the children off to school and business and so on. Do you think this is a polite thing to do and how shall I go about it? I'll appreciate your suggestions.

MRS. E. I. M.

Answer—An excellent plan. Your guests will probably enjoy the extra nap and you will have time to arrange their trays daintily and perhaps enjoy a cup of coffee with them when the house is quiet and settled down. Why not provide a special little service for just such occasions—one of the trays with folding feet that make breakfasting in bed so comfortable, a little breakfast set in colorful pottery and perhaps napkins to correspond? These sets comprise a coffee pot, hot-water jug, plates, cereal dish, one or two cups and saucers and a deep plate with cover to keep toast or rolls nice and hot. Add a tiny glass dish for holding jam or marmalade, a cunning glass vase for a flower, and you have a breakfast service that will be charming.

HUNTERS MUST CARRY 1940 LICENSES TODAY

Hoosier hunters and trappers must carry their 1940 licenses as the 1939 permits expired at midnight, Sunday.

In addition to the combination license covering hunting, fishing and trapping, 1940 licenses are now required for buying furs, taking mussels and engaging in other activities for which the state laws require a license issued by the Department of Conservation. Attention also was called to the fact that the special 50-cent resident fishing license for women is not good for hunting or trapping.

Resident and non-resident licenses for hunting, fishing and trapping may be secured from county clerk or at News office, St. Joe.

"LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME"

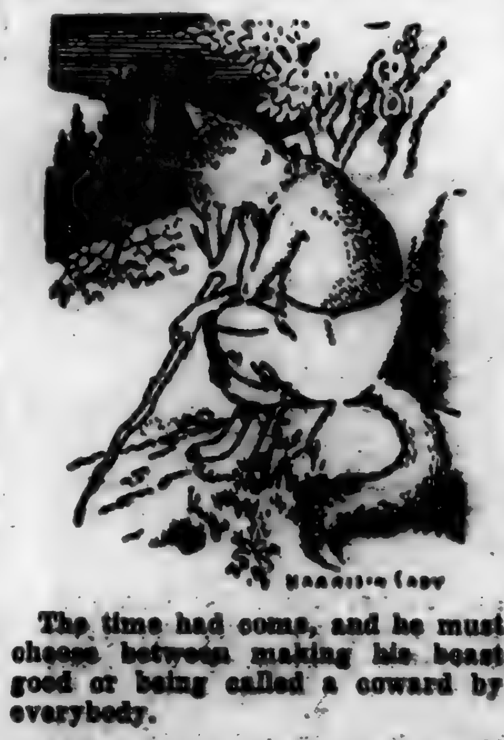
by Thornton W. Burgess

REDDY FOX SPENDS A BAD NIGHT

It almost always happens when a boaster blows his horn
He wishes that he hadn't e'er the coming of the morn.

REDDY FOX wished so with all his might. He wished that he had kept his tongue still about not being afraid to meet the strange creature that had given Peter Rabbit such a fright. When he had boasted that he wouldn't be afraid of it, but that if he should meet it he would stop to find all about it, he didn't have the least intention of doing anything of the kind. He was just idly boasting and nothing more. You see, Reddy is very fond of boasting. He is one of the greatest boasters in the Green Forest or on the Green Meadows. He likes to strut around and talk big. But like most boasters he is a coward at heart.

Unc' Billy Possum knew this, and so he dared Reddy to go the next morning to the foot of the hill where Prickly Porky the Porcupine lives, and where Peter Rabbit had had his strange adventure, and where Unc' Billy himself claimed to have seen the same strange creature without head, tail or legs which had so frightened Peter. Unc' Billy had said that he would be there himself up in a tree, where he could see whether Reddy really did come or not, and so there was nothing for Reddy to do but to go and make good his foolish boast if the strange creature should appear. You see a number of little people had heard him boast, and had heard Unc' Billy dare him, and he knew that if he didn't make good he would never hear the end of it, and would be called a coward by everybody.



The time had come, and he must choose between making his boast good or being called a coward by everybody.

Reddy didn't sleep at all well that afternoon, and when at dusk he started to hunt for his supper he found that he had lost his appetite. Instead of hunting he spent most of the night in trying to think of some good excuse for not appearing at Prickly Porky's hill at daybreak. But think as he would he couldn't think of a single excuse that would sound reasonable.

"If only Bowser the Hound wasn't chained up at night I would get him to chase me, and then I would have the very best kind of an excuse," thought he. But he knew that Bowser was chained. Nevertheless, he did go up to Farmer Brown's dooryard to make sure. It was just as he expected—Bowser was chained.

Reddy sneaked away without even a look at Farmer Brown's henhouse. He didn't see that the door had carelessly been left open, and even if he had it would have made no difference. He hadn't a bit of appetite. No, sir, Reddy Fox wouldn't have eaten the fattest chicken there if it had been right there before him. All he could think of was that queer story told by Peter Rabbit and Unc' Billy Possum and the scrape he had got himself into by his foolish boasting. He just wandered about restlessly waiting for daybreak and hoping that something would turn up to prevent him from going to Prickly Porky's hill. He didn't dare to tell old Granny Fox about it. He knew just what she would say. It seemed as though he could hear her sharp voice and the very words:

"Serves you right for boasting about something you don't know anything about. How many times have I told you that no good comes of boasting? A wise fox never goes near strange things until he has found out all about them. That is the only way to keep out of trouble and live to a ripe old age. Wisdom is nothing but knowledge, and a wise fox always knows what he is doing."

So Reddy wandered about all the long night. It seemed as if it never would pass, and yet he wished it would last forever. The more he thought about it the more afraid he grew. At last he saw the first beams from jolly, round, red Mr. Sun creeping through the Green Forest. The time had come and he must choose between making his boast good or being called a coward by everybody. Very, very slowly Reddy Fox began to walk toward the hill where Prickly Porky lives.

ST. JOE NEWS.

VOL. LV (55 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1940 NUMBER 2

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

To produce hatching eggs feed a satisfactory laying ration, and along with the regular grain and mash feeding, it is usually advisable to provide plenty of grain feed, water, some milk if available, oyster shells, and direct sunshine, says County Agricultural Agent C. E. Baker.

Alfalfa hay which is green colored is desirable, however clover or soy bean hay may be fed provided it is green. The hay may be fed in racks or wire baskets. Never allow the water fountains to go empty. Large fountains supplying enough water for a day are desirable and save labor. Some skim milk may be fed, but when a large quantity if available the amount of meat scraps in the mash may be reduced. Plenty of oyster shells are a necessary part of the ration.

Experiments show that the fowls get enough vitamin D from the direct sunshine to produce satisfactory hatches. It is not desirable for the birds to range to the other farm buildings, and this may be avoided by constructing a small yard in front of the laying house. The birds should be allowed into this yard every afternoon during the Fall and Winter.

One problem for poultry raisers will soon face is that of getting a source of well-bred chicks free of disease, and making plans for starting the chicks properly. Failure with the young stock means failure with the laying flock next Winter.

CONGRESSMAN GILLIE MAKES CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—As George W. Gillie begins his second year as Congressman for the Fourth Indiana District, a review of his record in Washington reveals that the homespun Hoosier has established a mark equaled by few of the new members of Congress.

Since coming to Washington a year ago, in the wake of a landslide election, the six-foot-five-inch Indianan has taken his place as one of the most colorful figures on Capitol Hill. As popular with his colleagues as he is with his constituents, Congressman Gillie has won recognition as an honest, conscientious legislator.

His practical knowledge of agricultural problems, in which he takes a special interest, has won him a position of leadership in the Congressional farm bloc; his common-sense, fearless approach to legislative problems has earned him the respect of veteran members of both political parties.

As America's "tallest legislator," and as one of the ablest of the first-year Congressman, Representative Gillie has kept the Fourth Indiana District in the spotlight of national affairs.

HOOSIER CONSERVATIONISTS FEEDING WILDLIFE AS SNOW COVERS GROUND

Twelve thousand Hoosiers— members of Conservation Clubs and cooperating organizations—swung into action last week, providing emergency food for birds and other wildlife during the period that snow and ice blanketed the fields.

This Winter feeding program is organized on a state-wide basis, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, pointed out today, including the 967 conservation clubs, rural mail carriers, 4-H Clubs, bakery and other delivery route drivers in rural areas, and scores of individuals who are interested in the welfare of song and game birds.

Sponsored by the Department of Conservation as one of the activities by which club members could aid in increasing the stock of desirable birds in the state, the program has grown steadily each year. Thousands of pounds of grain and screenings, furnished by elevators, are scattered at established feeding stations regularly by members of coservation clubs.

Emergency feeding of the birds has been a big factor in the protection of quail, pheasants and the other species which spend the Winter in Indiana. When natural food sources are covered by snow or ice, birds and other wildlife become weakened and are easy prey for their enemies.

TOOK OFFICE JANUARY 1

Mrs. Golden High, who has been Acting Postmaster since April 11, 1939, at Spencerville, has been appointed Postmaster and assumed this office January 1, 1940.

Mrs. High received the highest grade in the Civil Service examination, and is well qualified for this position. Besides having been Acting Postmaster recently, she has a favorable record as a successful Postmaster at this same office from 1914 to 1922.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. CRAIN
The Safety Man

Many interesting editorials have been printed on safe driving. I enjoy immensely the fine instructive comments so many editors make on the necessity of safe driving, and I appreciate their contribution to the cause of safety.

Recently, the editor of the Isanti News, Isanti, Minnesota, wrote the following:

"Upon returning from an automobile trip the other evening, we sat down at the typewriter in a state of veritable frenzy. Foam dripping out of the corners of our mouths, we pounded out the following lines of despair with clenched fists;

"Oh, that some wise jury
Would see fit to indict
Every nocturnal driver
Who won't dim his lights."

Very appropriate; very timely. Let us set the example by dimming our lights—eventually some of these "dumb clucks" will realize that that is the courteous thing to do.

SOME LOCAL BRIEFS

Mrs. Lysle McMaken has taken her bed with the flu and pleurisy.

Elmer Dean, of Harlan, was in town Tuesday evening attending the Legion meeting.

John Coburn is harvesting his crop of ice this week, taking it from the Koos gravel pit.

Mrs. L. W. Yeiser and Mrs. M. E. Storer are at Purdue attending a conference of Home Bureau workers.

Albert Rowe, of Auburn, began working at the Floyd Weikel farm last week and will be there until Spring.

Two suppers will be given in St. Joe Thursday night. The Townsend Club at Town Hall, and the Conservation Club at School House.

Mrs. Mary Shuff is not improving since her stroke a few weeks ago. Her daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Milliman, and son, Asa Shuff, of Benton Harbor, Michigan, are caring for her.

SCHOOL NOTES

Mrs. Edith Wilson has resigned her position in the high school to accept a position in the bank at French Lick near her home town. Because school officials have had difficulty in locating a teacher with the necessary license qualifications to fill the vacancy, a temporary shift in personnel has been made. Mr. Maxwell is teaching the high school subjects, and Mrs. Kenneth Kaylor, of Auburn, is substituting for Mr. Maxwell in the 5th and 6th grades.

P. T. A. Program

Carl Stallman, County Superintendent of schools, will give the talk at the next meeting of the P. T. A., to be held at the gym Tuesday, January 16, at 7:30.

Don't forget the attendance trophy. Your presence at the meeting will help your child win the trophy for his room.

Following is the complete program:
Community Singing.
Devotions .....Rev. Givens, Newville.
Accordion Trio.

LOG of the UNITED STATES MARINES

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

Sons of Princeton have won renown in all walks of life, but few of them pursued the will-o'-the-wisp of adventure as persistently as John Prentiss Poe, Jr., one of the greatest football stars who ever wore the orange and black.

Memories of Poe are treasured by those who knew him as a football star at Princeton in the '90s, as a soldier with the Fifth Maryland Infantry in the Phillipines during the Spanish-American War, and with the Kentucky militia during a mountain fued in 1903.

Poe's restless spirit sought the action he had failed to find in his previous military service. He joined the U. S. Marines when President Theodore Roosevelt sent an additional force of sea soldiers post haste to Panama in 1904, in view of trouble over the secession of that country from Columbia.

The Marines brought peace to Panama without trouble, so Poe left the Marine Corps, later becoming a captain in the army of Honduras when that country was at loggerheads with Nicaragua. During this period he saw some of the fighting he was looking for.

When next heard from Poe was with the Black Watch, a British regiment which won fame in the late World War. He was transferred to that regiment from an artillery unit. At that time he wrote home: "The Black Watch has already been wiped out three times, so I liked the transfer." He was killed while advancing with grenades near Hullock in Northern France, on September 25, 1915.

Poe's build was not impressive. He was five feet six inches tall and weighed about 160 pounds. Despite his lack of brawn he was one of the best dodging backs that Princeton ever had and at tackling he never had a peer. It is probable that the U. S. Marines never had a more doughty warrior than Johnny Poe, of Princeton.

THE YEARS OF THE LOCUST

One of the most eventful decades in modern history has ended. And this nation enters a new decade during which, unless all signs are wrong, its people face and grapple with problems, issues and responsibilities of the most far-reaching character.

The 1930's will be known to the historians of the future as the years of one of the greatest and longest depressions this or any other nation ever experienced. They will be known as years of experiment, of trial and error, of the weighing of our old values and our old traditions. And they will be known too as years in which the democratic process was consistently attacked by some of those who called themselves its friends, as well as by those who were its frankly avowed enemies.

From the international point of view, the tragic '30's came to a cynically fitting end in that most ghastly and unnecessary of events—a war which embraces much of the world. In nation after nation the arts of peace have of necessity been put aside, to the end that war may be prosecuted to the utmost. And war destroys more than men and materials and machines and economies and states. It destroys those essential liberties for which men have fought and died in holy causes ever since the world we know began. It destroys those spiritual values which are at the root of all artistic, cultural and humanitarian achievement. It has been truly said that in modern war there can be no victors—there are only the vanquished. It is an ironic commentary on the times in which we live that those nations which are fighting this war in the name of threatened democracy, have been forced to use the methods of the dictators in order to meet the enemy on its own totalitarian terms.

The greatest blessing which this nation possesses today is its physical remoteness from the conflict abroad. That is a position enjoyed by no other of the world's major powers. There is profound wisdom in the attitude of the great majority of the American people who say, in effect—"We can keep out of war—and we will keep out of war." There is no war party in this country—no responsible statesman urges our participation. We can all feel a deep and abiding thankfulness that this is so. Never before was it so important that we Americans keep our heads, in order that we may also keep our liberties. For should this country become involved in war, democracy would vanish here, as swiftly and as surely as it has vanished abroad.

Turning to our own internal problems, our task is great. The gratifying improvement that has recently taken place throughout our economic structure must not be allowed to blind us to the unpleasant truth that not one of those issues which we are forced to face at the start of depression has been solved. Most of them have become more complicated and difficult. The national debt, despite the heaviest tax load in our peace-time history, has nearly trebled in the past decade and will soon reach the present legal limit of $45,000,000,000. The immense expenditures for relief continue, even though business has much improved and unemployment has consequently been reduced. The agricultural situation, in spite of a long series of extremely expensive "farm relief" measures, remains tangled and unsatisfactory.

On top of that, there is still a strong clique high in government whose attitude toward business can be described only as strongly inimical. This is the group which backs any and all measures designed to put government into tax-subsidized competition with heavily taxed enterprise—which stays awake nights thinking up new ways of saddling business with restrictive laws and punitive class taxes—which encourages labor excesses to the full—and which does all in its power to prevent stability, and to keep chaos and uncertainty in the saddle. It is a remarkable tribute to the courage and staying power of American business that it has managed to progress as much as it has when confronted with such handicaps.

Summing up, we have plenty to do at home during the years that stretch ahead. The current Congress and those which follow have their work cut out for them—but satisfactory results will be secured only if the people as a whole are awake and watchful, are conscious of their needs, are deeply aware of their American heritage and way of life. For in spite of the unproven claims of extremists, our only real progress has come from productive, employing industry, working under the American system of free enterprise which brought us from a minor power to a world power in a century and a half.

Here in America we have all that is needed to bring a greater prosperity than we have ever known—the industries, the men, the resources. But unless we maintain our basic liberties, material blessings mean nothing.

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—With Congress again in full swing and Washington news back in the headlines, your correspondent is going to take time out to go behind the scenes to bring you the story of the reporters who "cover" the Nation's Capital for millions of newspaper readers over the globe.

The Washington press corps is composed of some five hundred and fifty odd correspondents representing more than three hundred American dailies, a score of foreign news agencies and the staffs of three major press associations—the Associated Press, the United Press and the International News Service.

These are the officially accredited correspondents. To be officially accredited, the correspondent must represent a daily newspaper or press association and derive the major portion of his income from this source.

Official recognition carries with it admission to the two Congressional press galleries, the White House press conference, and the various other department press conferences.

The press galleries and press conferences have severe rules against lobbying by reporters and the corps is unfailingly prompt and summary in ejecting any one caught at such activities.

PRESS GALLERIES of the House and Senate are under the immediate direction of committees chosen annually by the correspondents from among their own number. These committees operate under the rules of the two branches of Congress. The corps is very strict in its rules of admittance. So much so in fact that no magazine or radio man has yet succeeded in gaining membership.

Several attempts by magazine writers and radio announcers to gain admittance have been side-stepped on the technical ground that the applicants did not represent daily telegraphic publications.

Radio men finally gave up last year and provoked upon Congress to establish special radio galleries in the House and Senate. Now they have their own organization, composed of about twenty announcers, patterned after the press galleries but entirely separate.

CONGRESSIONAL press galleries are much like newspaper city rooms. They open out into the Senate and House chambers in balconies equipped with writing benches. The Senate gallery, because of the greater importance of the Senate, is larger, better equipped, and more used than the House gallery.

Each gallery is in charge of a superintendent with several assistants. They answer phone calls, see that copy is handled, and furnish writing supplies and reference material. Both the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies have wire connections in the galleries. The press associations have their own telegraph circuits and operators in each gallery.

When the chambers are in session, the reporters summon members from the floor by sending for them by pages especially assigned for this purpose. In the Senate, the small back antechamber, known as the President's Room, is used for these conferences. In the House, the reporters use the members' lobby.

About a score of women are accredited to the press galleries. Of this number only about half are really active there. These do straight reporting and several of them are among the very ablest correspondents in the entire corps.

THERE ARE four classes of news bureaus in the Capital—those with a single correspondent representing one newspaper only, those with two or more correspondents representing one newspaper only, those with one or more correspondents representing many papers, and finally the press associations with large staffs.

In addition, a number of correspondents do work on the side, with the consent of their editors, for newspapers not in connection with their own. Quite a few of the correspondents also do special work for weekly and monthly publications. This writing is eagerly sought by most of the reporters as it adds both to their professional prestige and their incomes. Correspondents earn everywhere from $15 a week in the smaller bureaus to $25,000 a year for the top men and syndicated columnists.

A DOZEN OR MORE Indiana newspapers have special correspondents or bureaus in Washington, to taking into account papers served by the large press associations. These include: Everett C. Watkins, Indianapolis Star, Terre Haute Star; Mark Thistlethwaite, Indianapolis News, Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette, Evansville Courier, Terre Haute Tribune; David M. Kidney, Indianapolis Times, Evansville Press; Russell Smith, South Bend Tribune; Robert D. Heinl, Wabash Plain Dealer, and yours truly, Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.

Watkins, Thistlethwaite and Kidney are the best known of the Hoosier reporters in the Capital, all three being veteran members of the press corps. Their reporting will take on added significance if Paul McNutt heads the Democratic ticket next Fall.

Pastor's message, "Christ on the Galilee Road."

God says (Isa. 1: 18). "Though our sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow."

The snow becomes smudged after its here awhile, but that is the way God made it, so that's no excuse for our lives sometimes being like week-old snow.

The People's Column!

CAUSE AND EFFECT

During the past few years the common people of this nation have commenced to think and wonder about the reasons for the present economic depression which has continued from 1929.

The problems of unemployment, low parity prices for farm products, with the consequent lack of purchasing power, creating as it does a widespread paucity of exchange of goods in all industry, are still unsolved.

These problems constitute the three major conditions of this economic depression and they make a vicious circle surrounding all business and labor.

And there will be no recovery from this depression and there will be no escape from this vicious circle of economics until the correct solution is recognized by the common people of this nation. Parenthetically, self-appointed financial experts have always known that the MONEY SYSTEM controls the medium of exchange, by which all merchandise from a kernel of wheat to a steam locomotive is distributed to the consumer.

And so there can be no release from the depressive conditions of our modern Amrican commerce until our medium of exchange is altered to provide for the CONSTANT CIRCULATION OF MONEY.

Coupled with the three major economic problems, there is one major SOCIAL PROBLEM, that is, ECONOMIC SECURITY FOR OLD AGE.

While the federal government acting with most state goverments has provisionally recognised the necessity for the security for old age, the restrictive conditions imposed on grants have caused subversive influences.

It is now universally known that this nation has the three economic and one social problem to solve.

Therefore, it is proposed under the TOWNSEND PLAN to solve the economic problems of the nation by immediate solution of the social problem. That is, the creation of an old age pension fund, financed by a two per cent tax on business transactions, with the provision that each eligible person over 60 years of age, spend the amount of the pension within 30 days. This provision is the most important economic part of the plan, because it permits the constant and free circulation of money.

The lack of constant circulation of money in all distributive channels of commerce is the one and only cause of all depressions and the challenge is made to any so called financial expert in this country to refute this statement.

There is only ONE THING in the economic condition of our nation today that can effect prosperous conditions and the maintenance of our modern standards of living, and that is, the constant circulation of money, effecting the constant exchange of goods and their consequent distribution to the people.

The TOWNSEND PLAN provides for OLD AGE SECURITY and the CONSTANT CIRCULATION OF MONEY, which is the only means of a productive prosperity in this day and age.

The writer of this article has no hesitation in stating that the present Federal Social Security Act was enacted by a Congress impelled by the fear of a wide spread demand for Old Age Security for all persons over 60. It is not a good law for it imposes upon employers as a class, while benefitting only a relative small total of aged persons.

The TOWNSEND PLAN for old age pensions is to be commended for its provisions for self financing, the constant circulation of money and the implied preservation of our national standard of living.

Doctor Townsend Says......

PUBLIC indignation is often slow to rise, but once risen the reaction is relentless and sure. Rebellion against the corrupt Pendergast machine in Kansas City came slowly, but under way it swept the whole gang into the penitentiary. We can expect a similar powerful reaction against the unholy alliance of crime and politics in Chicago.

Those who look with favor upon dictatorships, because they supposedly accomplish changes more quickly than we do within our democratic structure, should observe how decisively and rapidly American public opinion functions, once it is awakened. I have no fear of democratic decay as long as this militant public opinion is in evidence.

THREE COUNTY OWNED FARMS SOLD MONDAY

The county commissioners in special session at the court house in Auburn Monday accepted bids for the sale of there farms as follows:

L. J. Likes farm in Concord township, 76 acres, to H. H. Squires, for $2,300.

Wayne Conine farm in Newville township, 103 acres, to Raymond Beuter, of Fort Wayne, $2,600. Mr. Bueter owns the adjoining farm on the east.

Christlieb farm in Richland township, 80 acres, to Herman Schurr, of that township, for $1,200.

Three bids were received on the Likes farm. The appraisement was for $1,560. The other farms sold at the appraised values. Four other farms were advertised also, but no bids have yet been received. However, the sale continues from day to day.

The county has suffered a loss on these farm loans, some of the loans having been made when prices of land were high. The commissioners are trying to sell all the county's farms. There is considerable interest being shown and the board has prospects of achieving its purpose.

FRANK DAVIS FOUND DEAD IN BED MONDAY

Henry Franklin Davis, 65, was found dead in bed Monday morning at 11 o'clock by his brother-in-law, John Wineland, at whose home he was visiting, having come to St. Joe Saturday evening. Mr. Davis had apparently been in good health Sunday night when he retired, as he was about the home all day Sunday and enjoying his visit with his sister and husband.

Mr. Wineland left the house following breakfast and made a trip to Auburn on business, and on his return at about 11 o'clock his wife told him her brother had not awakened. When Mr. Wineland went to arouse him, Mr. Davis was found dead.

Deputy Coroner Howard Clark, of Auburn, who was called to make an investigation, stated that death was caused by aortic stenosis.

The deceased was born in Spencerville, and then moved with his parents, John Y. and Kathryn Davis, to a farm across the river at the Bair Bridge, now owned by John McNabb. In 1881 they moved to St. Joe and owned the farm now occupied by A. D. Goodwin and Mrs. Elnora Blue. For over 35 years he had lived in Fort Wayne. Recently he was employed at the Allen County Infirmary. For many years he was employed as a truck driver for the Brown Trucking Co., and then later for Bursley & Co.

The sister, Mrs. Wineland, the son, Russell, and two grandsons are the only survivors.

He was born January 4, 1875 and died at the age of 65 years, and 11 days. The body was removed to the Kinsey funeral home where it was held until the service on Wednesday afternoon, coducted by Rev. Frank Stevenson. Burial in White City Cemetery.

An additional 15,000 egg electric incubator is being installed and this will double their chick capacity for this season.

An additional line of feed and supplies will be added all of which will add to the efficiency of the service to be givn to the patrons, and prospects for 1940 are extremely encouraging to the management of the hatchery. D. D. Gerig will welcome all comers to the hatchery.

INCREASE IN DEKALB COUNTY TAXES FOR 1940

Property owners of DeKalb County are called upon to pay $105,475 more in local taxes in 1940 than a year ago, the annual abstract prepared in the office of County Auditor Burley Ensley discloses.

This is an increase of 10½ per cent over 1939. The total charged for collection in 1940 is $763,855, as against $658,380 last year. The increase is all in current tax, as the delinquent, $148,896, is $3 less than a year ago.

Most of the increase is due to a higher levy for the county general fund. The amount charged for collection is $96,270, as against $13,945 in 1939. For the welfare fund the amount charged is $21,393, a reduction from $27,891; for county unit road bonds and interest, $18,719.37, a reduction from $30,680; for township road bonds and interest, $10,097.80, a reduction from $10,648. A new levy is for the county sinking fund, the amount for collection being $5,348. The proceeds will retire bonds issued last year to pay for improvements to the county heating plant.

All but two units will pay a larger amount of tax this year than last, these being Auburn city and Stafford township. The greatest proportionate increase is in Wilmington township, where the amout charged is doubled.

The figures for each unit follow:

Safetygrams
BY
FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

Nowhere can we find accurate comprehensive countrywide figures on the relationship of alcohol to traffic accidents. The reasons for that are:

1. One state reports that 18.4 per cent of drivers involved in fatal accidents "had been drinking."

2. Several courts state that their studied opinion shows that liquor was involved in a certain per cent of all traffic accidents.

3. Some courts, in the same states, state that liquor was involved in even a higher per cent of accidents.

Therefore, police estimates, legal definitions, and court interpretations of the terms "intoxication" and "under the influence," are so variable that it is impossible to obtain definite figures.

All of us agree, however, that a man who has had two or three strong drinks certainly cannot have the accuracy and the alert judgment that he would have under normal conditions. We hope the time will soon come when driving after drinking will be placed in the same category as carrying concealed weapons, robbing, and similar infractions of law.

Average weekly expenditures of all families in England are now $36.85.

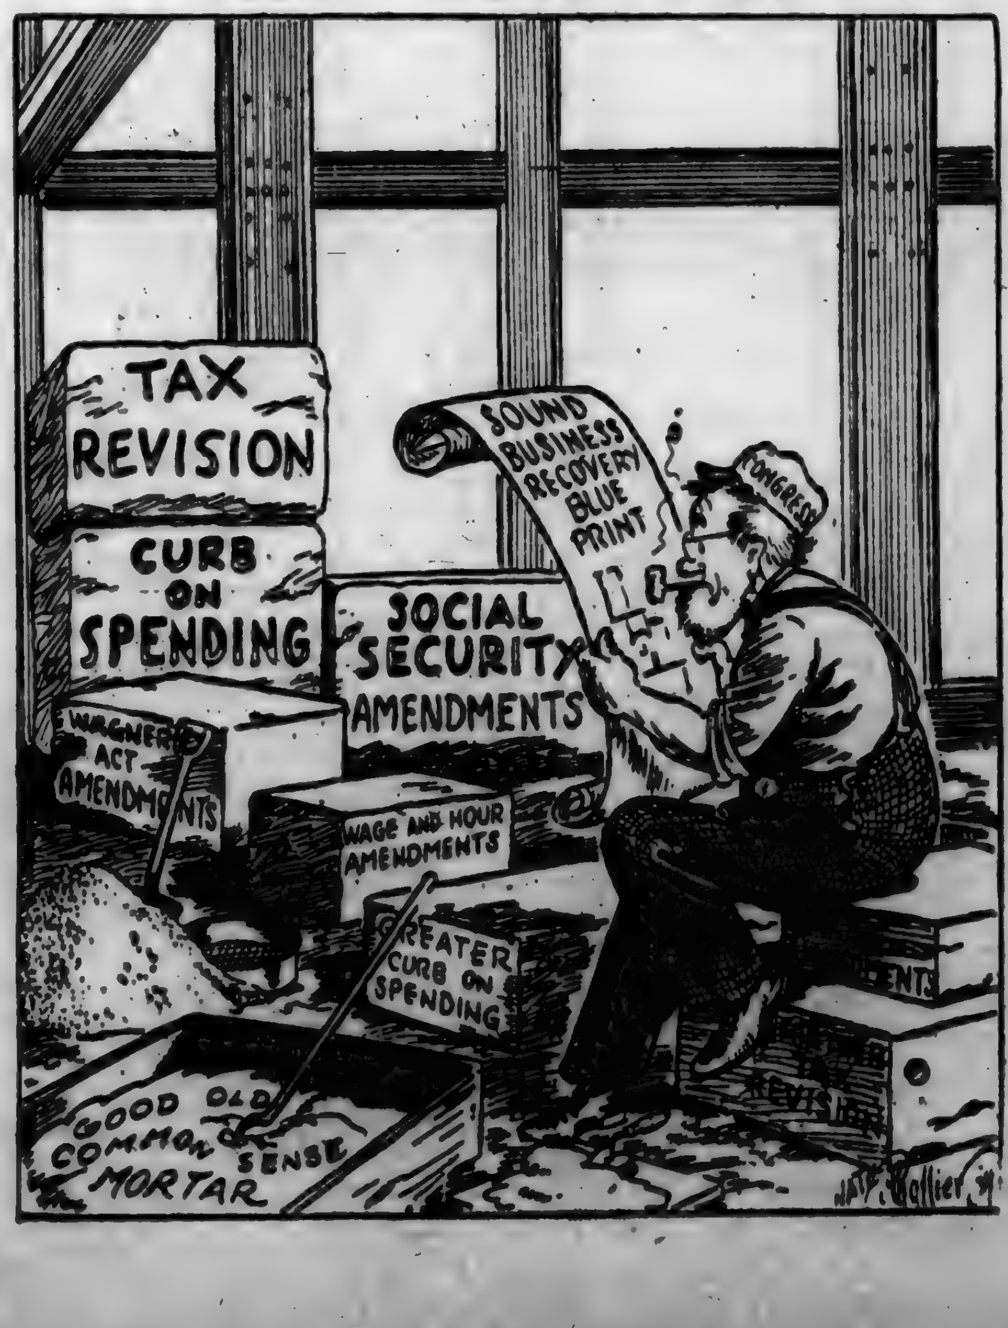
WELCOME HOME

Those of us who reside in St. Joe may not be as appreciative of the weight of the postman's pack as our brothers who await the city deliveries and expectantly look forward to the familiar sight of the home town paper. Not long ago a subscriber on our mailing list missed out on a weekly issue and wrote us to forward a copy "post haste." This caused us to reflect upon how much a home town paper would mean if we were far from friends and old associations. The mail sack of the city carrier bulges with all sizes of papers of these small towns of which the recipient was once a part. Those afar often fail to get a complete digest of the town's activities from those who correspond with them. It takes long to tell of comings and goings, of the activities and discussions of inhabitants whose names arose familiar to the lonesome one. What better than to have the home town paper bring you the news? The city edition may weigh heavier but the home town paper carries more refreshment. The weekly may not have the large subscription list, it may not be perused by the number of readers of the city daily, but it serves to satisfy in a different way. It crowds the carrier's pack as it crowds the memories and brings a nostalgia for those folks and things that once were.

PLENTY MORE TO DO



FARM PROSPECTS

A few of the predictions for the new farm prospects might be of interest to local St. Joe News readers. Whether or not the outcome will coincide with the forecasting we cannot say but of the list there may be one item of interest to you. The cash income from sales of products should be higher, but prices of commodities used by the farmer will also be higher. There willbe a slight increase in wage labor but an increase of mechanical farm implements will offset this. Prices of fertilizer materials will rise and prices of some seeds be lower. The volume of farm-mortgage financing is hailed higher and increased mortgage credit will be more accessible. For whatever such words mean to you, whatever their worth in your financial picture, we pass them along.

CONSERVATION CLUB DINNER

The St. Joe Conservation Club held its annual pest hunt supper and entertainment at the school house on Thursday night, January 4, 1940. The supper was prepared and served by Captain Clifton Draggoo and his team to Captain Willard Hurni and his team. The menu: Turtle and oyster stew, chili, hot dog sandwiches, crackers, pickles, coffee and home made pies.

After supper Mr. Milt Wysong, of the state department, entertained and imparted some very worth while information in regard to the reforestation branch of the department. It was disclosed how very inexpensive good trees are when purchased thru the department of conservation for reforestation. None are available however for decorative purposes.

The club in tallying up the total count on each side resulted as follows: Draggoo, 6,490 and Hurni, 9,830 points.

The club voted to erect a pheasant brooder and try their luck on raising pheasant to liberate in this territory.

A fish hatchery is being contemplated by the club and is prospecting for a suitable location. This should be a project of vital interest to the general nature loving public as it could be made into a park as well as a hatchery.

A committee was appointed to look after the interest of the farmer in regard to replenishing his wood lot with new trees for the future use of the younger generation, also wind breaks and wildlife refuge.

The officers for 1940 were elected as follows: Chairman, Willard Hurni; vice chairman, Clifton Draggoo; secretary, F. B. Leighty; treasurer, M. E. Storer; custodian of spears, Stanley Baker; delegate, Fred Elson; alternate, Ford Jackson.

Directors: Lester Coburn, John Engle, Henry Engle, Walter Morr, H. H. Squires, Don Keller, L. W. Draggoo, Elza Fetters, Albert Moore, Walter Cook.

Committee on brooder house and rearing pheasants: Albert Moore, Lester Coburn, Walter Keesler, G. Haver. Committee for transporting game: Roy Wade, Harlow Sechler and Don Keller. Motion made and carried that they be allowed expense money.

Motion that club try to promote fish hatchery was passed and committee appointed as follows: Harlow Sechler, Robert Sechler, Henry Engle, Elmer Keller, Fred Leighty. Motion passed that secretary contact State Entomologist, Frank Wallace, in regard to disease of elm tree. Motion passed to discontinue bounty on pests.

The treasurer, Ed Storer, made the following statement:

Receipts for 1939	$158.71
Expenses	$ 84.60
Balance in treasury	$ 74.11

The 1939 payment of $19.30 as bounty on pests brought in the total of 63 crows, 50 ground hogs, 6 hawks, and 5 owls.

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

DRAFT PLANS ARE IN READINESS—JUST IN CASE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Although President Roosevelt frequently has declared that he intends to keep the United States out of the European War, plans are nevertheless going steadily forward to meet such an eventuality, and details of the past program of the Army and Navy are gradually leaking out.

Most important of the plans prepared by the military departments is the draft plan which has been in readiness since 1921 and which has continuously been revised and kept up to date. Under this plan, approximately 8,000,000 men would be brought into the service within a year.

Plans for this mobilization of manpower are on file in Indianapolis as well as in Washington. Indiana belongs to the Fifth Army Corps Area, and only a short time ago officials of the State's military forces met with national officials at Fort Sheridan, Ill., to perfect draft procedure.

Under this plan, it is estimated here that Indiana would be expected to provide approximately 200,000 men for the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. This figure is based upon the last official census, taken in 1930, and will be revised when the new census is completed this year.

ACCORDING to reliable estimates obtained from the War Department by this reporter, the Fourth Indiana District would be called upon to supply about 17,000 men. DeKalb County's share would be about 1,600, it is estimated.

The plan calls for the setting up of draft boards in every county in the United States, in the event of war, with voluntary enlistments being undertaken should Congress debate conscription over an extended period. Larger counties would be divided into population areas, with a draft board for every 30,000 residents.

The draft board for DeKalb County would be located in Auburn, if War Department plans are not changed in the meantime. It would be comprised of three members, probably prominent citizens, and a physician and a lawyer, all appointed by the Governor.

SHOULD WAR COME, Uncle Sam would expect to enroll 2,000,000 men between the ages of 18 and 23, within 30 days. The second draft will take men between 21 and 30, of which there are 4,000,000 available. The third draft would include all physically fit between the ages of 31 and 45, of which there are about 2,000,000.

Indiana's share of the first draft cannot be accurately predicted, but it is expected that about 12,000 men would enter the service in the State in the first 30 days of operation of the draft law.

UNDER the mobilization program, details of which are in charge of the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Selective Service, the draft would swing into operation about as follows:

1—The President would proclaim conscription and call upon the governors of the states to set up for a stated day registration machinery for all men beween the ages of 18 and 21 in each election precinct in the Nation.

2—On this day an estimated 2,000,000 men would be enrolled by going to their precinct voting booths and filling out cards. These cards would be forwarded to Washington for tabulation.

3—Meanwhile the governors would have recommended and the President appointed 6,200 local draft boards. These boards would have the final word as to whether an enrollee was physically fit for service or whether he would be rejected because of dependents.

4—The local newspapers would then print the lists of all enrollees and the numbers assigned to them. Copies of these lists would have been forwarded to Washington, where, using the methods of lottery, the drawing of the numbers would get under way. Men would be assigned in the order in which their number was called.

IF A MAN failed to pass a physical examination or had dependents he would not be released from the threat of military service but would receive a lower classification. If he was found to be physically fit and had no dependents then he would be assigned to a military unit, again in the order of his number.

Not all men accepted would be called to the service, as the spread would be through all districts and no one district would be required to send more men than another district of identical population. Thus the first called from the ranks of civilians would be spread to every district and every state.

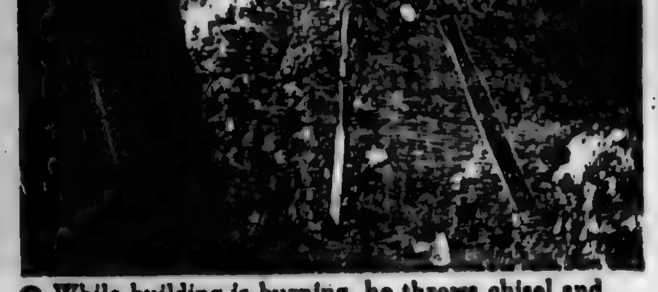
Can you find it ?

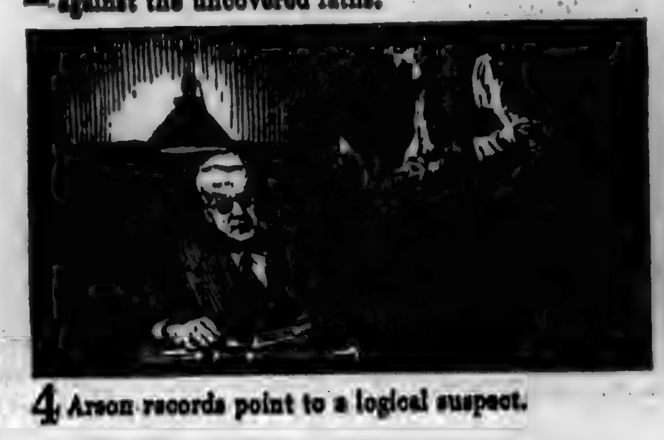
★ AN ACTUAL CASE, which solved a series of mystery fires in an American City.

1 He digs plaster away to get at the wooden laths.

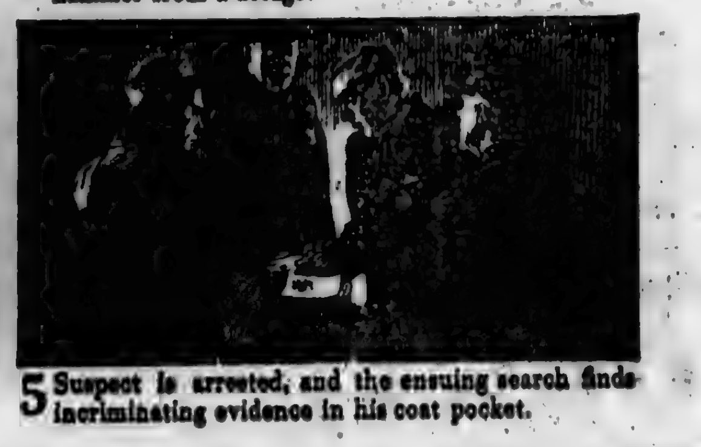
2 He puts chisel and hammer in pocket, builds fire against the uncovered laths.



3 While building is burning, he throws chisel and hammer from a bridge.



4 Arson records point to a logical suspect.



5 Suspect is arrested, and the ensuing search finds incriminating evidence in his coat pocket.

HERE is the clue that tripped up the firebug: In the pocket of the suspect some bits of plaster were found. Some plaster from the burned building was recovered. Under the microscope both samples tallied exactly. In every 100 grains of sand in the plaster 36 were black, 12 white, 26 amber and 26 red. The evidence was as conclusive as if the criminal had been seen setting the fire.

Firebugs can't get away with it! Every suspicious fire finds ready not only municipal and state authorities, but the Arson Department of the national organization of 200 capital stock* fire insurance companies. So successful is this partnership that, today, very few "set" fires go unsolved.

When you buy capital stock company fire insurance, you are furthering fire prevention in the interest of everyone — and getting sound protection for yourself.

Let us protect your home, furnishings, business, automobile and other possessions with dependable, economical capital stock company fire insurance.

CAPITAL STOCK COMPANY FIRE INSURANCE provides sound protection at a predetermined price, without risk of further cost. NO DIFFERENCE

The advice that the mayor of New York gave his police might well be heeded by every official in the country. Wise words these, "Don't give the drunken driver a break, I don't care who he is." And how often the fact that he is "who he is" leads to overlooking by a judge when a traffic crime is committed! What difference his social standing if he is a killer when drunk. The fellow may be driving a high powered, expensive car, or a bit of junk that can't make the grade, but whether in tuxedo or overall the drunken drivers are brothers and should receive the same treatment. This means St. Joe and all other communities around us.

VOL. LV (55 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1940 NUMBER 4

DEKALB FREE FAIR SHOWS PROFIT OF $1,565

According to a financial report read at a meeting of the stockholders of the DeKalb County Fair Association Friday night at the court house, the 1939 fair operated with a net profit of $1,565.39. The report was prepared by H. M. Casebeer, association treasurer.

Total receipts of the 1939 fair, according to the report, amounted to $9,018.61 and disbursements aggregated $7,424.15.

Eight men were elected Friday night to serve as directors for a three-year period. In addition, Fern Morr was named as the director from Waterloo, replacing Ancil Hill, who resigned.

Only two of the eight men whose terms expire this year were re-elected, Lester Boger, of Union township and Walter Thrush, of Butler township. The six new men on the board are Ira Williams, Keyser township; Ralph Mutsfeld, Butler city; Lewis Washler, Spencer township; Clark Scholes, St. Joe; Merritt Sechler, Concord township, and Virgil Korff of Grant township, director-at-large.

Earl Stimman acted as chairman and Harry Provines as secretary, due to absence of officials.

Officers for the coming year will be elected Saturday afternoon, January 27, at a meeting of the board of fair directors at County Agent C. E. Baker's office in the court house at 1 o'clock. Mr. Stimman appointed a committee of three to serve on a nominating committee. George Olinger, of Auburn, heads this committee, with County Agent Baker and Guy VanZile of Franklin township, as assistants.

Any stockholder of the association may attend this meeting and inform the director from his township of his wishes concerning the election.

NEW HOOSIER LAW EFFECTING MARRIAGE MARCH 1

The new year is going to be rather gloomy for marriage mill operators, fly-by-night Romeos and midnight elopers.

Within a few weeks they will be confronted with a law that promises to end hurry-up marriages and prevent persons infected with syphillis from entering the bonds of matrimony.

On March 1 Indiana's new marriage law requiring blood tests for all prospective brides and bridegrooms goes into effect. And it will be a sad day for the state's Gretna Greens—the spots to which out-staters have migrated year after year for twenty-four-hour marrying service.

So many marriages of this type have ended in divorce courts amid allegations of gin-inspired romance that the legislature in 1939 decided to kill two birds with one stone—make it necessary to have medical certificates bearing the indorsement of recognized laboratories and incidentally put the brakes on spur-of-the-moment marriages.

HOME BUREAU

The Concord Township Home Bureau met Friday afternoon, January 19th at the home of Mrs. Fern Draggoo. On account of the extreme cold weather, only eight members were present. Roll call responses were "A Most Cherished Possession." Katie Storer gave her report from Purdue Conference, bringing back many interesting points to the club. Most of entertainment committee was absent. The hostess, with her committee, served a delicious lunch of sandwiches, vegetable salad, pickles, cookies and coffee. All enjoyed a pleasant afternoon regardless of the weather.

The weather changed Wednesday morning, and we were visited by snow flurries.

PRESIDENTS OF TWO LUTHERAN BODIES PROTEST RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND VATICAN AS "UN-AMERICAN"

An open statement criticizing President Roosevelt's appointment of a personal representative to the Vatican as "un-American" by the presidents of two of the largest Lutheran bodies in the United States was made public here today by the Rev. Frank Stevenson.

The protest was prepared by the Rev. Dr. Frederick H. Knubel, of New York City, president of the United Lutheran Church, and the Rev. Dr. Emanuel Poppen, of Columbus, Ohio, president of the American Lutheran Church. These two church groups embrace nearly half of all the Lutherans in America.

In the message Dr. Knubel and Dr. Poppen acknowledge the sincerity of the President's peace efforts. They express the fear, however, that the plan "threatens itself by combining this unity of America's spiritual and civil authority, with a single foreign spiritual and civil authority, the Vatican State."

The statement emphasizes the desire of all people for peace, but they "do not want American spiritual principles undermined. The Pope is God's servant, but he is not God's servant for American national life. Even many American Roman Catholics do not so regard him, and certainly the great majority of Americans do not."

According to Dr. Knubel and Dr. Poppen the inclusion of this one "'false element" is "unnecessary, since a representative American Roman Catholic might have been named who, with the other two individuals named, would see the President from time to time.' "

The third point made by the Lutheran presidents is that Roosevelt's plan will disrupt American unity and therefore is "not in harmony with the purpose of peace. Recent temporary relationships to the Vatican aroused widespread opposition, and the present plan has been hailed from authoritative sources as another step towards a permanent relationship..... Increasing opposition to such relatioship will increasingly threaten America's unity."

The statement closes with the assertion that the "false element in the plan" will be a "cause of suspicion that political influences from religious sources are being exerted upon American national life."

TRANSIENT ENTERS HOME AND TAKES COAT

The Ed Storer home was entered Tuesday noon by a transient who had remained all night at the city hall, and when he left he took an overcoat. Mrs. Storer heard a noise in another part of the house and when she investigated she saw a man leaving the place. When she discovered the coat was missing she notified Mr. Storer at the postoffice and he started out to apprehend the thief. He was caught at the crossing at the grist mill with the coat covered up with another one, and Ed proceeded to make him produce the coat. When he returned home he found that his good shoes were missing also. He and Art Lyon proceeded to overtake the fellow again driving to the crossing east of town and found that the gang of three men had parted here, one was headed south while two were headed down the track. They overtook the two men near Hamilton's farm but were unable to find the shoes. They possibly had ditched them after having to give up the coat. The fellow was about town during the day trying hard to find clothing and footwear.

SCHOOL NOTES

Scott Center comes to St. Joe Friday. St. Joe won over Scott Center in an earlier game and are expecting to repeat the performace on their home floor.

Miss Frances Kohler, of Mishawaka, will take up her duties as teacher of math and Latin Thursday. She is a graduate of De Pauw and has been teaching in the parochial schools in South Bend.

In order to clear a misunderstanding, the school officials wish to announce that each teacher in the St. Joe schools holds a license in the subjects which he teaches. These licenses are on file in the county superintendent's office and are available to any one who might wish to see them. Officials also wish it understood that any graduate is eligible to enter any college or university without further examination, excepting those schools which require special entrance examinations of all students.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS FIRST OF POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

With voters' registration getting under way soon and the time for filing of candidates' declarations approaching within a few weeks, political activity is being resumed in DeKalb county.

County Clerk Carl Walter announces that the new registration period will be ushered in February 5 and will continue until twenty-nine days before the primary, which is May 7. Mr. Walter states that registrations of voters who failed to vote in two consecutive elections are void and re-registration is necessary. Voters who have moved from one precinct to another since the last election must re-register. New voters who will reach the age of twenty-one years by the date of the general election in November are entitled to vote at the primary if they register.

Aspirants to office must file declarations during a thirty-day period beginning March 7. Offices to be listed on the county ticket and the incumbents follow:

Congressman, George W. Gillie, of Fort Wayne, Republican.

Judge of the Circuit Court, Wm. P. Endicott, of Auburn, Republican.

Joint state senator, Larry Brandon, of Union township, Democrat.

Prosecuting attorney, George E. Mountz, of Garrett, Republican.

County coroner, John R. Clark, of Auburn, Republican.

County commissioner north, Wm. H. Brecbill, of Smithfield township, Democrat.

County commissioner southeast, Lloyd W. Yeiser, of Concord township, Republican.

It is expected that most of these incumbents will be candidates to succeed themselves. The voters will also vote this year for president of the United States, United States senator, governor of Indiana, lieutenant governor and other state offices.

Both parties will elect precinct committeemen at the primary in May and the new committeemen will meet on Saturday afternoon after the primary to choose county chairmen and other party officers. Capt. H. C. Springer, of Butler, is now Republican county chairman, and Clayton M. Bailey, of Garrett, heads the Democrats.

Capt. Springer and Mr. Bailey will each appoint a member of the county board of election commissioners. W. W. Ketcham, of Auburn, was the Democratic member in 1938 and Paul G. Parker, of Auburn, was the Republican. The county clerk serves on the board by virtue of his office. The board appoints the precinct election boards upon recommendation of the party organizations.

EARL BROWDER GIVEN $4,000 FINE AND 10 YEARS

A federal court jury Monday convicted Browder, general secretary of the communist party, on passport fraud charges.

The verdict was guilty on both counts of the indictments, making the nation's foremost communist liable to a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $4,000 fine.

The case went to the jury Monday after the nation's foremost communist had asked for acquittal "in the American tradition" and U. S. Attorney John T. Cahill had demanded his convitcion for spurning rules "laid down by our democratic form of government."

The jury of 11 men and one woman took the case at 3:08 P. M. in the fourth trial day of what had been one of the speediest prosecutions of a major public figure in local federal court history. The government had taken only two days to complete its case and the defense had presented no witnesses at all.

Browder made his own summation, explaining to the jury that he had received legal training from a correspondence school. He said he was "a communist and proud of it," denied the government had proved him guilty of any "wrong-doing, fraud or illegality" and asked "a verdict in the American tradition." He took one hour and 15 minutes to state his case.

The government presented testimony that Browder obtained passports in 1921, 1927, and 1931 under other men's names, in each case swearing that he had never received a passport previously.

Ruth Joan Young, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Young, of Jackson township, died Saturday noon at the Sacred Heart hospital in Garrett only a short time after she had been taken there. She had been ill only a week with laryngitis and complications.

"It isn't a crime to land a fish from a public lake" believes Jerry Haver, "it's a miracle."

It isn't really necessary to fool half the people all the time, fifty per cent of the time would be enough.

A good political cry would be "Hit Me Again."

Too often the revenge that is sweet turns sour on us!

Housewives may get most of their sugar from Cuba or Florida, but some of them get it from their neighbors.

So often the lass with the girlish figure doubles it during the years.

The trouble with sleep is that so many men do it orally.

Many moderns don't worry if they will love each other when they grow old. They just don't figure on living together that long.

Because we try to remain neutral here doesn't mean that we don't want certain parties socked in the jaw!

As a child it is a matter of a check rein on them, as collegians it becomes a matter of rain checks to them!

We have a good reason for being foolish year after year. It is only history repeating itself.

A SORE SUBJECT

We have written at various times of the unfavorable comments passed to the editor from motorists hereabouts who complain of the many unattractive billboards that have flooded the countryside. We have stressed the more effective way of advertising, through the columns of your weekly newspaper. Now we relate this incident as a mild warning to billboard adherents.

During teh past Christmas season club women of Maine used concerted action to defeat a billboard movement that was increasing in the state. Cities carried on a campaign through their club women and urged the powerful agent of buying, the housewife, to refuse to support the billboards by not purchasing the products advertised thereon. Ladies usually get results!

THE SUBDUED

Those sections of Poland annexed by Germany that include large farms, are now being run by Nazis. The treatment of local Poles and Jews is left to the managers of the districts. Various sections call for various demands. One area enforces all Jews to carry yellow patches on their backs, another they must not use sidewalks, while a third orders them to give up seats on street cars to all German officers. But this has led to difficulties for these officers do not want to ride the cars and have aged women rise and give their place to the military. It is humiliating they say, which comes as a slight surprise.

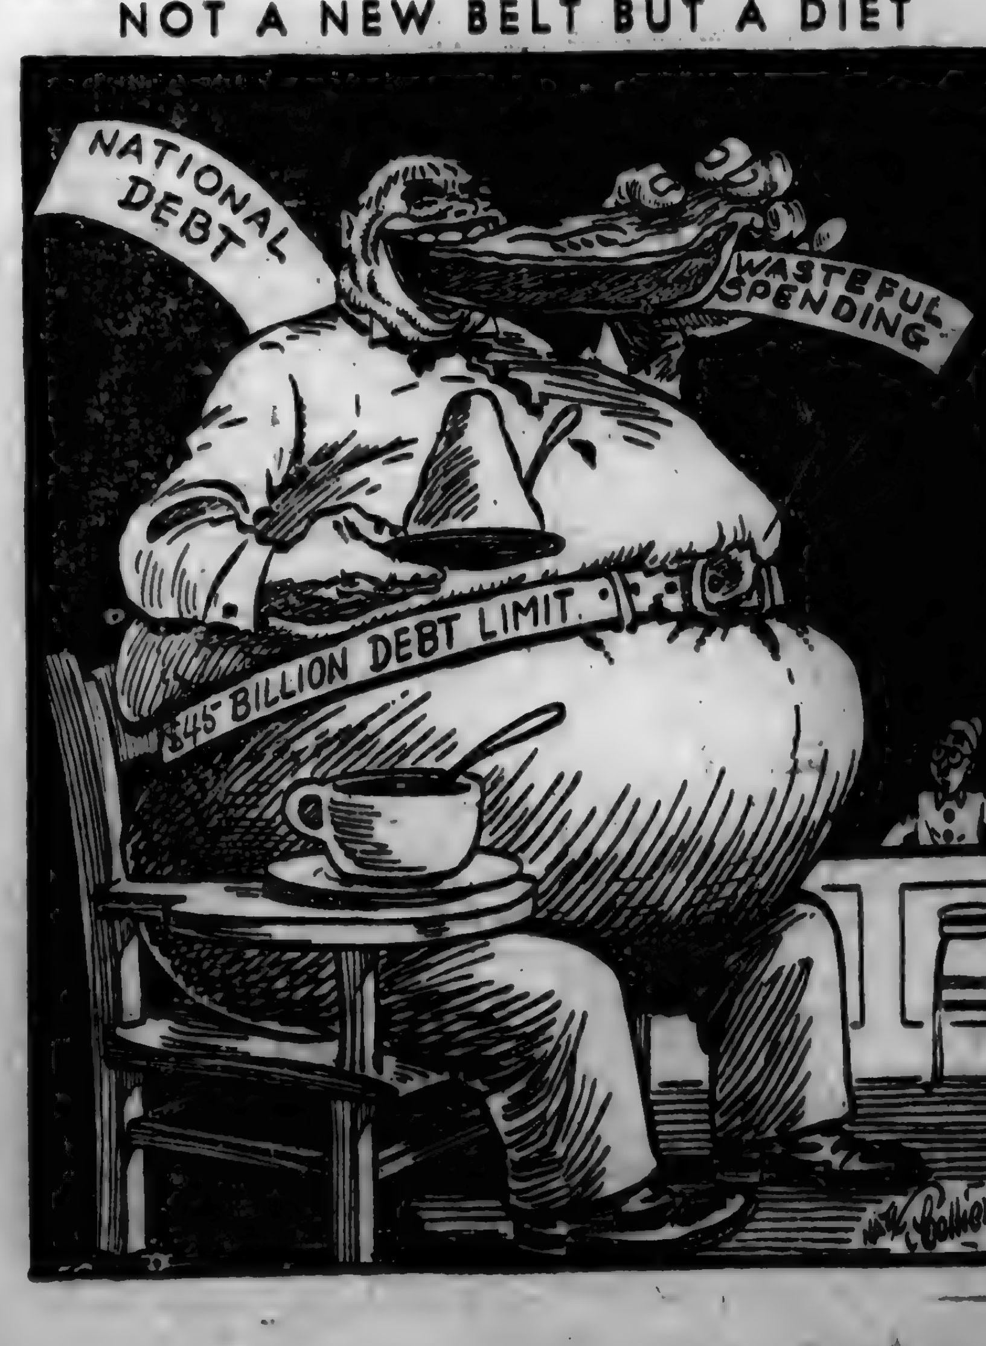
BRAINS NEEDED

Those were the days when the truant officer was hale and hearty, husky and fleet of foot! Today when education is much in demand the truant officer must be well educated with a college diploma in order to deal with the situation. The idea is for the wayward child to be returned to school, but training is needed to study the situation from the phychological angle. It is necessary to find whether the child, home or school is at fault and to correct the mistake or misunderstanding. So civic fathers of New York state are demanding a college education for the truant officer and let local St. Joe students take care or a Ph. D. will get them if they don't watch out!

PRAYER FOR PEACE

Many state executives have asked that their peoples unite in the movement observed by millions of citizens throughout the U. S. in calling a day of prayer for peace. The word goes to all churches and is spread among all groups of people. Whether such a concerted effort and unified prayers will have an effect on influencing governments and rulers, we cannot foresee. This desire for peace is not confined to this country alone but is a world-wide plea. Can the dove of peace be guided by love, can moral power be overcome by brute force, will the call of brotherhood sound over the cry for blood? Shall the conscience of the united world be heeded by the masters of crime?

NOT A NEW BELT BUT A DIET



WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

The President's budget, said to have been trimmed to the bone before it left the White House, received a further slicing at the hands of the House Appropriation Committee, and has gone to the Senate with expenditures amounting to ninety-four millions lopped away. The economical attitude of the Committee was approved on the floor and was emphasized by an additional cut including a hundred and fifty millions for ship contracts and a mere bagatelle of twenty-four thousand for the Council of Personal Administration, the third bureau having an intimate Presidential connection to get the axe. The TVA was under a cloud too, but came out into the sunshine by a narrow margin, due chiefly to the efforts of Speaker Bankhead.

The world at large seems to think that something should be done for the Finns. The attitude of the individual citizen of the United States probably is well represented by the Washington taxi driver, who slipped a quarter under the door of the Finnish legation. Sweden is openly for aid. Translated from the language of diplomacy to the vernacular of the street, the Swedes seem to think that talk in favor of neutrality is no more than "bunk." A roundabout report has it that a hundred thousand armed men are on the way from France to Finland, although it is intimated that the French army made no contribution to the enterprise, in the way of soldiers.

Help for the Finns may be taking a practical turn so far as private action is concerned, but no one seems to want to make it a matter of open legislation, likely to have an international aspect. This is nowhere better illustrated than in Congress, where the discussion regarding a loan has been laid aside for a week, in order to ascertain who is to accept responsibility for disturbing the fine poise of the scales of neutrality. The White House is said to be busy with a plan to solve a threefold problem, the difficulty involved being helping the Finns, pleasing Congress and keeping out of trouble, all at once.

At a time so tense as the present, small things rise to dignity and importanct as causes of friction. Foreign nations recall that, according to their standards, they were imposed upon, at the New York World's Fair. The deliberation and caution of the United States in assuming a part of the war is resented in some quarters. Looking the other way, British inspection of American mail does not sit well, and England's closing of the lid on the annual purchase of about seventy-five million dollars worth of American tobacco has given rise to some irritation on this side of the water. Upon the whole, there is considerable national dispepsia and corresponding touchiness, but the bad breakfasts will digest after a little.

The third term talk continues, with weighty arguments pro and con, yet with no certainty as to the outcome. Gen. Hugh Johnson is quoted as saying in substance, though hardly in accord with his own wishes, that the President can be renominated if he desires, and elected if he runs. The drafting of Mr. Roosevelt is finding increased support in Illinois and good backing in Ohio, the last named state still turning a kindly eye upon Mr. Garner. The person in whose hands the decision, or at least the refusal, rests, is keeping a profound silence. There is no clue as to whether or not Mr. Roosevelt wants a third term nomination. Perhaps he would refuse even to be drafted, to say nothing of making an effort to secure the place.

If in the mind of the President there is a desire to continue as a White House tenant, his sound judgment in keeping quiet is to be commended. Any person of good sense would keep his finger on the public pulse until the last minute, under the circumstances. The risk of a turn down either in the convention or at the polls is not to be assumed hastily or lightly. Presidents are men, after all, and men are inclined to look about for a possible noose, before thrusting out their heads.

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There are a number of interesting angles to current reports from Indiana that Treasury Departmet sleuths are scanning the income tax returns of several Two Per Cent Club politicians with more than casual interest, and that a tax scandal of major proportions may break loose at any moment.

Washington observers who are following developments of the investigation with a view to its possible affect on the presidential aspirations of Paul V. McNutt, are convinced of two things:

(1) That the mere threat of a scandal has put a serious crimp in McNutt's campaign for the Presidency.

(2) That if an honest-to-goodness scandal, involving McNutt's Indiana pals, does develop, Paul may as well forget his lofty ambitions and prepare to retire to private life January 20, 1941.

McNutt supporters, here and in Indiana, are attempting to make light of the affair by passing it off as a "smear" campaign and intimating that it's more than a coincidence politically. Actually, however, they are worried to death, and are running around in circles trying to find out what it's all about.

FOR A BETTER understanding of the current mess, it is helpful to review the interesting train of events which led up to it. According to our information, it started several months ago when Senators Minton and Van Nuys began their ill-fated effort to oust Will H. Smith as Collector of Internal Revenue at Indianapolis and replace him with McNutt's former patronage secretary, Pleas Greenlee.

This move was inspired by two things: (1) Minton's loyalty to Greenlee, who was instrumental in promoting him for Senator in 1934, when R. Earl Peters was given the famous run-around by the McNutt forces, and (2) Van Nuys' long-standing and active dislike for Mr. Smith.

Minton remained loyal to Greenlee, even after McNutt parted company with his patronage secretary, appointing his son to West Point and obtaining for him a $10,000-a-year job as Bituminous Coal Commissioner.

When Minton decided to back Greenlee for the Revenne Collector post, after he lost his job with the Coal Commission, Van Nuys agreed to go along with him out of his desire to have Smith removed.

ALL DID NOT go well with their plans, however, for it developed that the Treasury Department was quite satisfied with Smith's record as Collector. Simth was on friendly terms with Secretary Morganthau and Commissioner Guy T. Helvering, and they had no intention of removing him, if they could avoid it.

They stuck to their guns, even after Minton went to the White House to demand, as a loyal New Dealer, that Greenlee be appointed to the post.

Add these difficulties to the fact that Greenlee was none too popular with McNutt and the State House crowd, and you'll have a fairly accurate understanding of why Smith is still collecting your Federal taxes in Indiana.

IN THE MEANTIME, Treasury agents began checking into Greenlee's back income tax returns and, authoritative reports have it, discovered some very unusual things. The exact nature of their findings has not been revealed, but it is safe to assume that their discoveries were interesting enough to inspire an extension of the investigation to other political leaders.

There is a report going around here, unconfirmed, that Greenlee, irked at the probe of his income and none too pleased with the McNutt crowd, told the Treasury agents, "If you're going to investigate me, why not look into the returns of the whole Two Per Cent Club gang?" The Treasury sleuths, anxious to oblige, took him up on it.

SECRETARY MORGANTHAU, Hyde Park neighbor and intimate friend of the President, is said to have tipped off the White House to the impending Indiana tax scandal which, although not directly involving McNutt, definitely involves many of his Indiana friends and supporters.

Persons close to the President are giving this as one reason why the White House has turned a cold shoulder to the Security Administrator's campaign, after originally encouraging it, and why the McNutt movement has "bogged down" so badly.

ITEMS ABOUT ST. JOE

Temperatures, although somewhat higher than last week, hovered around just a few degrees above zero, for the past few days, with slight snow flurries practically each day. Those who went to Florida to escape the zero weather are suffering most unpleasant cool weather for the South.

Miss Betty Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delvin Armstrong, of Auburn, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Armstrong, of St. Joe, won the title of "Miss Auburn" in the personality contest sponsored by the Auburn chapter of the Moose lodge and held Thursday night of last week at the Auburn high school gymnasium. She will be the city's representative in a district contest at Bryan, Ohio, at a later date. Thirty high school girls participated in the contest.

Entering of judgment against Roy Keller for contempt has been continued in the DeKalb Circuit Court until further order. Keller was held guilty after a hearing recently for failure to pay $16 a month for the support of his son, Earl, but is being given another chance to escape jail. He was cited on complaint of his former wife, Ida E. M. Keller.

Firemen-Auxiliary Dinner

The firemen were entertained to dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Curie, Jan. 16th at 6:30. The committee in charge of this meeting: Frank Curie, Frank Bowman, Albert Moore, Daisy Keeler, Carrie Wade and Callie Ridgway. After dinner the evening was spent playing hearts, euchre and Lexicon.

Of the twelve firemen all except one were present, accompanied by their wives. In a short business session the following auxiliary officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Willard Hurni; vice president, Mrs. Roy Reidenbach; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Derwood Ridgway.

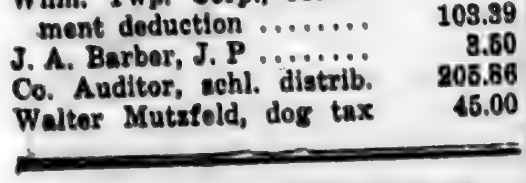
WALTER MUTZFELD, Trustee
Wilmington Township.

Attest:

CHARLES D. KELLER,
C. O. GRIFFIN,
A. H. REINHART,
Advisory board of Wilmington Twp.



During the Winter months when there are considerably fewer hours of daylight it becomes necessary to use the headlights on automobiles and trucks earlier and longer.

Automobile fatalities which occurred during the hours of darkness increased 54.5 per cent from 1930 thru 1937. During the same period, automobile fatalities which occurred during hours of daylight decreased 5.4 per cent.

Our greatest automobile traffic is during the daytime, but our highest automobile fatalities are at night. These facts challenge all of us to be more alert and more courteous in our night driving. It requires additional caution and extra driving ability to move through congested traffic as well as in the "wide open spaces."

Good highway lighting is possible and will help solve this evil and should be installed as rapidly as possible.

ORDERS ALLOWANCE REDUCED

After a hearing in the DeKalb Circuit Court on contempt proceedings against Lamont Likes, Judge W. P. Endicott ordered support payments reduced from $20 a month inasmuch as the eldest daughter, Mary, is now married, living in Fort Wayne. The defendant was directed to pay $12.50 a month for the support of the other child, Joan, who is now nine years of age. Mabel Likes secured a divorce and custody of the children in 1936.

INTERESTING SUMMARY STATE POLICE ACTIVITIES FOR YEAR

Officers of the Indiana State Police travelled more than 7,632,000 miles in 1939 in their work of protecting Indiana citizens by curbing traffic violators, apprehending criminals, servicing accidents and in other duties, according to Don F. Stiver, Superintendent of State Police, in the annual report of the Department.

Bank robberies were reduced to only four for the entire year. More stolen cars were recovered, and a greatly increased number of warnings for traffic violations were issued. Radio telegraph and telephone messages in the Communications Division more than tripled in volume over the preceding year. The division handled 144,356 radio telegraph and radio telephone messages between posts and patrol cars and other police departments within the State and outside the State.

The first two of Indiana's four bank robberies in 1939 have been solved and the offenders sentenced. On January 26th at Mackey, Indiana, robbers escaped with $453.00 in cash and $10,818 in bonds, while on May 12th at Linden approximately $2,000 was taken. The unsolved cases were of a bank at Auburn with a loss of $5,748 and one at Farmland where $2,152 was taken.

In a concerted safety effort to reduce traffic accidents uniformed State Police contacted more than 100,000 people at 672 meetings with safety speeches and films. Warning tickets were given to 34,693 persons, an enormous increase over the previous year. Copies of the warning tickets are placed in the drivers file of the Motor Vehicle Bureau at Indianapolis for future reference for suspension and licensing of the driver.

Accident prevention bureaus were installed in the city police departments of Gary, Bloomington, New Albany and Anderson, under the supervision of the State Police Department working in cooperation with Purdue University Safety Institute. These departments were assisted in setting up an approved record system, training of officers in advanced techniques of accident investigation and the reorganization of the department for more effective traffic control.

Criminal arrests, including both felonies and misdemeanors, totaled 4,322, with convictions in sixty per cent of these cases. For these crimes one person was electrocuted and seven received life sentences. Determinate sentences totaling 536 years and indeterminate sentences carrying a minimum of 362 years and a maximum of 2,116 years were meted out to those criminals whose sentences were for one year or longer.

The Detective Division reported a peak of criminal activity in March and July, 1939, with the lowest point in August. Eight hundred twenty-two automobiles valued at $328,065 were recovered by the Detective Division and were returned to their owners.

The addition of 36,213 sets of fingerprints of apprehended criminals boosted the total number in the files of the Criminal Identification Bureau to 240,724. In the personal identification files, kept for determining the identity of unknown persons meeting death by drowning, fire, traffic and other hazards or for the solution of amnesia cases, the number arose to a total of 42,305 sets of prints, with the addition of 7,069 in 1939. The bureau was enabled to make 8,584 idenifications during the year, of which many resulted in the identification of escaped prisoners, the discovery of escaped paroles and in determining the prisoners in the state farm that were repeaters in that institution.

The scientific crime detection laboratory and its eight branches in the posts in the field rolled up the impressive total of 880 drunkometer tests given to suspected drinking drivers. During the initial weeks of 1939 only about 13% of the persons arrested for driving while intoxicated were given drunkometer tests, while in December the number had increased to about 50%. Two hundred fifteen cases were run on the lie detector, the majority of which resulted in confessions of guilt from the suspected person when the test showed a guilty reaction. Forty-nine handwriting cases were analyzed, 47 blood alcohol analyses were made of persons killed in traffic accidents to determine possible degrees of drunkenness, 42 fingerprint investigations were made by laboratory technicians, 26 poison analyses were undertaktn, 14 firearms identifications and 13 blood identifications were effected.

More than 200 commanding officers and troopers were given two weeks of intensive training in accident investigation and study of the new traffic code at Indiana University as a refresher course for their training originally received as police recruits.

Also in 1939 the State Police occupied their newest barracks at West Lafayette.

YOUTH DEMANDS WORK, LIFE, LIBERTY AND HAPPINESS

Young people have a right to DEMAND, in the words of the Declaration of Independence, "Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." And under the Constitution, they have the right to demand that provision be made for their "general welfare." Youth will not tolerate a continuation of present conditions. That is why increasing numbers of young men and women ARE TURNING TO THE TOWNSEND PLAN.

They know that retiring those over sixty years of age, will at once open the doors of employment and opportunity to them; opportunity TO BECOME USEFUL CITIZENS AND HOME-MAKERS.

The Townsend Plan offers youth a larger opportunity than has been offered by ANY GENERATION of ANY COUNTRY. With increased buying and consuming power to match the productive power of the nation, the standards of living would be raised to what youth not only desires but demands as its RIGHTFUL HERITAGE.

Youth knows that with the Townsend Plan enacted into law, that in their closing years of life, there would be no threat of HUNGER and WANT, if they gave their younger years to honest effort in maintaining business and society under Constitutional Government.

Join the local Townsend Club.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

TAGS ARE REQUIRED ON ADVERTISED SEED

All farmers who advertise seed for sale by means of circular and newspapers are required to have their seed tested and tagged in accordance with the provisions of the Indiana Seed Law, according to H. R. Kraybill, state seed commissioner. The only exemption to the tagging provisions of the law is that a farmer who has grown the seed may sell and deliver it to the purchaser himself on his own premises without tagging.

"Farmers who expect to advertise seed for sale this Spring should immediately make plans to get the seed tested so that this information necessary to fill out the Indiana Seed Tags will be available in time," states Mr. Kraybill.

Seed buyers in turn should exercise their full rights under the law and insist that the seed they buy be properly labeled. Considerable improvement in the quality of seed offered for sale in Indiana has occurred since the passage of the Indiana Seed Law in 1921. This improvement came about by the sellers labeling the seed so that the buyer could see what he was getting.

The Indiana Seed Tags include the seedman's name and address, the percentage purity, the percentage germination, the origin or place where grown and the number of noxious weed seeds per pound. This information is essential to the seed buyer and must be supplied in all cases where the transaction comes under the law.

HOG FEEDERS TO HEAR HELPFUL TALKS AT HOG SCHOOL

Every farmer raising hogs will receive many practical ideas on feeding, management and marketing of hogs at the DeKalb County Hog School, which will be held in Auburn, February 8th. The program will start promptly at 10:00 o'clock with a discussion on practical mixtures of corn, oats and other feeds for sows and young pigs, and how to prevent common pig troubles by John Schwab, of Purdue, who has had many years of experience with pork production porblems.

At 11:00 o'clock, Paul Mitchell, of Purdue, will review the trend of hog production and prices for 1940 as applied to Indiana farmers. The afternoon discussion will start at 1:00 o'clock on feeds and of feeding hogs for market and the practical value of simple and complex protein supplements. Helpful information will be given out on the type, weight, finish, quality and health factors all of which aid in obtaining the best market prices for Indiana hogs.

All features of the program will be illustrated, and plenty of time will be devoted to answering questions and to the discussion of any practical phase of hog production and marketing.

Necro, Erysipelas, Flu and Anemia will be discussed by Dr. Harry Gorman, of Auburn.

C. E. Baker, County Agricultural Agent, reports a growing interest among farmers for the best known information on production, and especially in the marketing of hogs for best returns.

A large attendance from over the county is expected at all sessions of the one-day school.

Many dairymen are wondering how they will fare during 1940. "Gains and losses in the dairy business are largely determined by production practices, and prices received for dairy products," said C. E. Baker, County Agent, who urges dairymen to attend the dairy management and marketing meeting to be held January 30, at 1:00 o'clock in Auburn. The dairy committee consisting of Dr. F. A. Hall, Heber Haynes, Robert Guthrie, Stanley Means, and H. P. Steele are co-operating with the dairy companies operating in the county, in conducting this meeting. E. A. Hannon will discuss wise management of the dairy herd. E. H. Matsen will discuss factors affecting prices of dairy products.

AH, TO BE TEACHER!

(By Dorothy Jean Hook)

St. Joe High School

What fun! Teachers can ask all the questions even if they don't know the answers. And if they desire not to work, it isn't compulsory. If they don't know their lesson, they can keep their books open.

But some teachers! Their looks are enough to knock you down. And then —just think—to have to sit and look at them all day. It is enough to make anyone have Saint Vitus' dance. But that isn't true with all teachers. Oh no! Some are so fascinating, a person holds their breath until they get blue in the face.

And the knocks they get! They sure have to have strong shoulders to be able to endure all the insults thrown at them.

I remember once when I acted as teacher. When I finished the lesson, I suppose everyone talked about me behind my back. "She didn't even stand on both feet! She didn't know the lesson herself! I would hate to have her for a regular teacher!" All these remarks wouldn't have bothered me, though, because it wasn't the truth —I hope. There is an old saying, "It's the truth that hurts."

Even when I bear all this in mind, I still think of what fun it would be if only I was a teacher.

THE WATER CLOCK

(By Joyce Dean)

Grade 6, Spencerville School

The first water clock was a simple contrivance. It was a shell with a tiny hole in one end. This shell took one hour to fill when placed in a bucket of water. A man called the time when it was full. Then he emptied it and set it afloat again.

The Chinese also had a water clock. They filled a vessel with water and let it run slowly in another vessel beneath it. The second vessel had a float that rose with the water. Fastened to the float was a hand that pointed to the hours marked on the side of the vessel. The Chinese water clock was a little more complicated than the shell arrangement.

The people of Greece had probably heard of these water clocks. The Greeks called theirs the Cepaydra, which means, "The water steals away."

LENT

(Ash Wednesday—Easter)

"It is hard for a man to go down into the Valley of Humiliation." (Pilgrim's Progress.)

Lent is a season of spiritual reawakening and growth, climaxing in the Resurrection Joy of Easter.

It is a season for increased Christian fellowship, for careful searching of the scriptures, and for more diligent use of the privilege of prayer.

It is also a season of fasting and self-denial, but only as these serve to remind us of Christ's passion, to emphasize the rule of the spirit over the body, and to make possible greater service to others.

During Lent many Christians will accept a heavier share of the Cross of Service. Many other men, women, boys and girls will take up the Cross for the first time. It will take courage to confess their sins, their need of Christ, but the reward is great— "Thy sins be forgiven thee."

We can never know the meaning of Easter until we have been to Calvary.

If you feel no need for keeping Lent this year, read Luke 18, 9-14.

"Every one that exalteth himself shall be abased and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

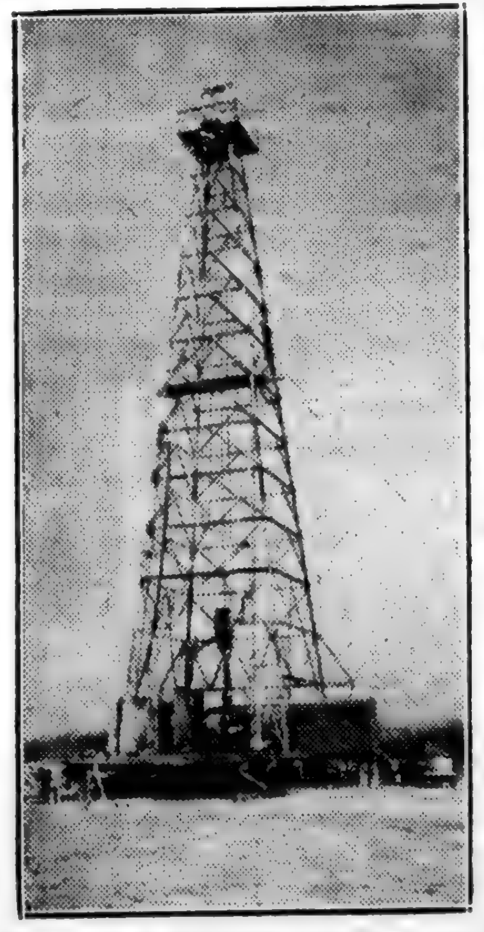
Mrs. Carl Perkins is on the sick list.

Don Keller is on the sick list this week carrying a high fever. Many others are suffering with severe colds and the flu.

John Geisinger, 93, of Garrett, is recovering nicely from a light stroke of a week ago. Chas. Koch visited him Sunday.

The J. E. Foltz farm has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reinhart, now tenants on the Jenkins farm. Mr. Foltz is selling his surplus equipment at private sale. See his ad in the classified column.

OIL AND GAS PRODUCTION DOUBLED DURING 1939—COMPLETE 375 WELLS



Rotary Drill Operating in Knox Co.

Oil and gas production doubled in Indiana during 1939 with a resulting increase of more than 100 per cent in the value of these mineral products, Virgil M. Simmons, Commissioner of the Department of Conservation, said today.

Reports compiled by the Division of Geology show that 375 wells were completed during the past year—more than double the 1938 figure of 159 completed wells, which in turn was above the 1937 total. The major part of the 1939 drilling was in southwestern Indiana—roughly in the corner of the state southwest of a line drawn from Terre Haute to Jeffersonville.

While wells were drilled in 37 Indiana counties during the past year, less than forty of them were outside the southwestern area. One hundred and ten wells—or nearly a third of the number completed in the state, were located in Posey and Gibson counties where the Griffin and New Harmony fields became the center of drilling interest.

During the past year 175 producing oil wells were completed along with 43 producing gas wells, making a total of 218 producing wells against 157 which were dry or non-producing. The year also was marked by extensive leasing and by a revival of drilling activity in parts of the state where wells had been active producers in the past.

While complete reports are not available, it is estimated that the value of the oil and gas produced in Indiana during 1939 will exceed three million dollars—a value more than double the $1,300,000 estimate placed on the 1938 production.

DAVID HOGG IS CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Jan. 30—From a factory worker at twelve to a successful law practice to eight years in Congress.

That is the tabloid history of David Hogg, of Fort Wayne. Now, he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. What follows is a more detailed account of his background.

Mr. Hogg was born on a farm south of Crothersville, in Jackson County, Indiana. His father died after he graduated from common school, so he got a job in a canning factory, where he worked from 12 to 14 hours a day for three months each year. In this manner, he was able to support himself until he graduated from the Crothersville High School at the age of 15.

The following year he had charge of the Crothersville post office, which served a town of 900 persons. Again he worked long hours—from five in the morning till eight at night, and for two hours on Sunday, for $1.50 a week. At the end of a year, the postmaster died after a prolonged illness, and young Hogg became seriously ill. When he left the post office, its books were examined and found correct to a penny.

Recovering from his illness, Mr. Hogg was licensed to teach, and although he was the youngest teacher in the township, he was soon made principal of the township high school. Meanwhile, he found time to attend Indiana University, where he was active in student affairs, and supported himself by working in a restaurant. To save his mother from the hardships of farm life, he brought her to bloomington to live.

After graduating in arts and law courses, he opened his own law office in Fort Wayne in 1913, and even though he had no previous acquaintance in the Northeastern part of the state, David Hogg soon had a substantial law practice. Eight years later he was elected Republican county chairman of Allen county.

After three years, he resigned to enter the race for the Republican nomination for Congress against Louis W. Fairfield, who was regarded as unbeatable. But Dave Hogg made a house-to-house canvass of his district, and after a dynamic campaign, he won the nomination over his veteran opponent. He was elected to Congress for four successive terms.

In Congress, Mr. Hogg took an active part in the development of air mail throughout the nation, and was a member of the sub-committee which perfected the important legislation that was a factor in bringing air mail and air travel to its present status. Mr. Hogg also led the fight in Congress to provide a substantial tariff on all Indiana products. H e defeated a $10,000,000 corn borer appropriation by a rider providing all farmers should receive nine-tenths of all money spent. Mr. Hogg led the fight for the present retirement amendment and cumulative sick leave for all postal employees, and was active in obtaining three major tax reductions.

David Hogg also took a prominent part in all farm, labor and tax legislation, and handled thousands of veterans' claims. During his time as a public servant he held regular office days throughout his district and invited his constituents to bring their problems to him.

Mr. Hogg was the only man of his party ever to be re-elected to Congress from Fort Wayne. His record brought him the unqualified endorsement of all farm, labor and tax organization. Since his retirement from Congress, he has had a substantial law practice throughout Northeastern Indiana, representing many agricultural, labor and business groups.

MAXTON MOTORS ENJOYS LARGEST MONTH IN HISTORY

Trends in automobile buying has changed considerably within the past few years, according to Mr. C. J. Maxton, of the Maxton Motors, Butler Chevrolet dealer. "During the month of December we enjoyed the largest volume of business in our history, selling and delivering 37 new 1940 cars, and 69 used cars," said Mr. Maxton who contributes the demand for automobiles to the fact that owners who contemplated changing in the Spring, are doing so a few weeks ahead of time to assure more comfortable Winter driving.

"Up until recent years," said Mr. Maxton, "owners in this vicinity made a practice of deferring car purchases, either new or used, until Winter was over, and more favorable driving conditions came along. This was on the theory that cold weather was extremely hard on a new car.

"As a matter of fact, that condition no longer exists. Modern automobiles are equal to anything the weather man can cook up. And by the same token, recent-model used cars don't have to be papered, either. When our reconditioning department gets through with them, they are in shape to take their place beside the best, and deliver complete satisfaction regardless of cold and snow."

The firm's recondition, Mr. Maxton said, covers not only the mechanical side of each car—engine transmission, clutch, and brakes—but tires, fenders, and upholstery. "Every trade in" he said, "goes through a careful examination, after which it is repaired and adjusted, each phase of the job being checked off on a special tag as the work progresses. This tag, bearing the inspector's check marks, is the buyer's assurance that it is ready to go, and 'right.' "

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

Our market enjoyed one of the best sales of the season with all pens full and out of town buyers present and anxious for stock. Consignors to this market will be glad to know that Cliff Zeemer, one of the best calf buyers ever to operate on this market is again with us and Marsh expects to buy calves regularly beginning next week. The Toledo Livestock Co. will have a cattle and calf buyer with us each week, while George Horsewood and Fred Borrman will bid to take cattle and calves to the Chicago area.

Herman Woebbeking will continue to be with us and make it tough for buyers who want hogs.

Hogs 190 to 220, $5.40 to $5.80; 240 to 275, $5.40 to $5.50; 275 to 300, $4.80 to $5.10. Fat sows, $3.90 to $4.50. Stags, $2.50 to $3.25. Boars, $1.50 to $2.05. Our slaughter hogs sold 10 to 15c per cwt. above like quality in other auctions held Wednesday.

Veals were of poor quality, there were no select calves but in spite of the lack of quality a top of $12.70 was paid sparingly with the bulk from $12.00 to $12.50. There were not enough good lambs to establish a price but breeding ewes sold actively at steady prices. Out of town buyers were forced to bid higher on butcher cattle than they expected. In the cattle department heifers fat enough for slaughter, $6.55 to $7.60. Fat cows, $5.00 to $5.25. Cutters $4.00 to $4.75. Thin shells $3.50 to $4.00. Bulls, $6.10 to $6.60.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

John L. Lewis, assuming the double role of prophet and undertaker, has hung crepe on the White House door while the occupant still remains anything but a political corpse, and indeed shows no signs of even being a sick man. It seems that after seven years of power, the Administration has gone down to ignominious defeat and has found no solution for unemployment, low income, increased taxation and decreasing foreign trade. Notwithstanding the foregoing, there are no outward and visible tokens that the President has taken the remarks of Mr. Lewis so seriously that he plans to resign and let Mr. Garner finish out the term. It cannot be denied, however, that from the standpoint of pure politics at least, Mr. Lewis has a ready tongue and a faithful following, which are of more service within than without the fold.

Aside from its effect on shippers and those immediately adjacent to the border, the St. Lawrence canal treaty, now under consideration by the United States and Canada, may seem a matter of remote interest and secondary importance. The limiting depth of water at present is about thirteen feet. If increased to twenty-seven, as proposed, and if a foreign power should get control of a St. Lawrence canal zone, hostile troop ships of good size could leave Russia or Germany, and without touching at an intervening port, land an army in Chicago or Duluth. The seas have been praised as a safeguard, yet to extend them inland a thousand miles or so, into continental United States, is something before which naval and military experts, and perhaps all, will do well to pause and consider.

Within a few days, the commercial treaty between the United States and Japan will come to a painless expiration by the operation of its own terms. The Island kingdom then will be open to an embargo or a tariff discrimiation which would be found unpleasant on the other side of the Pacific. It would be idle to deny that there is a widespread if not active feeling in the United States that Japan is treading on China a little too hard. That feeling may be grounded partly on a general sympathy in the abstract for China. More definitely, the open-door policy, established by the United States so long ago is a valuable asset for this country, and something in the maintenance of which, it is to be suspected, Japan has little interest.

Sharp words were passed in the House over the continuance of the Dies committee, but its life was saved, so far as the lower chamber is concerned, by a vote of 345 to 21. The Dies activities are regarded mildly and somewhat covertly as an anti-Administration effort, although the majority recorded indicated that the House did not take much stock in that theory. The findings of the committee have made good reading. They have convinced the average person that un-AAmerican activities actually exist, and that there is truth in tne adage that where there is smoke there must be fire.

The Senate Banking Committee has advocated a measure which will make it possible for the federal government to extend an increased credit to Finland. The situation was approached somewhat gingerly, and with the careful tread of a man walking on thin ice. The money must be spent here, for food stuffs, and not for munitions of war. The Finns, it seems, are to be put in good condition for a boxing match but not for bomb-dropping. This is markedly to the dislike of the borrowers, but very likely they will find that the cakes and ale will keep somehow.

A few days ago, Washington was carpeted with a nine inch snow fall, to the pleasure of the small boy and to the discomfiture of his elders, who ougth to have little to say, since they have not had to put up with the like for eleven years. A mere matter of twenty-five thousand dollars out of the city treasury, and a like sum spent by motorists for towing and repairs, set the town jogging along at the accustomed pace, after a slowing-up that lasted a day or two.

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.,—Rep. Chas. A. Halleck is an ambitious young man, but his immediate goal is not the United States Senate. Halleck has several important reasons for wanting to return to the House of Representatives and as far as he is concerned personally, supporters of Ray Willis need have no fear of possible opposition in the State convention next Summer.

The curly-haired Second District Congressman is currently engaged in the investigation of the National Labor Relations Board, as a member of the five-man Smith Committee. Only a short time ago he was elevated to membersnip on the powerful Rules Committee of the House, ahead of several older Congressmen who actively sought the post.

All in all, Halleck is a very busy man—much too busy to even consider risking his seat in the House by entering the Senatorial race.

Halleck's rise in politics has been nothing short of miraculous. At the age of 39, after less than five years in Congress, he ranks among the top half-dozen Republicans in the House. If a Republican Congress is elected next Fall, which is altogether possible, he will be in an excellent position to inherit one of the House leadership posts.

Life may quite conceivably begin at 40—in earnest—for the pride of Rensselaer.

ALTHOUGH little mention has been made of it, Halleck was largely responsible for the fact that tne new Indiana G. O. P. Congressmen received more than their share of major committee appointments last year.

As a member of the Committee on Committees, Halleck engineered the appointment of Hoosier Republicans to five important House committees—although most of the new Republicans (there were 70 of them) had to be content with minor posts.

Major committees on which the Indiana G. O. P. delegation is represented include: Judiciary, Raymond S. Springer; Labor, Gerald W. Landis; Military Affairs, Forest A. Harness; Post, Office, George W. Gillie; Banking and Currency, Noble J. Johnson, and Interstate Commerce and Rules, Mr. Halleck.

ALL SEVEN of the Republican Congressmen from Indiana plan to go to Indianapolis on February 9 and 10 to participate in a "grass roots" conference with Hoosier farm leaders at the Claypool Hotel. And believe it or not, the gentlemen from Capitol Hill have promised to let the farmers do all the talking.

The conference will be an open forum affair, presided over by Rep. Clifford Hope, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the House Committee on Agriculture, who has conducted similar hearings in several Midwestern states.

Arrangemets for the conference are in charge of Representatives Gillie and Landis, who have emphasized the fact that the hearings will be non-partisan in character and open to farmers of all shades of political opinion.

Farm leaders who have indicated they will be present include Hassil E. Schenck, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau; Herschel D. Newton, master of the Indiana State Grange; Robert Spencer, president of the Indiana Farmers Guild, and L. M. Volger chairman of the Indiana Agricultural Conservation Committee.

INDIANA Democrats will have a difficult time keeping Senator Van Nuys "in line" during the coming campaign if his most recent outburst against the New Deal is any indication of what can be expected next Fall.

Democratic chieftans in Washington are still shaking their heads sorrowfully over a "Republican" speech the Senator gave at a belated Jackson Day dinner here tne other evening.

I his speech, Van Nuys chastised the Roosevelt Administration roundly and demanded that the Democratic Party reurn to the "democracy of Jefferson and Jackson."

Van Nuys demanded that Congress reclaim its costitutional rights, curtail expenditures, stop heckling business and give it a chance to rehabilitate itself, restore to the states their proper functions and—in foreign affairs—stay in our own back yard and mind our own business.

THE SPEECH, quite the bitterest attack on the New Deal by a Democrat in months, caused considerable comment on Capitol Hill. It even inspired the Washington Star to publish a front page cartoon picturing Jim Farley tapping Van Nuys on the shoulder during his speech and reminding him:

"Fred, you're supposed to be talking at a Jackson Day dinner—not a Lincoln feast."

MILLER HANDLE FACTORY AT HICKSVILLE BURNS

Five fire departments saved surrounding buildings valued at $75,000 in a three-hour fight early Monday as the main plant of the Miller Manufacturing Co. burned to the ground at an estimated loss of $30,000 in Hicksville's second major fire loss within 40 hours.

The concern, which makes wooden handles as well as a line of completed shovels, manure forks and other farm tools, will rebuild in Hicksville, L. D. Miller, firm partner and manager, said. The plant was at the peak of one of its best seasons with 40 employed. Production will be maintained through use of the Crook Son & Co. factory at nights.

FRANK LONG TAKES HIS LIFE SUNDAY

Funeral services were held Wednesday at 1:30 P. M. for Frank A. Long, 51, 1238 Swiney Avenue, Fort Wayne, who hanged himself with a rope in the second floor of the barn uesd as a garage, at his home Sunday afternoon. A verdict of suicide was returned by Dr. A. R. Savage, deputy Allen County coroner, in Mr. Long's death.

Her husband told her he was going to the barn to work on one of two cars there about 2:30 P. M. Sunday Mrs. Long told investigating officials. An hour later, she said, she went to the barn to see if her husband was not suffering from the cold. She found his body. Mrs. Long cut down the body before calling for aid.

Investigators said an inch rope Mr. Long had tied around his neck had been looped over a beam. He apparently had climed a ladder, then stepped off to hang himself.

Mr. Long was a worker in the heat treating department of the International Harvester Company plant. Rev. Paul Krauss, pastor of Trinity English Lutheran Church, officiated. Burial in the I. O. O. F. Cemetery at New Haven. Mr. Long was a member of this church and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

In addition to the widow, Mrs. Grace Long, two children, Gene and Doris Long, survive. A sister, Mrs. Lee Burgette, New Haven, also survives.

Frank was born in St. Joe and was a brother of the late, Mrs. Eva Miller.

HICKSVILLE METHODIST CHURCH SUFFERS $40,000 LOSS

Rebuilding of the Hicksville Methodist Church is planned after a $40,000 fire, fought by four departments, destroyed the interior of the structure Sunday morning.

Sunday services will be held in the community building until a new building is completed.

Flames originating in the furnace room quickly spread through the interior. Departments from Defiance, Sherwood and Edgerton were called at 9:15 A. M. when Hicksville's 400-gallon pumper became overheated after battling the fire for an hour. Discovered by Charles Sim at 8:00 A. M., the flames were extinguished at 1 P. M.

Although the church was erected 42 years ago at a cost of $20,000, church trustees believed that exact replacement of structure and contents under modern construction would be near $75,000. Only $18,000 insurance was carried.

CLYDE HART WRITE NEWS CONCERNING FLORIDA TODAY

Believes That Old DeKalb County Is About The Best Place Yet. Weather Is Unreasonable.

Port Richey, Fla.
Jan. 28, 1940. 8 A. M.

To my Friends in Indiana:

This is surely a sad morning in Florida. The thermometer went down as low as 12 degrees above zero last night and has frozen nearly all the fruit in the citrus belt. Of course that is only a small part of the loss as it almost ruins the trees for several years. I visited one grove this morning the fruit was so hard that when dropped it sounded like a croquet ball.

The owner told me he used four hundred cords of wood last night to ward off the freeze but it did no good, this means a great loss as wood is very expensive here. The "St. Petersburg Times" stated in last night's paper that wood had gone up to $4.00 per cord.

We went out to a Rail Road bridge yesterday where a spring flows out of the rock into the river. The water in the river was so cold that the fish came to this spring water to get warm. The water was so filled with fish you could not see the bottom. All you had to do was fasten a triple hook on the end of a pole and reach out and hook them in. Of course you had to choose the variety you wanted as there were many kinds that were not good for food. There was one variety called needle fish which is about 18 inches long, they could be caught by the barrel but they are not very good to eat.

We are located in a camp about 50 miles north of St. Petersburg. We go out each morning and get up our wood supply, we usually hunt up a Red Cedar stump which makes a good fuel. There has been but two days in which we did not need a fire in order to be comfortable.

We went to church and Sunday School today at the Community Church. One thing I noted in particular was the absence of young people, this in part could be accounted for as a great number of the attendants were tourists and most of them are people past the prime of life. In this camp today there are 27 people and but one child. The tourists here today come from the following states, Indiana, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Texas, Ohio, and Tennessee.

We will be at Port Richey another week then move southward to Homestead which is in the extreme southern end of Florida.

We visited our gladiolus field last Friday at Lakeland and found them just coming through the ground. They have been retarded in growth by the extreme cool weather. We covered the tips to prevent them freezing. We are particularly fortunate in that they were not advanced in growth or they would all have been frozen.

The more I travel about the more I think that Ohio, Indiana and Illinois is the garden of the earth.

With best wishes to my Indiana Friends. I remain

Yours truly,
Clyde Hart.

Lowenthal Solves A Problem

By SCOTT W. RYALL

(Released by McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

MR. LOWENTHAL entered the Ninth ward police station sadly. He looked old and weary as one might well be, who is an earnest merchant, waking occasionally from his financial duties to find his one great hope roosting in jail.

"Lowenthal," Captain Atkinson began without preliminary, "your kid got up another gang. You know he was president of the outfit called the Night Riders we broke up?"

The Ninth ward's jeweler nodded his head dully.

"Sure. Sure. But listen—what can I do with him? I busted a brush. I gotta belt that don't make no impression except he howls."

"Well, that's your problem!" the captain said angrily. "We've had just about enough of him. Last night he broke into a cigar stand."

"I already paid Blumley for the damage," Lowenthal said hastily, "and it wasn't just Izzy."

"No, it wasn't just Izzy!" the officer snapped, "but those other boys wouldn't have been there if your son hadn't thought the scheme up. Their fathers will tell them where they get off but, Lowenthal, I'm getting sick of turning Izzy's case back to you. There's another way."

"You mean," the old man said painfully, "the reform school?"

"As sure as I'm running this station. Better that one goes up than the whole bunch. This time," he said gruffly to the woeful father, "he's going home with you but the next time—Lowenthal, the next time I won't even call you in! Come along."

Lowenthal followed meekly out to the cells and when his son, Izzy, popped up from the cot it needed no second glance to see that his captivity had bred impatience but not repentance.

"Hi, Pop!" he called through the bars. "Jeez! It's about time you got around."

The policeman had the keys in his hand but stood looking thoughtfully, coldly, at the thin arrogant face of the boy.

"Izzy," he said forcefully, "I'm not letting you out just because you want to go. You don't like it in there but have you thought how it would be if you were cooped up until you were twenty-one?"

"Aw, gee, Cap, we were just horsing around."

"Izzy," Lowenthal said hoarsely, "you hear what Captain Atkinson says?"

"Sure, I heard it," the boy mumbled angrily. "I heard enough of what Cap says. Let's get out of here."

Suddenly Lowenthal's face set grimly.

"Captain," he said firmly, "will you get me a belt, please?"

Atkinson's eyes twinkled.

"Gladly," he said briefly and quickly detached one from his trousers.

The boy looked startled at the impending and semi-public indignity. He started to blubber and when his father made the threat more realistic by asking the officer to open the door, he howled in earnest.

Izzy tried to dodge but four walls penned him close and in a moment he was wriggling helplessly under his father's firm grasp.

When Lowenthal had finished, he tossed the belt to the policeman and forcibly sat the boy back on the iron cot.

"Izzy!" he called sharply, then repeated it as a sterner command while the boy ignored him.

"Yea?" he asked tearfully.

"That's from me. A good licking. You got it coming. You got a lot more coming. You're a smart boy, ain't you? A wise feller, too clever to be decent!"

He stepped briskly from the cell and slammed the door.

"Pop—" Izzy started.

"All right," the father persisted, "I give you your licking, you wise feller that thinks it's horsy to be a thief! Now, you think maybe I'm going to haul you home? Home with me? "Yah," he taunted, "think again, Izzy. The reform school for you and we'll have no more—"

The boy burst into a deafening howl of fear; of hasty repentance. Lowenthal took the captain's arm and quickly guided him back into the corridor.

"Lowenthal," Atkinson remonstrated, "don't you think he's had enough?"

"Listen," the merchant said excitedly, "I licked him and left him in prison. All alone, see? Well, he'll think now. He'll think about his sore bottom, anyway."

"Still," the other said hesitantly, "I kind of hate sending a kid to the school without giving him one last chance."

"The school doesn't come in. You keep him three days. Then bring him around and say you persuaded me to take him in again. You see, he'll believe I'll let him go to prison next time instead of trotting down here to haul him out."

Atkinson was grinning broadly.

"Then there won't be any next time," he said.

The father looked fondly back toward the cell and listened to muffled sobs.

"I guess," he said confidently, "you guessed it, Captain."

CELEBRATE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY IN FLORIDA

Mrs. Clyde Hart celebrated her fortieth wedding anniversary on Saturday, January 27, by entertaining a group of ladies in Waterson's Camp at Port Richey, Florida, to an afternoon tea.

Those present besides the hostess were, Mrs. Paul Goettsch, of Happy, Texas; Mrs. Henry Hartman, Florence, Wis.; Mrs. Walter Martin, South Bend, Ind.; Mrs. Iver Werner, Ashby, Mass.; Mrs. John Cook, Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. Howard Roark, Bellevue, Mich, and Mrs. Fred Hart, St. Joe.

The ladies presented Mrs. Hart with a beautiful tray made of Florida shells, pine-needles and raffia.

Tea, pecan rolls, wafers and mints were served.

The following poem was written by Mrs. Fred Hart in honor of the occasion:

Fortieth Anniversary

When I was married forty years
Tho far away from home
I decided to celebrate
With those who like to roam.

While camping at Port Richey
The weather cool and clear,
We met friends from many states,
Whose memory we hold dear.

We were asked to a Swedish coffee mete
And had a lovely time.
So we said we'd have a tea
And ask our friends to dine.

We made some little favors
Of shells and paint of gilt
Arranged them into flowers
I'm sure they'll never wilt.

The cabin was quite crowded
So we took the one bed down
And stood it up against the wall,
Then turned the other around

To make room for the table
Where guests could seated be,
To eat their roll and wafers
And sip a cup of tea.

Mrs. Hartman from Wisconsin,
Mrs. Martin from South Bend,
Mrs. Goettsch of Texas, and
Mrs. Werner, our Swedish friend.

Mrs. Roark of Michigan,
And Mrs. Cook from home,
Came to Florida for warm weather
Not because we like to roam.

But the weather here is chilly.
The tide on Tuesday quite a sight.
The wind so very high and strong
'Twas hard to stay in bed that night.

But we are hoping that each morn
Will bring a warmer day.
At that it's warmer here than home,
So I guess we'll have to stay.

Try a little entertaining,
Just a gathering of new friends,
And for Florida's chilly weather
Try to make a few amends.

But through forty years of marriage
Chilly days are bound to fall
Tho most of them have been quite pleasant,
As I now the days recall.

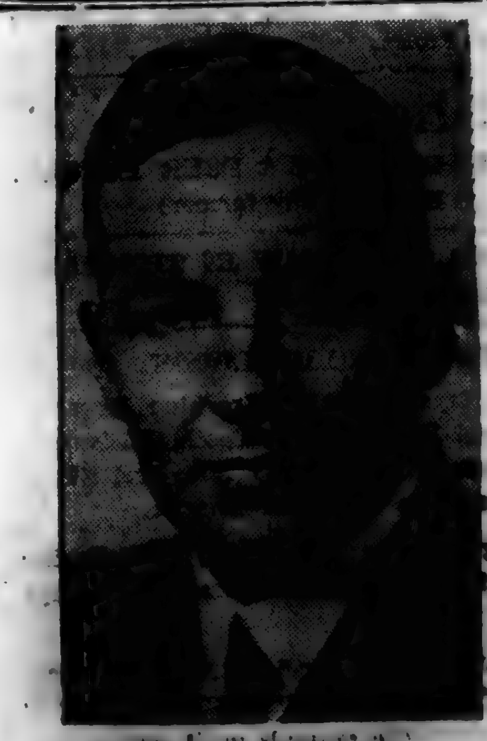
Winifred Hart.

"LINCOLN IN INDIANA"

By David Hogg

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 8.—"The fourteen formative years of Lincoln's life in Indiaa have won the admiration of mankind," David Hogg, of Fort Wayne, said in an address before the Marion County Council of Republican Women at the Columbia Club this afternoon.

Mr. Hogg, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor pointed out, "In 1816, Lincoln at the age of seven came to Spencer County and at the age of twenty-one went forth from Indiana, a hardy frontiersman, his hands calloused with toil and his mind imbued with high principles and an unfaltering will for which the world honors him.



HON. DAVID HOGG

"In those early days when Indiana was a wilderness his education was not considered meager," Mr. Hogg continued. "He attended school for five terms and two months each and went in the three "R's" as far as the pioneer schools provided. He also attained strength to act on his own initiative and on his own convictions. He was obedient and learned to return good for evil though he thrashed the local bully. He resisted all forces which tended to make him drift. Lincoln's determination began early in life. At the age of nine he wrote, 'Abe Lincoln, his hand and pen. He will be good, but God knows when.' When eighteen he asserted, 'When I hit slavery I will hit it hard!' These were forerunners of his immortal declaration: 'May the migthy scourge of war soon pass away, yet, if God wills, it must continue until every drop of blood drawn to the lash shall be repaid by another one drawn by the sword.'

"Too often there has been a tendency to gloss-over the vital importance of these formative years in Hoosier surroundings. Lincoln, a man of sadness, referred to them as the happiest years of his life. His rapid rise, after he left our state, proves that his Hoosier youth had readied him for his unparalleled role in the history of the Republic.

"Lincoln returned to Indiana when he was thirty-five to campaign for Henry Clay. He was enthusiastically received a t Vincennes, Bruceville, Washington, Rockport, Carter Township, Gentryville, Boonville, and Evansville. He made a business trip through a part of the state in 1856. He spoke in Indianapolis, September 19, 1859, and February 11, 1861 when he said:

" 'I appeal to you to constantly bear in mind that not with politicians, not with presidents, not with office seekers, but with you is the question shall the Union and shall the liberties of the country be preserved to the latest generations.'

"Lincoln, in saving our Union proved the effectiveness of representative government. His instrument was the Republican Party, which was founded. Its history is the story of the constructive growth of America. The courage and achievements of Lincoln, thorugh the force of his exalted character, will always challenge every one to develop by individual initiative, his own latent powers. On this depends all progress. And on representative government preserved by Lincoln depends the safety of civilization."

LINCOLN DAY DINNER MONDAY EVENING

The ticket sale for the Lincoln Day dinner to be held in the Knights of Pythias hall at Auburn next Monday evening, has reached the limit, but anyone who desires to buy tickets for the dinner may do so and an overflow will be made to care for them.

Following the dinner meeting which is called for 6:30 o'clock, the Republicans and all others will assemble in the assembly room at the court house where the principal address of the evening will be made. It is expected that the speaking in the assembly room will begin at 8 o'clock.

Hon. Raymond E. Willis, of Angola, Republican candidate for the nomination for United States Senator, will be the principal speaker of the evening.

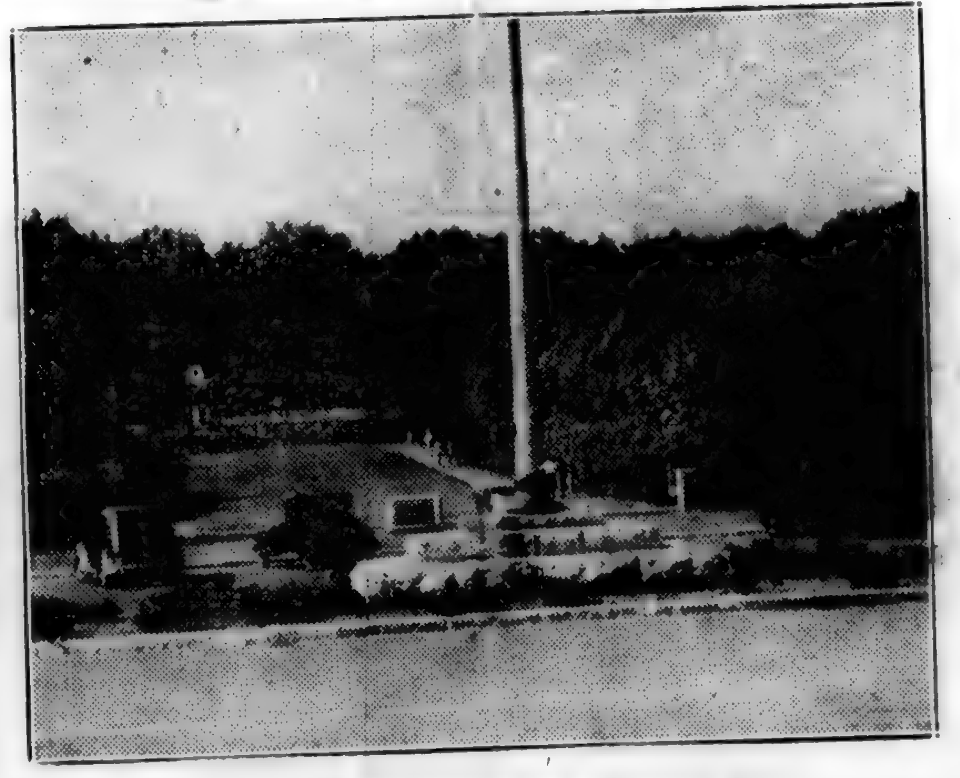
Howard W. Mounts, of Garrett, will preside at the assembly room and introduce the speaker. There will be plenty of seats and the public is invited.

The Stevens Troubadors will furnish the special musical numbers at the assembly room. This part of the entertainment will be delightful and everyone who has heard them will be more than pleased to hear them again.

L. L. C.

At a recent meeting of the L. L. C. held at the home of Mrs. Frank Stevenson at Spencerville, Mrs. Florence Husted gave a splendid book review of Drums Along the Mohawk. The January 31st meeting was at the home of Mrs. Leslie Wilbern. Mrs. Ines Hadsell read a paper on recent legislation showing the influence of the General Federation in a few important pieces of legislation. At this meeting the club voted to assist in the sale of the various articles made by the people in the School for the Blind at Indianapolis. This is a major federation project. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Ralph Keeler on February 14.

Indiana's Lincoln Memorial Impressive in Simplicity



Approach to the Nancy Hanks Lincoln Grave

Around the grave of Nancy Hanks Lincoln and the site of the cabin in which the Licoln family spent fourteen years on Hoosier soil, Indiana has created a memorial, impressive in its natural simplicity and a shrine of national importance.

This memorial will be the setting for the annual pilgrimage of the Indiana Lincoln Union, commemorating the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln and during the year will be-visited by thousands from all parts of the country. Sharing in the interest of the visitors is Lincoln state park, adjoining the memorial, with its thousand acres of wooded hills, a lake, picnic areas, trails and drives.

Located in Spencer County, near Lincoln City and accessible over improved highways from all directions, the memorial area and park have been developed by the Department of Conservation with the co-operation of the Indiana Lincoln Union and other interested individuals and groups. Much of the actual work was done by a camp of the Civilian Conservation Corps with the co-operation of the National Park Service. Other federal work agencies have assisted in the program.

In the development of the memorial area and the establishment of the park especial care has been taken to retain and enhance the natural beauty while providing such facilities as are necessary for the visitors attracted, Virgil M. Simmons, commissioner of the Department of Conservation, pointed out today. The grave is marked by a simple stone and protected by a low iron fence, erected years ago when interest was aroused in its preservation.

At the site of the cabin to which Thomas Lincoln brought his family and where they lived while Abraham grew to manhood, a marker resembling the foundation logs and the fireplace has been placed by the Lincoln Union. The original hearthstoes, discovered during the placing of this marker, have been preserved and add to the interest of visitors.

The memorial area and the park are recognized as one of the important tributes to the "Great Emancipator" taking a place beside the birthplace in Kentucky and the tomb in Illinois. It was in this Hoosier setting that he underwent the experiences and developed the characteristics which marked his later life.

1939 GASOLINE TAXES AND SIXTEEN STATE HOUSES

The gasoline taxes paid by the Indiana motorists during any single month except one in 1939 would have paid for the building of the Indiana State House, according to Leland K. Fishback, Secretary of the Indiana Petroleum Industries Committee.

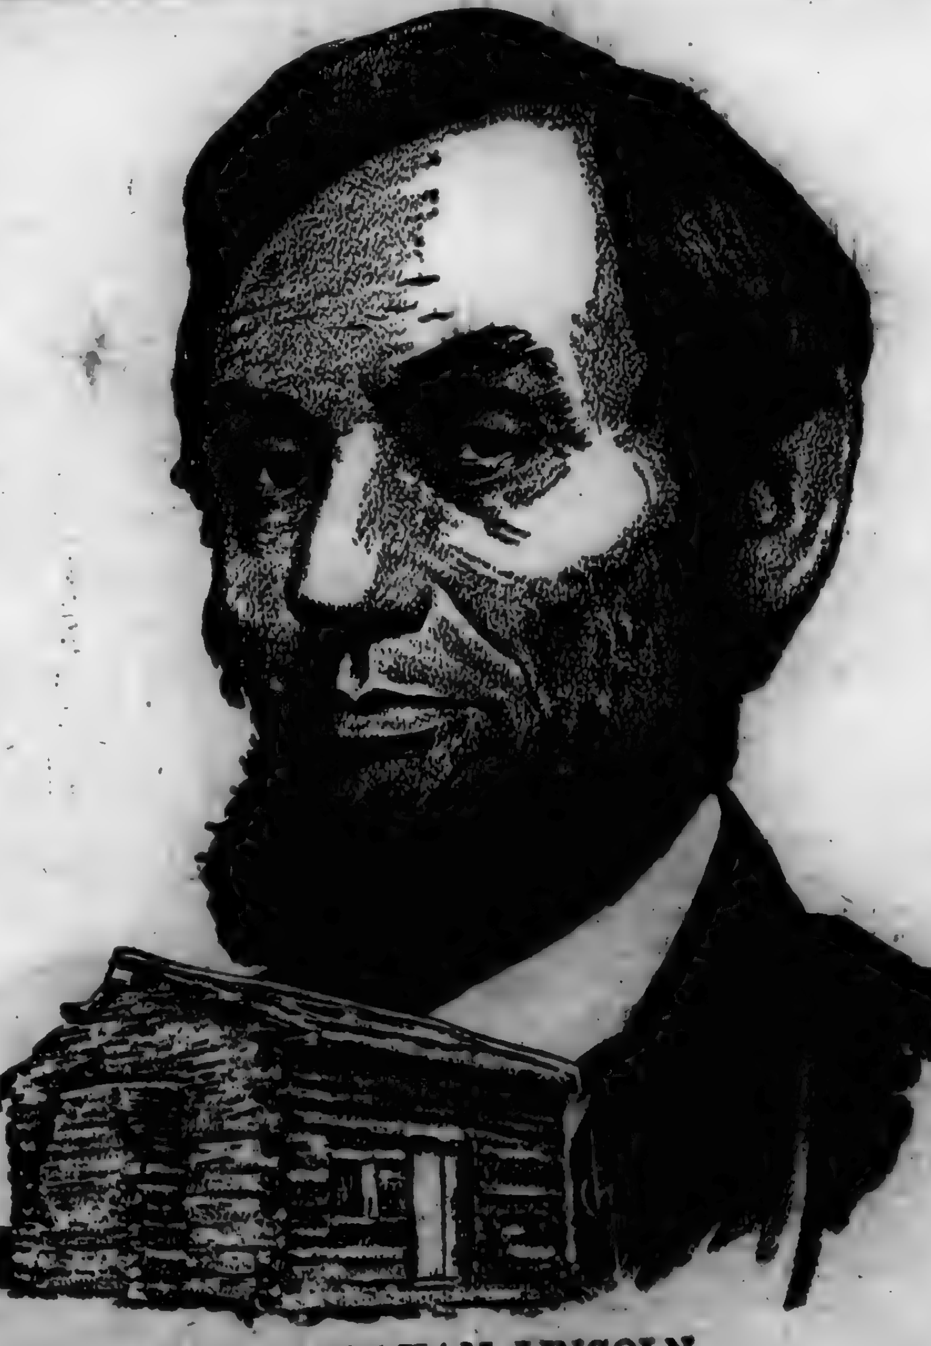
"The Indiana State Capitol building," Fishback said, "cost $1,980,969. This figure was so impressive at the time of construction that it was chisled on a marble slab in the rotunda of the State House.

"During 1939, the average monthly state gasoline tax collections were over $2,000,000. In addition to this, the motorist taxpayers paid a monthly average of more than $500,000 in gasoline taxes to the federal government. Bote state and federal levies upon gasoline in 1939 would have paid for 16 state capitol buildings with $610,859.14 left over.

"There was only one month that the state and federal gasoline taxes fell a little short of paying this cost. The collections during the other eleven months would more than have equalled this amount. The lowest collections were in March when the taxpayers paid $1,893,360.83 in gasoline taxes. The highest collections were made in June and they amounted to $3,214,032.68. The monthly average during 1939 was $2,692,196.93.

"When one compares the average month's gasoline tax collection to the cost of the State House and finds that the collections of state and federal taxes are greater than the cost of the State Capitol building, it graphically illustrates the tremendous burden ow being carried by the Indiana motorists."

The Martyred Lincoln



ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Lincoln Wrote His Own Autobiography

Document in Possession of Milwaukee Family.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S autobiography, consisting of slightly more than 500 words in his own handwriting, is in the possession of Mrs. Harriet F. Richardson and her son, of Milwaukee, Wis.

They were willed the document by the late Miss Fannie Fell. Jesse Fell, Miss Fell's father, shared law offices with Lincoln in Springfield, Ill. He prevailed upon Lincoln to write the autobiography in 1859 when it became apparent that the great emancipator would become a Presidential candidate.

Extracts from the autobiography follow:

"I was born February 12, 1809, in Hardin county, Kentucky. My parents were both born in Virginia of undistinguished families, second families, I should say. My mother, who died in my tenth year, was of a family of the name of Hanks, some of whom now reside in Adams, and others in Macon county, Illinois.

"My paternal grandfather, Abraham Lincoln, emigrated from Rockingham county, Virginia, to Kentucky about 1781 or 1782, where a year or two later he was killed by Indians, not in battle, but by stealth, when he was laboring to open a farm in the forest.

"His ancestors, who were Quakers, went to Virginia from Berks county, Pennsylvania. An effort to identify them with the New England family of the same name, ended in nothing more definite than a similarity of Christian names of both families, such as Enoch, Levi, Mordecai, Solomon, Abraham and the like.

"My father, at the death of his father, was but six years of age and he grew up literally without education. He removed from Kentucky to what is now Spencer county, Indiana, in my eighth year.

"At twenty-one I came to Illinois and passed the first year in Illinois—Macon county. Then I got to New Salem, where I remained a year as a sort of clerk in the store. Then came the Black Hawk war and I was elected a captain of volunteers, a success which gave me more pleasure than any I have had since. I went into the campaign, was elected, ran for the legislature the same year (1832) and was beaten. Only time I have ever been beaten by the people. The next three succeeding biennial elections I was elected to the legislature.

"During this legislation period I had studied law and removed to Springfield to practice it. In 1841 I was elected to the lower house of congress. From 1849 to 1854 I practiced law more assiduously than ever before—always a Whig in politics, and generally on the Whig electoral tickets, making active canvasses.

"If any personal description of me is thought desirable, it may be said, I am 6 feet 4 inches in height, lean in flesh, weighing on an average 180 pounds; dark complexion, with coarse hair and gray eyes—no marks or brands recollected."

Overhead a man say the sky makes a very pretty roof only it leaks!

For every cold in the head in St. Joe there are ten ways of curing it.

The trouble with a lot of self-made men, they need their seams taken in.

They advertise that buying on credit is their pleasure. And paying is ours!

It is not as important what folks here in St. Joe think about you, as what folks here might know about you.

A citizen of St. Joe is only fooling himself when he thinks he is fooling the world.

Where's that fellow who started tne rumor that Great Britain was going to resume payment of her war debt, in December?

NO NAMES

The celebration of birthdays of famous men brings forth a suggestion from a distressed citizen, that too many statues of illustrious people, do not bear their names. He wonders how a foreigner can tell who is who and why. The statue usually bears the name of the manufacturer! But most of the statues in our country need no introduction as their bronze figure is familiar to almost everyone. A schoolboy was asked, "What was Abraham Lincoln most famous for" and the reply, "For his memory." "What makes you think so?" asked the teacher, "Because there are so many statues to his memory," replied the boy.

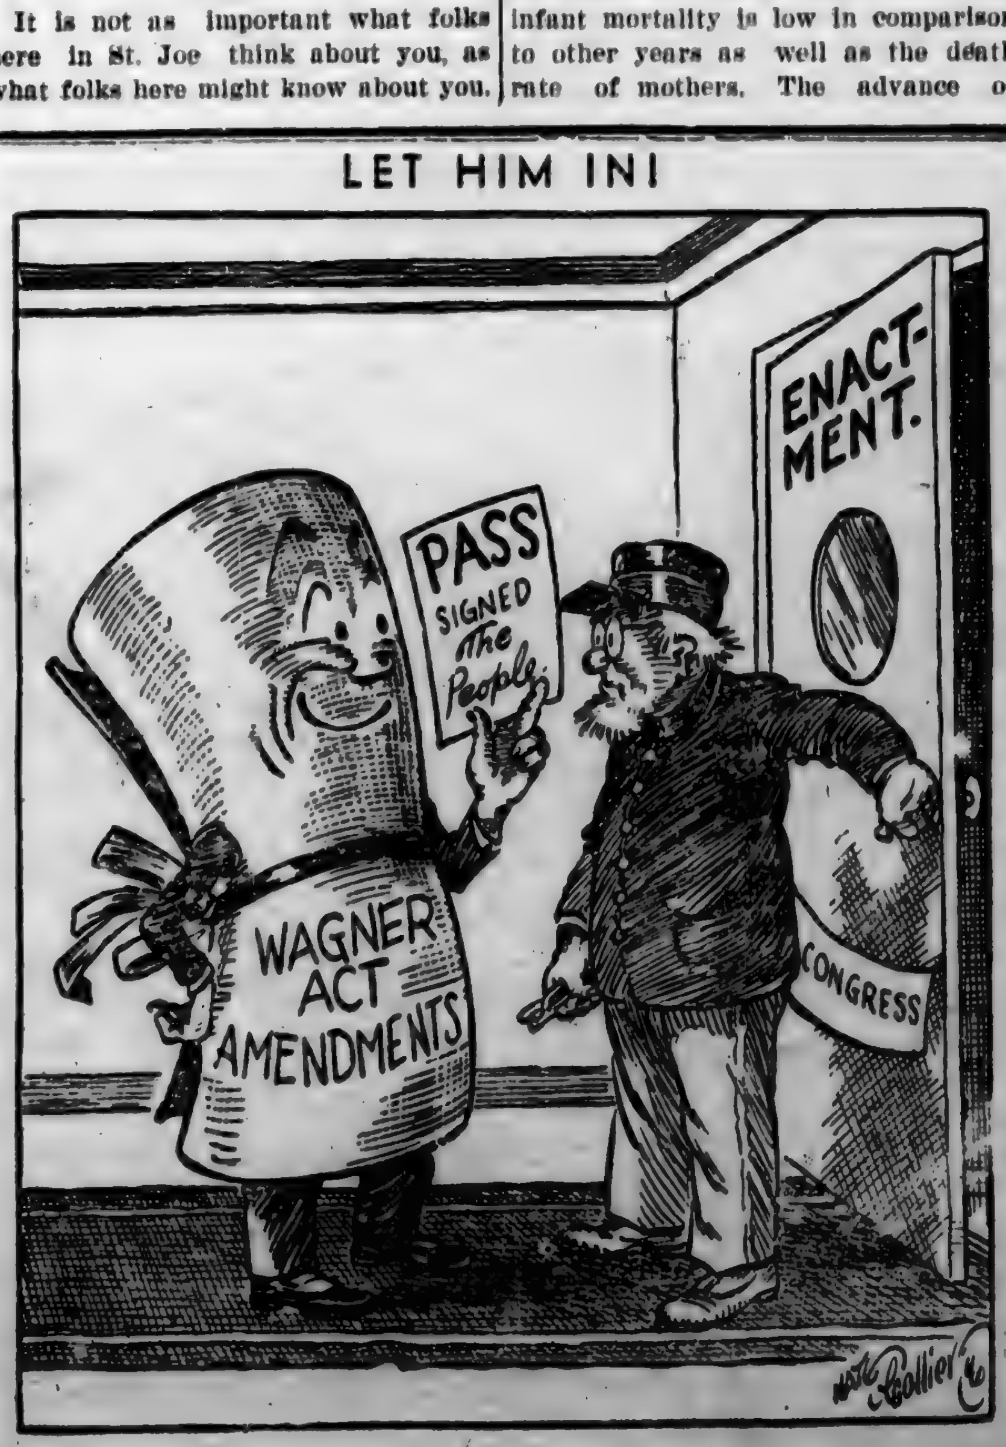
GLAD TIDINGS

Heartening it is when the U. S. can cut down her yearly death rate. The infant mortality is low in comparison to other years as well as the death rate of mothers. The advance of science and the steps forward in medical research is our hope as mankind fights the foe disease. That cancer and heart disease is increasing is a saddening note, but many skilled men are devoting their time to these menaces. While there are men to fight for health a courageous battle will be waged. We in St. Joe have faith in the ability of modern science to put up the good fight.

A BELIEF

The famous New York columnist, O. O. McIntyre, who passed away some time ago and leaving his public at a loss to replace him, was said by some to be a skeptic regarding religion. Here is an excerpt from a letter written to a woman in Ohio who had expressed her sentiments regarding a piece McIntyre had written dealing with religion. One sentence is enough, "I do know that only those of us who have faith and believe in a higher power have any inward peace in these days of turmoil." That is a belief and a faith, and is impressive enough for those readers who enjoyed "Odd's" writings.

LET HIM IN!



GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Framed on the wall of Rep. George W. Gillie's Washington office is a check from the Department of Agriculture for $7.32, which he received several weeks ago for not growing corn on his 80-acre farm near Fort Waye. A few days ago he received another check from the same source, this time in the amount of $32.57.

Farmer Gillie co-operated in the corn reduction program not for the purpose of obtaining Government benefits, but for the simple reason that he did not wish to increase his corn acreage. Problem: Should he accept the benefit payments, which he does not believe he earned, or should he disregard his natural Scotch instincts and return the checks?

CONGRESSMAN Gillie's collection of naughty magazines which he gathered for use in promoting his Obscene Literature Bill is rapidly disintegrating.

The magazines were thoroughly digested by House leaders before the bill passed the lower chamber recently and are now being circulated among influential members of the Senate, where the measure is now awaiting action.

One look at the publications is usually enough to convince the most backward legislator that the Gillie Bill should be enacted.

Most effective bit of "literature" in the collection, from the standpoint of winning support for the bill, is a luridly-illustrated article on "Lobby Mistresses." The story deals with the activities of a group of gay maidens who use their charms to influence Congressmen and Senators.

The Gillie Bill would discourage the publication of lewd magazines by forcing their owners and editors to reveal themselves to public scorn.

IT WAS NO mere coincidence that the Republican Farm Conference, to be held at Indianapolis next week-end, was scheduled so conveniently for Congressmen planning to attend Lincold Day rallies in Indiana.

Unless legislative business prevents, Republican members of Congress from Indiana plan to go directly home following the hearings for Lincoln dinners on Monday. In several cases it will be the only visits to their districts before adjournment next Summer.

SCENE: Congressional reception at the White House. Characters: Postmaster General Farley, your correspondent and the Little Woman.

The L. W. (Coyly) "Oh, Mr. Farley, do you shake hands with Republicans?"

Mr. Farley. (Bowing gallantly) "My dear, you look too intelligent to be a Republican."

The L. W. (Now a Farley-for-President fan) "This is my husband, Mr. Farley. Do you still think I look intelligent?"

Mr. Farley. (Always the politician) "I certainly do. Good luck to both of you."

MR. FARLEY, John L. Lewis and General Hugh Johnson are pretty much of the same mind about Paul V. McNutt. To Farley, McNutt is "that platinum haired so-and-so," to Lewis he is a "political adventurer," and to Johnson—well—he is many things. The General, in that inimitable way of his, recently summed up the McNutt situation as follows:

"Mr. Roosevelt doesn't care for able men. But if a man is able and a good yesser his ability might not disqualify him, unless it happened to be so great that he took some of the spotlight. Then Mr. Roosevelt would crack down on him or sew him up as he did so cleverly to pretty boy Paul McNutt, who has been as neatly and completely bundled as a caterpillar in a cocoon."

ANNOUNCEMENT by Senators Minton and Van Nuys that they have given up hope of having Pleas Greenlee named Internal Revenue Collector for Indiana came as no surprise to insiders, who have known all along that the appointment would never go through.

In the first place, the Treasury Department, backed by Mr. Roosevelt, has stoutly refused to oust Will Smith, incumbent collector. In the second place, Greenlee is in the "dog house" with Indiana Democrats, who blame him for the annoying income tax probe which is threatening to burst the McNutt presidential bubble.

One Washington correspondent, close to the Indiana situation, characterised the attempted Greenlee patronage grab as a "two-quart headache" for Senator Minton.

EDITORS AREN'T STOOGES

In his Jackson Day speech, President Roosevelt quoted an unnamed editor—"one of the ablest editors of today"—as follows:

"I am really in complete sympathy with your program but cannot say so publicly because, Mr. President, the readers and advertisers of my paper are 90 per cent Republicans and I simply cannot afford to change its unalterable policy of traditional opposition to everything that comes from Democratic sources. Of course, you will understand."

Maybe the President does understand. But the rank and file of working newspapermen will not comprehend the veiled slur. In fact, they will be disposed to wonder who this "ablest editor" is and how he holds his job.

Newspaper editorials represent the opinions of the newspaper in which they appear. They are not a matter of majority vote. They are not subject to the control of either the readers or the advertisers, no self-respecting editor of genuine knowledge and conviction would favor placing them under such control.

If the President's conception of reader influence were to prevail, then all newspapers, except those of Maine and Vermont, would be supporters of the New Deal—at least they would have been immediately following the 1936 election.

However, an editorial page which thus kowtowed to majority sentiment would have so little intellectual character that it would speedily lose the respect of thinking men and women.

The sum and substance of it is that a newspaper's opinions must be honest opinions, voiced without regard to the winds of politics or the ring of the cash register. And the really able editors of the nation are upholding day after day and edition after edition that very type of journalistic independence.

Several ships for American firms were made in Denmark this year.

CLEAN SEED ESSENTIAL

"Clean seed is essential to good corps" says County Agricultural Agent C. E. Baker, who warns DeKalb County farmers against the purchase of seed containing large quantities of weed seeds and seed with a low germinating capacity, just because the original purchase price per bushel is low.

It is not the original price paid per bushel for farm seeds that counts bnt the price of pure, live seed, explains Oliver C. Lee, Purdue University specialist. For instance, if a farmer pays $8.00 for a bushel of clover, half of which is dead seed and weed seeds, he is actually paying $16.00 per bushel for the clover seed that will sprout and make clover plants. Furthermore the impurities will put the crop to a disadvantage by introducing many weeds to compete with it and foul the land for years to come.

When purchasing seed, insist on the presence of the seed law tag, urges Lee. Then study the tag. See that the germination is high, look a the per cent of purity and then turn the tag over and find out how many noxious weed seeds per pound are in the seed you are about to buy, since this must be stated on the back of the label.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

Profits in dairying during 1940 will depend upon economical milk production and upon the trend of the general price level, according to Purdue Extension men who appeared on the Dairy Management and Marketing program held Tuesday, January 30th at Auburn.

According to C. E. Baker, County Agent, 90 farmers attended the meeting where they took part in discussing dairy management and marketing problems.

Mr. E. A. Gannon, Extension Dairyman from Purdue, emphasized the need of a definite dairy feed program which will provide the much-needed milk producing feeds on farms where dairy cows are kept to produce a substantial income.

County Agent C. E. Baker said that the dairy program included a home grown feed program to provide the requirements of good producing cows during the Winter feeding season; a balanced green pasture program which will provide 180 to 200 days of pasture during the Summer months; a definite breeding plan including records, private, Dairy Herd Improvement Association or Official, in order to develop and to determine the outstanding brood cows, families and plans for future development in improving the type and production of dairy herds in the county. In addition, Mr. Gannon emphasized careful selection of herd sires, raising young stock, controlling disease and methods for the improvement of quality dairy products. The increased consumption of dairy products on farms was also discussed at the meeting.

E. H. Matzen, Extension Marketing Specialist from Purdue, discussed factors affecting dairy prices, and the proportion of the consumer's dollar returned to producers. He pointed out that over a long period of time the most important factor in the price of dairy products in the trend of basic commodity prices which are influenced by business conditions and factory payrolls. Farm prices of milk and butterfat have fluctuated around the basic commodity price level. Minor fluctuations in prices are due to changes in supply and seasonality of production. Producers are receiving between 45 and 50 per cent of the consumer's dollar spent for dairy products. With rising prices, farmers generally receive a larger proportion of the consumer's dollar, and when prices fall, they receive a smaller proportion.

With abundant feed supplies and an increasing consumer demand for dairy products, the first half of 1940 promises to be favorable for dairying.

Some people have the mistaken idea that most of our automobile accidents occur on bad roads under bad conditions and on curves and hills. It is true that some of our most serious accidents occur at these spots and under such conditions, but here are some facts that have been developed by the National Safety Council on a nationwide basis:

Four out of five accidents occur on a straight stretch of road.

Four out of five accidents occur on dry roads in clear weather.

Some of the causes for these accidents are:

1. Exceeding the speed limit or driving too fast for existing conditions.
2. Driving on wrong side of the road.
3. Disregarding stop sign or signal.
4. Cutting in.
5. Passing on curves or hills.

Check these five causes. How often have you been guilty of these violations?

In South Africa he's called the "aardvark," to scholars he's the "marmot" or "woodchuck," but to millions of Americans he's just a plain groundhog, emerging from his hole on February 2 in search of a shadow. For years popular tradition has held that the groundhog, upon seeing his shadow, will scurry back to cover for another six weeks, during which the weather will turn cold and gloomy again. But if February 2 is a cloudy day, there'll be an early spring.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM OUR FLORIDA VACATIONERS

Port Richey, Fla.
February 6, 1940.

To my friends in Indiana:

Noting that my last letter was copied by other papers I concluded that it must have been interesting enough for your readers to read I am moved to write a second one.

The weather here now is delightful. Just like a warm June day in Indiana. The palm trees seem to have weathered the wintry blasts and lend a fine hue to the landscape, other shrubbery is brown and sere and most of it has been cut back to the ground. The reason for this is that the branches were killed as well as the leaves.

Some citrus groves in protected spots are only partly injured so there is some fruit left, though none can be shipped out of the state until February 9. The Citrus Commission is inspecting every grove and certifying only that fit for shipment.

Looking from the window now I can see the mouth of "Cotee" river where it empties into the Gulf of Mexico. The tide has now gone out leaving small islands here and there and these are literally covered with Pelicans, a very strange and awkward looking bird, which can swallow a fish weighing a pound or more. They lumber along about 10 feet above the water, then suddenly on sighting a fish drop head first into the water and catch the fish.

We attended Gasparilla Day at Tampa Fair yesterday. This day is a portrayal of the entrance of Joseph Gasparella an early pirate who visited Tampa Bay in an early day. Some of it is based upon fact and some fiction. The Pirate ship entered the harbor just as it did in that early day. You should have seen the costumes and make up of the Pirates. It was enough to make one shiver to see them. The merchants and other organizations enter floats in the parade to the Fair Grounds. These floats are the most gorgeous looking that I have ever seen. The parade was made up of 55 floats, 28 High School bands and 11 floats carrying the Pirates. It took 1½ hours to pass a given point. The crowd was estimated at 250,000 people. We are leaving here Monday for Homestead, Florida, it is located in the extreme southern end of the state. We will stay here a week or so then turn our footsteps homeward and arrive in best place in the world INDIANA about March 1.

With best wishes to you all,
Clyde Hart.

Frequent complaints have been made by various police departments because of improper lighting on automobiles. I want to discuss especially the matter of tail lights.

Have you ever had the experience of driving on a highway on a foggy, rainy night and suddenly realizing that there was a car parked a few feet ahead which you had not noticed because it had no reflectors or tail light burning? If you did, you will know how dangerous this condition can be.

The purpose of a tail light is to warn other drivers behind you, and therefore it is necessary that this equipment be in first class condition. The law requires it. Police should enforce it.

Every mechanical part of an automobile should be in excellent condition to insure perfect performance. When the car is mechanically perfect, the driver's attitude is right, and he exercises good judgment and proper courtesy, automobile driving will become much safer.

It's Smart to Drive Carefully!

STATE BANK ROBBERY SOLVED BY WINCHESTER HOLD-UP

Confession that he held up the Auburn State Bank last August 1 when $5,723 was taken was provided Friday evening from Kenneth Morris, 30, East Palestine, Ohio, who is held at Winchester, Indiana, in the bank robbery there Thursday.

Morris was arrested Thursday after a holdup of the People's Loan and Trusty company at Winchester. Sheriff Lester W. Mann, of Randolph County said he admitted that crime.

Donald F. Stiver, State Police Superintendent, said that Morris will be turned over to federal authorities immediately for prosecution on both charges, since the fact that both banks were protected by the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation makes the robberies federal offense.

Cashier John Haggerty, of the Auburn State Bank, made the trip to Winchester, together with Sheriff Artus Coyle, where Mr. Haggerty identified Morris at once as the man who perpetrated the armed robbery solo fashion on that sweltering August day in Auburn.

Morris told authorities that on the day of the bank robbery in Auburn he had his car parked about two blocks west of the bank, and he just drove east out of town and went back to his home at East Palestine, Ohio. Asked what he did with the $5,723 he obtained he said that he "just spent it."

Sheriff Mann has two $2 bills and twenty-one mutilated $1 bills which the young man took from the Auburn bank.

Sheriff Coyle had missed the Winchester robbery only a few minutes, Thursday, when he was on his way to Richmond with a mental patient, and for fear of disturbing the patient, he did not use his radio. On his return he stopped and conversed with the robber and he became positive that Morris was the man who had robbed the Auburn bank.

The method used by the robber in the Winchester hold-up was practically identical to that used at Auburn.

Penalty of ten years was meted out to Morris, when he was taken before Judge John Macy in the Randolph County court Thursday, when he pleaded guilty. All the money from the Winchester robbery was recovered but the Auburn cash was spent at the Florida race tracks.

LINCOLN DAY DINNER BRINGS LARGE CROWD

Eleven candidates for county political offices, only one of whom had made a public statement previously, were revealed Monday night at the Lincoln Day dinner meeting of DeKalb county Republicans. Nearly 400 local Republicans met at the K. of P. hall for dinner, while a capacity crowd of 500 attended the program held afterwards in the assembly room of the DeKalb county court house, with Raymond E. Willis, of Angola, as the principal speaker.

Of great interest to DeKalb county residents was the announcement that Rep. Harry Shull of the Morningstar road, active in party politics for many years, will be a candidate for joint senator of Steuben, LaGrange, and DeKalb counties.

Three young men signified their intention of seeking the nomination for the office of clerk of the circuit court. Eugene Browand, of Auburn, and Oliver Opdycke, of Garrett, president of the Young Republicans of DeKalb county, were two of the three, while Robert Weaver, of Auburn, previously had made public his intention of being a candidate.

Dr. R. A. Nason, Garrett physician, states that he will seek the office of county coroner.

Office-holders who will run again are George Mountz, of Garrett, prosecutor; Sheriff Artus Coyle, of Auburn; Surveyor Wayne T. VanAuken; Coroner John R. Clark, of Auburn; Treasurer Harvey Phelps, of Butler, and Commissioner Lloyd W. Yeiser, of the south district.

Raymond E. Willis, Angola editor who was defeated by only a few thousand votes in his race with Senator Frederick VanNuys for the post of U. S. Senator and who will be a candidate again this election, was the speaker of the evening.

Big Ovation for Gillie

Howard Mountz, Garrett attorney, presided over the speaking program and introduced Mr. Willis, Judge Clyde C. Carlin of the Steuben circuit court, and Cong. George W. Gillie, of Fort Wayne, who arrived at the Auburn meeting after attending a Lincoln Day banquet at Avilla. The fourth district representative received a big ovation when he entered the stage.

The congressman discussed his work in Washington as representative and as a member of the agricultural committee. He expressed his hope that the United States would not become entangeld in affairs across the sea.

Religion is the one big factor which has made America great, Cong. Gillie believes. He paid tribute to the noble pioneers who sought religious freedom in the wilds of America and said prayer helped Abraham Lincoln in his times of stress.

WRITER PREDICTS 1940 VICTORY FOR GOP IN INDIANA

A revealing and interesting analysis of 1940 political prospects in Indiana is made by Charles Baird, St. Joe News Washington columnist, in this week's "Gilt Off the Dome."

Taking as a basis the trends indicated in the 1938 Indiana election, Baird observes that the outlook for a Hoosier Republican victory this year is expectionally bright.

Baird's analysis is unusually significant in view of the fact that Indiana will play a vital role in determining the outcome of the 1940 Presidential race. Leaders of both parties are watching developments closely in the Hoosier state and predicting that "as Indiana goes—so goes the Nation."

For a timely review of the Hoosier political outlook, as campaigns are launched and political pots begin to boil, turn to another page and read Baird's column from Washington.

DEKALB COUNTY RED CROSS TO KNIT SWEATERS FOR FINNS

Mrs. Thomson will organize the roll call chairmen in the cities and towns of the county. Anyone interested in volunteering to help with the work is asked to get in touch with the local chairmen, located as follows:

EXPRESSES THANKS

A letter from Rev. Milton Fronsoe and family, of Waldron, Michigan, states that they appreciate the thoughtfulness of their Indiana friends, in that they sent so many fine gifts, because of their recent fire having destroyed most of their goods. The Newville Aid did much to replenish the loss of comforts, and have the thanks of the Fronsoe family.

ANOTHER CONFESSES PART IN BOMBING OF ELECTRIC LINE

South Bend police said Tuesday that Earl Freeman, 40, of near South Bend, had confessed to complicity in a series of bombings of power line towers and poles in Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan last year and said that his statement implicated John A. Marks, 36, of Michigan City.

Marks, a business agent for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, was linked earlier in the blasts by a statement of Parrish E. Freeman, 30, of Michigan City, a cousin of Earl Freeman.

Parrish Freeman and Frank Lung, 25, of South Bend, have pleaded guilty to St. Joseph county charges in connection with the case while Freeman also has admitted his guilt to federal anti-racketeering charges filed by U. S. District Attorney James Fleming.

Also held in connection with the case is Frank Yax, 25, of Kalamazoo, Michigan.

The Twenty-Second of February

PALE is the February sky,
  And brief the midday's sunny hours;
The windswept forest seems to sigh
  For the sweet time of leaves and flowers.

Yet has no month a prouder day,
  Not even when the summer broods
O'er meadows in their fresh array,
  Or autumn tints the glowing woods.

For this chill season now again
  Brings, in its annual round, the morn
When, greatest of the sons of men,
  Our glorious Washington was born.

Lo, where beneath an icy shield,
  Calmly the mighty Hudson flows!
By snowclad fell and frozen field,
  Broadening, the lordly river goes.

The wildest storm that sweeps through space
  And rends the oak with sudden force,
Can raise no ripple on his face,
  Or slacken his majestic course.

Thus, 'mid the wreck of thrones shall live
  Unmarred, undimmed, our hero's fame,
And years succeeding years shall give
  Increase of honors to his name.

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

Receipts were 102 head below our record sale of last week owing to the icy roads. The advertised truck load of horses all sold at prices satisfactory to the consignor. Hogs reflected the general downward trend of the markets in terminal cities but prices were strong to higher than competitive markets in this section. Weights 170 to 225, $5.20 to $5.35. Heavy hogs sold slightly higher than the market justified owing to the presence of several small killers on the market. 240 to 300 pounders at $5.00 to $5.10. Fat sows, $3.80 to $4.20. Boars, $1.20 to $2.15.

The veal department put on the show of the auction with Floyd Landel, of Waldron, Mich., Marsh, of Toledo, and Borrman, of Gary, staging a battle of bids in an effort to get enough veals to fill their orders. A top of $12.50 was paid freely, which was $1.50 above the highest competitive market. Second grade veals sold from $11.50 to $12.00. Breeding ewes $8.75 to $9.00 per head.

Butcher steers went to local butchers at $7.00 to $7.50. Heifers, $6.00 to $7.20. Most of the fat cows went to Chicago at from $5.00 to $5.50. Cutters at $3.50 to $4.00 These sales were very near last week's prices. Bulls $6.00 to $7.20. Milk cows $42.50 to $60.00.

Denmark is increasing its shipments of products to the United States.

SERIOUSLY SPEAKING

An inventive mind has produced a doughnut with a handle and this should be a boon to anyone who takes his dunking seriously. The shape of the doughnut is triangular and a twist is given the upper corner to form the handle part. This unique turn affords the dunker comfort without soiling his fingers or burning them. They tell us of a millionaire a generation ago who asked his butler to leave the dining room so he wouldn't see his employer dip his bread in the gravy. The bakers of the nation plead for those vitamins in the juices that remain on the plate. Sopping is the way to get them up! Families may not condone this sopping and dunking act but few are the households in St. Joe that doesn't have one at the dining table.

IT IS INEVITABLE

We have noticed during former administrations, the difference in appearance of a newly-elected president and the same man after he serves the people for a number of years. The outward appearance is saddening as the fatigue, worry and weight of state affairs alters the strong. This responsibility of being president of so great a nation is a task that would try the strength and patience of every man in St. Joe. If the president goes through especially trying times he sits for a far different photo as his term comes to a close. A man who accepts his burden with its full import will reflect the force of his position in his photographs.

TRUTH

As great a statesman as was George Washington, the tale of the famous cherry tree seems to be the foremost reminder of his existence. This incident serves, in many a classroom, as a moral lesson for youth, impressing upon them the value of truth. So does outstanding statesmanship, stewardship and keen legislation give way to a cherry tree, an axe and a child whose truthfulness made a moment in history.

Should we deal with the subject of truth as if it was a rare qualification in the make-up of a man? The sense of truthfulness is dominate in the character of the average man in St. Joe. A sense of fairess leads one in this path. Square shooting you may call it, fair business practice industry may label it, fidelity says the moralist, honesty quotes the proverb, conscience lectures the pulpit, but however you name it, the foundation is TRUTH.

There is always a discussion of just how far one can carry truth and lose friends and injure people! There is a stage when the art of diplomacy enters the picture. To be entirely candid means a troubled house and the argument for a little white lie is used as a stop-gap for hurts and disfavor. There is a way of managing to speak truthfully with consideration for another's feelings. There is a certainty that George Washington could not have cut the figure he did in politics without the clever manipulation of diplomacy and the ability to handle a situation strategically. We are of the opinion that it was also necessary for the statesman Washington to use his axe at various times during his administration!

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

Every morning brings to the women who look after the diet of the family a challenging problem, Mary Lenore Moore, Home Demonstration Agent, points out. The problem is to serve a breakfast that is both adequate and tempting, and to see that the family takes time to eat it.

An adequate breakfast is one that satisfies the appetite at the time it is eaten and "stays by" the eater until lunch time. For an adult who is up early and has a light lunch, breakfast should furnish from one-fourth to one-third of the day's food needs. For children, it usually is best to divide the food requirements of the day fairly evenly among three meals.

The mainstay of most breakfasts is a cereal dish. Because these satisfy the appetite and supply energy at a low cost, dietitians advise the family meal-planner with a limited food budget to serve at least one cereal dish a day, in addition to bread at every meal. If there is only enough money to buy the minimum of fruits and vegetables, at least half of the cereals should be the whole grain kind rather than refined, because whole grain cereals furnish some vitamins and minerals. For children, they advise a morning cereal of the cooked variety, preferably one that contains the germ part and some of the branny layers of the grain.

Aside from these exceptions, there need be no limitations on the kind of breakfast cereal. The wise cook striving for variety can find hundreds of different ways to present bland cereal products.

The chief difficulty in making porridge with the granular cereals is that they are likely to lump. One way to prevent this is to add the water cold to the cereal and mix the two thoroughly before heating. A quicker way is to add the cereal slowly to the boiling water stirring until all is blended in.

When cereal is cooked ahead of time and reheated to serve, refrain from stirring it until it is well-heated. Otherwise lumps of cooked cereal are likely to form. Pouring two or three teaspoons of water over cooked cereal left to stand will prevent a hard crust from forming on top.

Streamlined modern breakfast foods are ready-cooked cereals, served plain or with fruit.

With all these possibilities, the breakfast cereal should never need be the same two days in a row—unless the family puts in a special request for a repeat performance.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

With three voices raised in disapproval, the Senate made plain the fact that Russia's move on Finland is a step which is distinctly unpopular in this country. The Senate action is in the nature of a confirmation of the mild but significant statement of Secretary of State Hull, to the effect that his deparment had reason to believe that the Soviet authorities had not in all instances kept their end up with respect to agreements entered into six years ago. The substance of the Senate action was to urge the Securities and Exchange Commission to give early attention to the floating of a Finnish bond issue in the sum of twenty million dollars, the brake being applied to the extent that implements for actual fighting were not to be furnished.

While the Senate was taking its round-about slap at Russia, the House by the narrow margin of three, set down its foot on a more direct affront. A bill to cut off salary for the Ambassador to the Union of Soviet Republics, and thus in effect suspend diplomatic relations, failed of approval by the small majority stated. According to report, it is not considered best for the American embassy to invite such Russian guests as it pleases. The number of persons to be entertained is specified, and the Soviet government makes out the list, which may be alright for diplomatic reasons, but hardly pleasing to the host.

Considering that a sub-zero climate makes life intolerable, a wrong impression would be created by the remark that the Finns are making it hot for the Russians, but if the papers are correct, everyone knows in a general way what is going on. The common impression that Finland cannot survive beyond the Spring of the year, may be entirely wrong. The indications are that Finland may accumulate allies which will prove an asset that Russia will have reason to fear. The advantage of having good friends is demonstrated by the results of the Colonial-French coalition in the Revolutionary War. Cuba too can bear witness to the truth that small nations are not always left alone, to be trodden under foot.

Without giving its approval to the use of such phrases as "reckless spending" or "wasteful extravagance," the view is spreading in Congress that here and there it is well to pause and consider when money matters are involved. The so-called "bedrock" estimates of the White House are not always accepted as such. There has gone forward for Executive signature, a bill in which appropriations for national defense is a popular cause, and dollars below the budget figure. Nationa ldefense is a popular cause, and the trimming of its wings is significant of a growing non-partisan trend toward economy.

By the second of April, approximately two-fifths of the year 1940 will have slipped away. The backbone of the Winter will have been broken, even on the slopes of the Rockies. Garden seed catalouges will be receiving intensive study. Such matters, however, are mere incidents of any second of April. This year the politically minded have a special reason for putting a ring around the date on the calendar. On the second, Wisconsin holds its primary election, and there the first showdown will occur as to the respective popularities of Messrs. Roosevelt and Garner, both of whose names will appear on the ballots, unless one or both withdraw in the meantime, a contingency, which may happen as to the President. It is not likely to happen in the instance of Mr. Garner.

Mr. Roosevelt, somewhat nettled by prognostications as to what he is going to do, has given the world to understand that when he is ready to talk, he will be heard from. Probably the Wisconsin primaries will not be effective to "smoke him out." Republicans eyes too will be turned toward the Badger State on April 2, since then and there will occur the initial sifting of the party's favorite son, including Messrs. Vandenberg, Taft and Dewey. The results will be studied most carefully insofar as they touch the New Yorker, since there is no present index to his popularity.

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Republican strategists are counting heavily on Indiana's 14 electoral votes in the Presidential election next Fall. They're also predicting that Hoosier voters will elect Republicans to the State House and the U. S. Senate, and assist the GOP in regaining control of the House of Representatives.

In the first lean years of the New Deal, Republican strength in Indiana receded steadily until 1938, when Hoosiers revolted against the New Deal, defeated six Democratic Congressmen, elected a Secretary of State and a majority of the state representatives on the Republican ticket, and restored scores of Court Houses and City Halls to GOP control.

Although a Democratic (not a New Deal) Senator was presumably reelected, Raymond E. Willis, the Republican candidate, received 49.8 per cent of the vote, and several other contests were so close that the results were not known until one "long count" in Vigo County was completed.

ARE THE Republicans justified in predicting that Indiana will be in the GOP column this year? On what do they base their optimism? Let's take a statistical look at the situation.

The truly remarkable nature of the 1938 Republican gains becomes most apparent on analysis of the election by counties. If it is true that party strength can best be guaged by the number of Court House controlled, the outlook in Indiana is indeed bright for the Republicans.

On the basis of the statewide Congressional vote in the Roosevelt landslide of 1936, Republican candidates carried only 27 of Indiana's 92 counties—or approximately 30 per cent.

In 1938, however, Republican candidates had majorities in 59 counties—a gain of 32—giving the GOP control of 64 per cent of the counties in the State.

The same spectacular gains are revealed by an analysis of the mayoralty vote in various Hoosier cities.

TURNING to Congressional prospects, the question may also be asked: Are Republican leaders justified in predicting that the number of GOP Congressmen in Indiana will be increased in the coming election?

The answer is that if the 1938 trend continues, the Republicans have an excellent chance of defeating four of the five incumbent Democratic Congressmen next November. To accomplish this they would have to register gains of only 2 to 5 per cent in the Democratic districts.

This is not too much to expect when it is remembered that in 1938, GOP candidates for Congress in Indiana polled an average of 7.5 per cent more votes than in 1936, and ousted six Democratic representatives.

Districts which the Republicans are eying optimistically are the Eleventh (Larrabee,) in which they polled 48.4 per cent of the vote in 1938; the Ninth (Crowe,) where they received 47.8 per cent; the Twelfth (Ludlow,) 46.2 per cent, and the First, (Schulte,) 45 per cent. Safest Democratic District is the Eighth (Boehne,) where the GOP candidate polled only 43.5 per cent of the vote.

WE'VE PREPARED a table showing the comparative Republican strength by Indiana districts in 1936 and 1938. The first column gives the per cent of the votes cast for GOP candidates in 1936, the second the per cent cast in 1938:

Republican Strength

District	1936	1938
First	33.4	45
Second	51.7	57.8
Third	42.3	51
Fourth	45	58.1
Fifth	47.2	54.6
Sixth	45.1	50.7
Seventh	46	51.1
Eighth	36.1	43.5
Ninth	45.7	47.8
Tenth	47.4	53.4
Eleventh	39.9	48.4
Twelfth	39.4	46.2
Average	43.2	50.7

ANALYSIS of this table reveals that the largest Republican gain (13.1 per cent) was registered in the Fourth District, represented by George W. Gillie. Other districts followed in this order: First (11.6 per cent,) Third, (8.7,) Eleventh, (8.5,) Fifth, (7.4,) Eighth, (7.4,) Twelfth, (6.8,) Second, (6.1,) Tenth, (6.0,) Sixth, (5.6,) Seventh, (5.1,) and Ninth, (2.1.)

The Fourth District also is shown to be the strongest Republican District in the State, while Charlie Halleck's Second District a close runner-up. Next in order are the Fifth, (Harness,) Tenth (Springer,) Seventh (Landis,) Third, (Grant,) and Sixth, (Johnson.)

It is interesting to observe that four of the five Democratic Districts are large-city Districts. These are the Eleventh and Twelfth (Indianapolis,) the Eighth (Evansville,) and the First (Gary.) It is also interesting to note that the largest Republican gains in 1938 were made in these districts and the Fourth (Fort Wayne) and Third (South Bend.)

with an ELECTRIC BROODER

THE "ELECtrical Mother" is perhaps not romantic, but when it comes to efficiency, the ELECtric Brooder has many advantages over other brooding methods, including the hen . . . Among them are lower chick mortality and faster development because the even, clean electrical heat prevents illness . . . Extra convenience because the electrical brooder is completely automatic . . . Lower brooding cost per chick raised, due to the low operating cost of the brooder . . . Low first cost of brooder and its long life . . .

We are at your service on your brooding problems. ELECtricity will solve them . . .

HORSE SENSE

"Winter pause" in the laying flock is an inherited factor. Don't expect miracles from special feeds recommended to prevent Winter slump.

When wrapping packages, wet the cord before tying. The cord shrinks as it dries and keeps the package tied tightly.

Have you a stock of home grown, air seasoned lumber for building repair? Keep your buildings up in repair and your costs down with lumber from the home woods, say Purdue University foresters.

Plowing under sod, green manuring crops, crop residues, and barnyard manure, helps to maintain organic matter in the soil.

Simple arithmetic: 60 drops of water a minute from a faucet will cause a loss of approximately 113 gallons of water a month. The mere replacement of the worn washer in the faucet will stop this loss.

In hybrid seed corn, one of the first and most important considerations is that it must be of proper maturity to fit the growing season where planted.

Seed which is cheap in price is usually inferior because there is something that prevents its being sold at the normal price of good seed.

You can't expect economical production from your dairy cows unless you feed adequate amounts of good legume roughage and a balanced grain mixture.

Water saturated fields lost soil at a rate of 70 times as great as fields with only ten per cent of moisture in certain experiments. Underdrain your land and save your soil.

Sows that get little exercise during gestation are likely to have trouble at farrowing time. A slop of one-half bran and one-half ground oats, makes a laxative feed and a filling ration just before and after the pigs are born.

This is the month for getting many of your odd jobs done, before the busy season begins.

It is much less costly to vaccinate hogs before cholera starts than it is after an outbreak begins.

Muskrat trapping at Shakamak state park to protect the dams forming Lake Shakamak and Lake Jason resulted in the removal of nearly one hundred of these animals. By burrowing into the earth dams, the muskrats weaken them and if the burrowing is not stopped, seepage of the water will result in destruction of both the dam and the lake. Hides of the muskrats trapped in the park were sold and the receipts placed in the state park maintenance funds.

Whatever the political fortune in store for Thomas E. Dewey, the New York District Attorney who has flung his hat into the ring as a Presidential candidate, he has contributed a sound slogan for Americans of all parties in asserting that we should launch the fourth decade of this century in the determination that it will be known as the "fortunate forties." And his views on how the 1940's should be made fortunate unquestionably coincide with those of most responsible citizens.

BLANKS ARRIVE FOR NEW MARRIAGE ACT

Details of the requirements of the marriage law that goes into effect in Indiana March 1 are set out in syphilis test blanks that have been received by County Clerk Carl Walter.

The new statute provides for three checks to be made on the serial number of the marriage license applicant and two on his signature in order to prevent the practice of fraud. Violation of the law will be followed by prosecution by the federal government and sentences to United States prisons.

Anyone who fraudulently submits to a syphilis examination for another person must sign his name on the various forms, resulting in the use of the mails to defraud, as the applications must be sent by mail in compliance with the statute.

Only a limited number of the blanks will be kept at the clerk's office, as an applicant may get a blank when he applies to a physician for examination, the physician receiving blanks and containers for blood specimens from the board of health. The marriage license must be obtained within thirty days after the test is certified.

A record of the test will be sent to Indianapolis for the permanent confidential files of the state board of health. The certifications to the county clerk will be on file in the clerk's office, but will not be available to the public.

The blanks in the clerk's office are intended for use in complying with mail requests from applicants.

FORMER ST. JOE WOMAN DEFRAUDED LAST WEEK

A confidence man, who professed interest in a real estate deal, left Fort Wayne last week with $175 belonging to Mrs. Anna Baker, operator of a rooming house at 344 West Berry St.

The man, who gave his name as Sanford, told Mrs. Baker he was interested in establishing a business in Fort Wayne after renting a room. Mrs. Baker spoke to him of a property she wished to buy and Sanford offered to invest with her $1,000 he was to receive from an estate. She gave Sanford $75 on February 2 and $100 more on February 8 as a down payment on the property. The real estate firm never was visited by Sanford.

Then Sanford disappeared, officials reported, taking part of his clothing from the rooming house. He is described as 64, six feet, two inches, 310 pounds, bald, wide face, with two dents in the forehead. He bore a scar on the right side of the nose and spoke with a southern accent, officials were told.

Frank Akins, Chairman.

CLUB LADIES ENTERTAIN THEIR VALENTINES

Wednesday night, February 14th will be an event long remembered by the Culture Club. Promptly at 6:30 o'clock, they with their husbands and guests assembled at the Akins Tea Room, where a sumptuous three course banquet was served. The table appointments were in keeping with St. Valentine's Day with a pretty valentiue at each plate along with the pretty heart shaped place cards.

Between courses they all joined in singing rounds of songs. After the banquet they all went to the High School Gym where the following program was presented by the committee:

Piano solo, Earl William Kinsey.
Welcome by the president, Mrs. Dema Curie.
Response, Harry Hursh.
Reading, An Old Sweet (Heart) of Mine, Mrs. Lena Meek.

The committee presented Miss Plunket's Giddy Girls School, with a special Friday afternoon program thrown in, including some well known rhymes of long ago.

The grand march which followed placed them in line for the games. One particular feature the men's quartette deserves mention, who were Earl William Kinsey, Dennis Gerig, Harry Hursh and Arthur Lyon. All the gentlemen gathered around the piano and sang the goodnight song. The committee in charge was: Mrs. Sallie Gerig, Mrs. Anna Bachtel, Mrs. Lucile Lyon, Mrs. Pluma Hamilton, Mrs. Dessie Hurni, Mrs. Ethel Wineland, Mrs. Dema Curie, and Mrs. Helen Schondelmayer.

The Culture Club gathered at the home of Mrs. Pluma Hamilton Monday night for a farewell party for their president, Mrs. Dema Curie, who with her family have moved to Lake George. The lunch served early in the evening was a carry-in of unusual good things.

After eating while seated at the tables the members sang songs and a special one to the tune of "Till We Meet Again." Games followed, among them was a Bingo with a white elephant exchange. Members all joined in wishing Mrs. Curie success with their new business.

AUBURN RESIDENT IS HURT IN ACCIDENT

Mrs. Dewey Graham, of Auburn, suffered a sprained pelvis and spine, shock, and contusions Sunday evening when returning from Fort Wayne in a car driven by her father, George Henderson, also of Auburn. The car skidded on the icy pavement on Road 427 just south of the DeKalb-Allen county line at about 7 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Beerbower and children, Richard and Sally and Mrs. Graham and daughter, Patty, were in the car at the time it skidded. None of the others were injured when thrown about the car. The auto hit an embankment one the left side of the road but little damage was done to the car. Mr. and Mrs. Hendereson and family are well known in this community and Spencerville.

P. T. A.

At our February meeting, Walter Whitehurst Post No. 283 of the American Legion presented its Americanism program. After the Colors were presented the Legion members proceeded with their regular formal opening ceremony. The Legion male chorus sang "The Vacant Chair" in memory of the departed comrades. Dean Bechtol, Past Grand Chef De Gare of the Legion Forty and Eight, was introduced by John Crothers, Commander of Post 283.

As a prelude to an instructive and inspiring talk on Americanism, Mr. Bechtol rehearsed the closing scenes of the World War: the stilling of the guns, the burying of the dead, and the return of the people to their shattered homes. Then came the Treaty of Versailles, a masterpiece of vented hatred of conquerors upon the conquered. He pointed out that the major error of the treaty was that their was no chair for the Prince of Peace who taught that we should "do unto others as we would that they should do unto us."

Mr. Bechtol said, "We do not owe our former Allies anything, nor do we have any grudge against our enemies of yesterday." Therefore our attitude toward Communism, and the Bund is not against the people of Russia and Germany, but rather that the things for which they stand are directly at cross purposes with the things for which we stand. We should legislate to prevent them from sowing seeds of hate and dissenison among us. Our government has lived and prospered for 164 years without foreign interference, and bids fair to continue if we keep these foreign "isms" from our shores. But we must not soft-heartedly find excuses for them and their actions.

As opposed to the atheism of Russia, and the religious persecution in Germany, we must continue our faith in God. "Let's pray to God that we may have no other "ism" but "Americanism."

The Girls High School Chorus sang, The Legion Chorus sang, "Grandfather's Clock," and the German Band from Spencerville High School played two selections.

After singing a stanza of America by the audience, the Colors were retired in form, and the meeting was adjourned.

BLOOMING CURIOSITY

Would you like to see a plant curiosity which has attracted the attention of Believe It Or Not Ripley in his famous wonder-pictures, and has from time to time been exhibited at garden shows with marked success in drawing crowds. Then see this curious plant in bloom at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buckingham. For the past three weeks we have kept close watch on this strange plant.

The bulb will produce a flower after five years, and you may say who wants to wait for five years for a flower. When this bulb was taken from the garden last Fall it weighed eight pounds, and that is no fairy tale either. After being allowed to rest for several weeks, the bulb was brought upstairs and placed in a container and there allowed to start on its way to blooming. All during these weeks the bulb produced sufficient food to send a stalk of about 4 feet and now a deep red flower has opened up.

Anyone that knows Mrs. Buckingham and her flowers, can realize what a period of temptation she has been going through with because this bulb required neither soil or water to produce the flower. Just to be let alone, and that was next to impossible.

Note the lily in the Buckingham window as you pass by, or go in and see it. Tell her The News man said you could.

FARM EQUIPMENT EDITION GOES TO 1,000 HOMES

The News will visit 1,000 homes in this vicinity this week, due to the observance, of Indiana newspapers, of what is called "Farm Equipment Week," starting on February 24 and continuing until March 2. It is the purpose to furnish our readers with clean, fresh new Spring advertising from the live merchants in the territory.

We are anxious that every reader will take time to read every ad found in these eight pages, because here you will find the latest news concerning that particular advertiser and his business.

The News feels grateful for the excellent response to our letter of information mailed out only a week ago and we know there are other merchants who would like to have been represented.

All the work has been done by the editor and wife, and we have tried to give our readers the news of the community in full this week.

This week we say "hello" to 1,000 homes and will speak a good word for the advertisers. The man who advertises deserves your patronage. Don't forget them.

Mrs. Clara McCann will be at the home of her son, Wilbur, and wife, at Waterloo, for several days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schaefer, son, Larry, of Hicksville, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baughman and daughters, Shirley and Bonnie, spent Sunday with the Will Schaefer family.

John Sebert has sold his farm of 78 acres, three miles west of St. Joe, to a Mr. Corbin who has been farming the John W. Henderson farm west of Spencerville. Mr. Sebert will have a sale on Friady, March 1.

"THE OLD SPENCERVILLE SCHOOL"

I am dreaming to-day, of the Spencerville school
As it was in seventy-four,
When we were young and happy,
With our life work all before.
Dave Allen was the teacher and he certainly was fine,
But it took all his ingenuity, to keep his class in line.

We loved, we quarreled, then loved again and sometimes even swore,
But when it came to the essential things of life,
We were loyal to the core.
There were so many of us when we met for morning prayers,
A goodly number had to sit upon the school house stairs.

There were Bishops and Murrays and Ericks,
There were Herricks and Emanuels all,
There were Tyndalls, Rummels and Zimmermans and also Dora Hall.
There were Scotts and Olds and Hendersons, Millie Sechler and Irena Partee, there were Blakes and Carnes and Kinseys,
And also Lizzie Gee.

The Shillings came over from Concord, Frank Scholes from Coburntown.
Frank Walter came from Springfield, and Will Shatto, from Hudson came down, the Walkers came from over the river,
The Beamses from the County Line, the Shutts and Murpheys and all
The rest were usually there on time.

There was Cook, to cook our breakfast, there were Bairs to hug us tight
There were Horns to call to dinner and a Silberg that would fight.
One morning, after a nasty quarrel, Steve hit me on the nose,
He scratched my face and blacked my eyes and badly mussed my clothes
The teacher kept us after school and urged a compromise,
So we shook hands and were friends again and told no more big lies.

Poor Steve is dead and cannot tell his side of the affair,
But I know it can all be verified by my old friend, L. L. Bair.
Lem Bair was my seat-mate and a loyal friend was he,
And we were always busy, as busy as could be.
We always had our lessons and one time we used a key,
Our classmates, looked in wonder but the trick, they did not see.

We courted the girls, together, as you may surmise,
But we always tried to get back home before the sun would rise.
We had no automobiles, we had no big air planes,
So we trusted to Old Dobbin to guide us through the lanes.
Old Dobbin, was so gentle, that when we needed one more hand
We wrapped the lines around the whip, we knew he'd understand.

We did not have a typewriter and we had no telephone,
But the sentiments, we expressed, with pen and ink, [say,
Were very sweet in tone and as I look around me I am constrained to
That the results were just as satisfactory, as they are to-day.

Oh, we had a wonderful school in 1874, when we were young and happy
And our life work all before [pain,
We remember those days with pleasure, we think of them also with
When we know they have passed forever and can never return again.

Many have passed over the River and some are far away,
But we are thankful for the very few who are meeting here to-day.
Oh, I long to return to the school on the hill and meet my old School mates once more and say "hello" and "how are you" as we did in '74
And drink my fill from the old school well and sing and play awhile.
But, alas, this I know can never be, so I sit and dream and smile.

JOHN GEISINGER IS DEAD AT AGE OF 93

John Geisinger, 93, of Garrett, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. J. Brown, Garrett, Thursday morning at 6 o'clock. Mr. Geisinger, one of DeKalb county's oldest residents, suffered a stroke of apoplexy four weeks ago, which caused him to weaken gradually.

The body was removed to the Gerig-Kaylor funeral home in Auburn Sunday, where the funeral services were conducted at 2 o'clock with the Rev. Joseph Ferguson officiating. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery, Auburn.

John Geisinger was born August 8, 1846, in a log cabin located in the northeast corner of Jackson township. His father was Samuel Geisinger, a native of Pennsylvania, who came to Indiana about 1815, when Indians were still very numerous and wild game abounded in this territory.

Last September he and his wife, Mrs. Sarah Lucinda Geisinger, who survives, observed their sixty-seventh wedding anniversary. They were married September 17, 1872, in Concord township, and went to housekeeping in a log cabin. Mr. Geisinger was a farmer until about 1895, when he and his wife went to Auburn to live. Twenty-five years ago they moved to Garrett to reside with the daughter.

Although in 1864 he cast his first presidential ballot for Abraham Lincoln, Mr. Geisinger voted the Democratic ticket afterward.

Until he suffered the stroke, Mr. Geisinger was remarkably agile for his years, walking uptown often in addition to working about the house. Although his hearing and sight had failed, he could hear well enough to carry on a conversation and could read with the aid of a reading glass.

Survivors besides the widow, who is past eighty-six years of age, the son and the daughter, are four grandchildren, Berwyn Brown of Kalamazoo, Michigan, Earl Geisinger of Idaho, Mrs. Helen Hanselman of Fort Wayne, and Dorothy Brown of Garrett, and one great grandchild, Josephine Geisinger, a daughter of Earl Geisinger.

One son, Alfred, died in the state of Washington in 1932. The aged man had three brothers and three sisters, all of whom passed away after living to a ripe old age.

Mr. Geisinger attended the Church of Christ.

THE LOW DOWN from HICKORY GROVE

A new feature writer joins The News Staff with a bit of weekly fun.

Yours with the low down,
JO SERRA.

A lot of people keep on saying the greatest problem of the hour is unemployment. But it was likewise 6 or 7 years ago—and every day since. And every day we get a new way to cure it. And we pour another one billion in the river.

We been acting like we expect to cure a hollow tooth and swollen jaw by rubbing something on the outside. It has been good for the Medicine Man, but not much relief for the patient.

To hire somebody to help you do something, you gotta have more to do than you can do yourself. It don't take any Economist to figure that out. And the only way you can have more to do than you can do yourself, is to have an idea that, by taking a reasonable chance, you can branch out and hire an extra man and thereby make yourself an extra 2 bits.

But if you are scared half stiff, like everybody is now, you will go into your hole like a woodchuck or ground hog on February second, and wait for the weather to clear up.

Sentiment in this country is largely in favor of Finland in her military dispute with gigantic Russia. But sentiment in favor of the proposed U. S. loan to the beleagnered little Northern nation is nowhere near so strong. A considerable segment of opinion, including that of public officials, publicists and others who are as eager as anyone to see Finland saved from being absorbed by the Communists, feels that financial aid to any warring country should be extended through private sources—such as Herbert Hoover's Finnish Relief Committee—and not by the government.

They don't feel that way for reasons of economy, but for reasons of policy. A loan to a warring nation, they argue, gives the U. S. a direct financial interest in the outcome of the war. And the next logical step beyond financial intervention, they continue, is military intervention. If we let our sentiments entice us into helping Finland or any other country, they warn, we are immensely increasing the chances of being drawn into wars which are none of our concern, and which we should stay out of.

On the other side of the fence, the advocates of government financial aid to Finland regard these arguments, to use Mr. Roosevelt's phrase, an "unadulterated twaddle." The President made a strong case for this position in his talk to the Youth Congress, in which he argued that the chance of Russia declaring war on us if we help Finland is too ridiculous to be worth considering. And the partisans of government help to the the Finns have some precedent on their side—mose than a year ago we loaned China $25,000,000 to help her in her undeclared war with Japan, and the Japanese didn't make an issue of it. Under the terms of another pending bill, which has been pretty much obscured in the press because of the concentration of interest on Europe, we would give the Chinese another sizable loan, through the Import-Export Bank.

At any rate, irrespective of what side of this controversy history finally proves right, there will be some hot debate when the Finnish loan proposal comes to the floor of Congress. The odds now favor its passing.

Two more events of considerable importance in the light they cast on our foreign policy, recently occurred. First of these was the President's appointment of Undersecretary of State Welles on a special mission to tour Europe's chancelleries and talk with the heads of governments about the chances for peace. This is not regarded as a prelude to a definite move for an early peace, but as groundwork for the future when the chance of effecting a peace seems brighter—it is extermely dark now, with British and French spokesmen saying they will not stop until Nazi Germany is destroyed. Mr. Welles will go to Rome, Berlin, London and Paris. It is significant that he goes first to Rome—it is felt certain that Mussolini must be an important and perhaps the most important factor in any peace negotiations. The appointment of Mr. Welles was generally well received—he is an able career diplomat of long experience, fitted to meet Europe's wily statesman on an even footing.

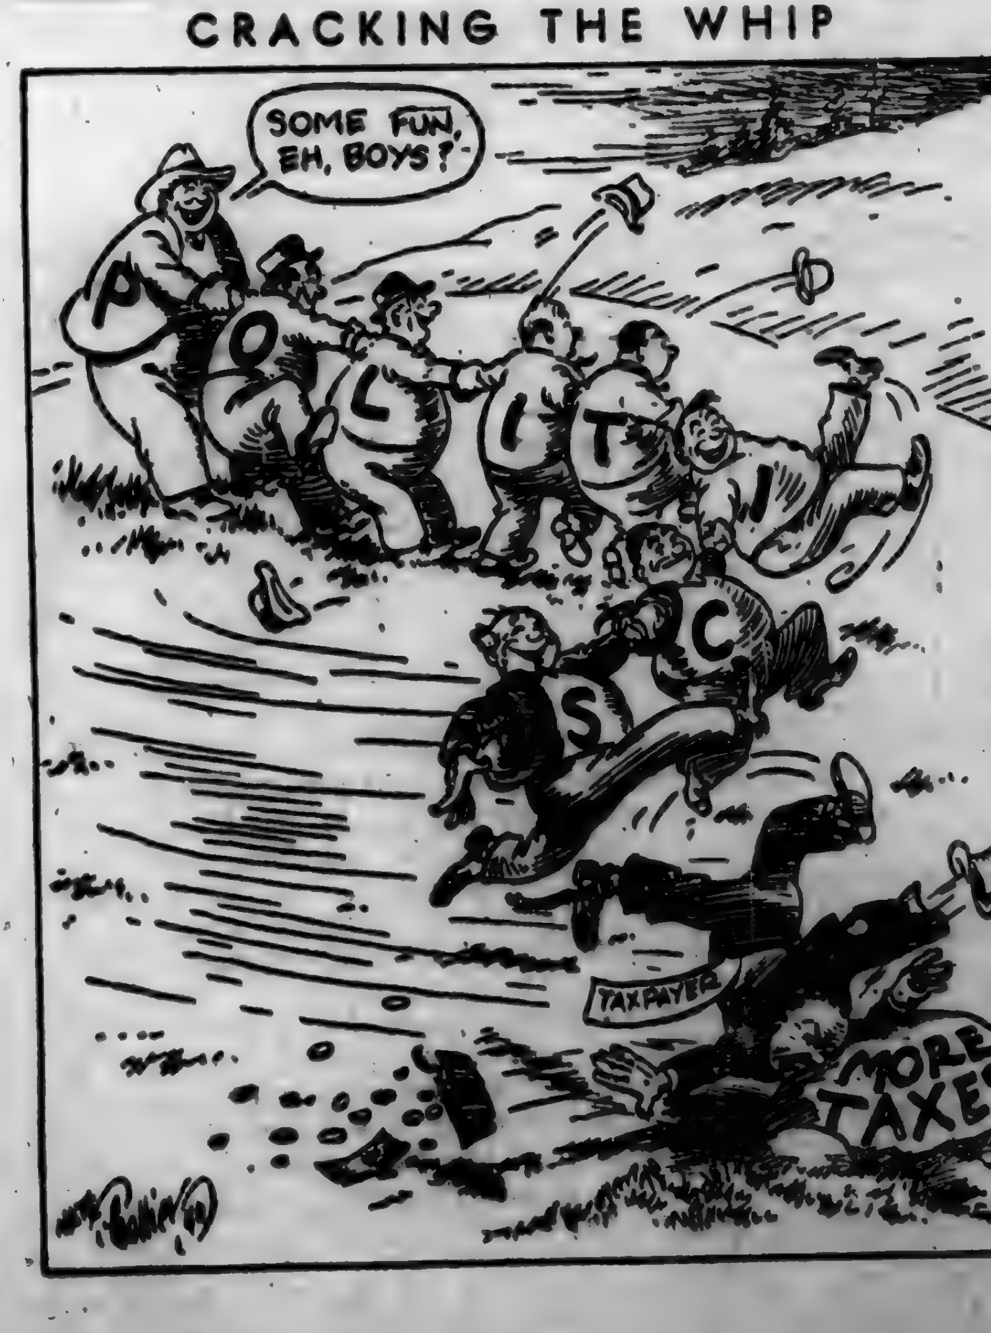
Second event was the President's denunciation of the Soviet Union in his Youth Congress talk. It was couched in terms which were startlingly wrong, coming from the head of a theoretically friendly nation. Mr. Roosevelt said Russia was an absolute dictatorship which had failed to live up to its early principles of liberating a people who have lived for centuries as serfs of the Czars. Times have certainly changed since Russia was regarded as a major ally of the democratic powers.

Big question now is just how much farther this country will go in mixing itself up in Europe's troubles. The Isolationists say we have gone too far already—the internationalists say we must go much farther. It does seem apparent that the Administration firmly believes that we must be in a position to exert a powerful guiding hand in determining the terms of the peace that some day will follow this war.

Nothing unexpected has taken place in business. The Spring decline is on, with steel leading the drop, but that is seasonally normal. The decline, think the experts, will continue about two more months, then be arrested.

Commodity prices have been comparatively weak, which is logical in view of the general business trend.

CRACKING THE WHIP



Considerable importance is placed on the automobile industry's activities. Normally, production increases in late Spring, to prepare for Summer buying, and this exerts a salutary influence on steel output. It will be a very bad sign if motors fail to respond as usual this year.

It is significant that most of the economists are being cautious about forecasts now—they are putting in plenty of "ifs," "ands," and "buts." Matters are too chaotic, here and abroad, to be dead certain about anything.

THE OVERPOWERING ISSUE

"Do our 130,000,000 people run their government, or does $9,000,000,000 a year run our people?" So Mr. Dewey summed up the campaign issue of 1940 in his Boston speech and we do not see how it could be stated more accurately. Here is the crux of the coming debate, and the country is lucky to have a spokesman to state the issue so clearly.

It is not difficult to understand the enthusiasm with which Boston welcomed the address. Mr. Dewey was at his clear, specific best. Having hung runaway spending and defeatism with respect to it around the neck of the New Deal, he translated New Deal squandering into terms of every citizen's pocket. The man who earns $20 a week in New York pays $4 a week to the tax collectors, local, state and Federal; the man who earns $40 a week, pays 19 cents out of every dollar to pay the cost of government. The total spending of all government in the United States is more than everybody earns in three months and one week out of each year and it won't be until Apri 18 that the people will have earned enough to cover all the costs of government, Mr. Dewey noted. And half of this amount will be spent by the Federal government alone.

To the "slick" device of challenging others to teach the New Deal how to balance the budget, Mr. Dewey gave the correct answer. How can any one even discuss budget figures with a President who always exceeds his own budget by two or three million dollars! And until the energies of free enterprise are released and "relief transformed into jobs," how can any budget be balanced? The New Deal has thrown up its hands. Bring in the "new broom " to clean up "the budgetary litter"!

Mr. Dewey had the courage to call his plan "the hard way." It is. But it is the only possible way to save the nation from bankruptcy, terrible beyond estimating in its effects upon the American people. Here is the one overpowering issue of the 1940 election. Beside it any conceivable aspect of foreign policy is immaterial and irrelevant. For whatever happens in the current war and afterward, if America is to be secure and powerful it must first of all become once more a going, self-sustaining concern. Mr. Dewey has found his target. May his aim continue as good as it was in Boston!

ELECTRICITY ON OUR INDIANA FARMS

We heard of a couple the other day who, after many years of happy life on their farm, are now beginning to enjoy the convenience of electric light.

The couple have been married for many years, with both of them past the four-score mark, but never before have they been able to press a button and have light. Now, in their declining years, they will enjoy the comforts that electricity can bring to the farm home.

This scene can be duplicated in hundreds of homes in DeKalb and Allen county, where the past few years has witnessed a great extension of electric service in the rural areas. In contrast with the news of wars and political campaigns this revolution in home-life hardly makes the news page but it is not to be overlooked.

Many of us now living can well recall the advent of electricity in our homes. The gradual and increasing use of electricity has been accompanied by greater enjoyment of life itself. The conveniences that are now offered those who have electricity available make a vast transformation in the work of thrifty housewives and undoubtedly add much to the comfort of our women.

We do not hesitate to urge all those who can possibly afford electricity to connect with any availabel line. Not only will there be more light, but there will be easier work, a more balanced life and improved living conditions.

SUGAR CAUSES TOOTH DECAY, DENTAL PROFESSOR ASSERTS

It's the sugar you eat that causes teeth to decay.

That's the conclusion reached after ten years of study by Dr. Leonard S. Fosdick of the Northwestern University Dental School.

Sugar taken into the mouth produces an acid which, with bacteria normally present, causes tooth decay, he reported to the midwinter meeting of the Chicago Dental Society.

"The only method known at the present time to control dental decay, which has good scientific evidence to support it, is to avoid the intake of sugar into the mouth," he said.

Some conclusions Dr. Fosdick drew from the research and which disprove many popular beliefs about tooth decay were:

1. There is no evidence to indicate that cleaning the teeth will stop or decrease decay.
2. There is no relation between soft and hard teeth and tooth decay.
3. Eating hard foods doesn't prevent decay.
4. Dietary changes have no direct influence on the enamel, where decay always begins.
5. Tooth decay is not a continuous process but an intermittent one.
6. Calcium and phosphorus are needed for tooth formation but don't decrease decay.
7. Increase in decay during pregnancy probably is due to carbohydrates and sugar, taken in greater quantities because of increased appetite. It is not due to calcium or phosphoorus deficiency.

AUBURN BANDIT TO FACE LONGER TERM

Kenneth Ray Morris, of Youngstown, Ohio, was indicted in federal court at Fort Wayne Thursday for the robbery of the Auburn State bank last August 1 and District Attorney James R. Fleming stated Friday that Morris will probably be taken soon before Judge Thomas Slick while the court is sitting at South Bend or Hammond.

If upon arraignment Morris enters a plea of guilty he is subject to a sentence to fedelar prison for a term of five to twenty-five years and a fine not exceeding $10,000. The court,, under the law, will fix a definite term.

Morris was sentenced in Randolph circuit court at Winchester, Indiana, to a term of ten years in the Indiana state penitentiary. Judge Slick will determine whether the two sentences are to run concurrently. The government evidently is determined that Morris serve a long term, as he is not sbject to probation with a federal sentence hanging over him.

No witnesses were summoned to testify before the federal grand jury against Morris. His signed confession was submitted and it was sufficient to warrant the return of an indictment, Mr. Fleming said.

HORSE SENSE

Organic matter in soil causes it to absorb more rainfall which reduces runoff and erosion.

If you have overflow river bottom lands, investigate the timber possibilities, and avoid gambling your corn crop against floods.

Special pipe ventilating systems have not proved any more satisfactory than good ventilating systems operated by the use of windows and curtained openings.

Seed is just one of the tools in the farm work shop. It pays to use good dependable tools. Likewise, it pays to use good live seed for maximum production.

Water that seeps from the hillside and keeps the lowlands wet and uncultivatable should be intercepted at the toe of the slope by tile laid parallel to and a little uphill from the toe.

Remember young pigs kept indoors longer than one to two weeks are likely to become anemic and thus less thrifty and profitable than healthy hogs.

Did you ever make a cash budget for your farm business for the coming few months or year? It is a sound policy. Try it.

Allowing the dairy bull to run with the herd is a dangerous practice. A good bull pen is cheap live insurance for both the owner and the bull. Ask your county agent for detailed plans.

Beef calves dropped in late Winter or early Spring can be marketed before Christmas at good prices, if they are fed a full grain ration. Start with coarse cracked corn as soon as the calves will eat it. Then change to shelled corn in two or three weeks, adding a supplement when the cows drop off in milk flow.

Washington's Colonial Home

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S colonial home, Mount Vernon, has not been a residence for many years, nor has it been owned by a member of the Washington family for three quarters of a century, says the Washington Star.

Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, daughter of John Augustine Washington, the illustrious Washington's great-grandnephew, was the last private owner of the estate. She first saw the world from the most historic home in America in 1856.

Though General Washington's slaves, numbering more than 150, were freed by his will, his nephew, Bushrod Washington, who inherited Mount Vernon, John Augustine Washington Bushrod's nephew, and his son, John Augustine Washington, Jr., who in turn fell heirs to the estate, were slave owners.

Today, survivors of the last generation of negro folk born in the slave quarters of the old manor are proud that their slave parents served in the ancestral home of the Washingtons. Somehow, they give realism to the farm which George Washington owned and which they helped to care for, as young men. These white - haired men declare there never was any depression at the old farm where the nights were festivals with the singing of "Roll, Jordan, Roll," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and "Steal Away to Jesus."

George Washington, who is said to have been worth several hundred thousand dollars in today's values, had a salary of $25,000 a year during his presidency and added resources brought to him by his marriage with the rich Martha Custis. With such wealth he was able to keep his estate of 8,000 acres in fine condition. This was despite the fact that he was constantly entertaining visitors.

By the time the property was inherited by John Augustine Washington, his nephew, in 1829, the plantation had been reduced to 1,225 acres, only about 100 acres of which were suitable for farming. When his son, John Augustine Washington Jr., came into possession of the estate in 1860, after his mother's death, he realized that such wealth as his great-uncle George had possessed was required to restore Mount Vernon and maintain it in its former splendor.

According to tradition a Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham of South Carolina, who was a Potomac boat passenger about the time when John A. Washington wished to sell Mount Vernon, became so impressed with the tolling of the bell and the historical importance of George Washington's home that she became active in working for the purchase of the estate.

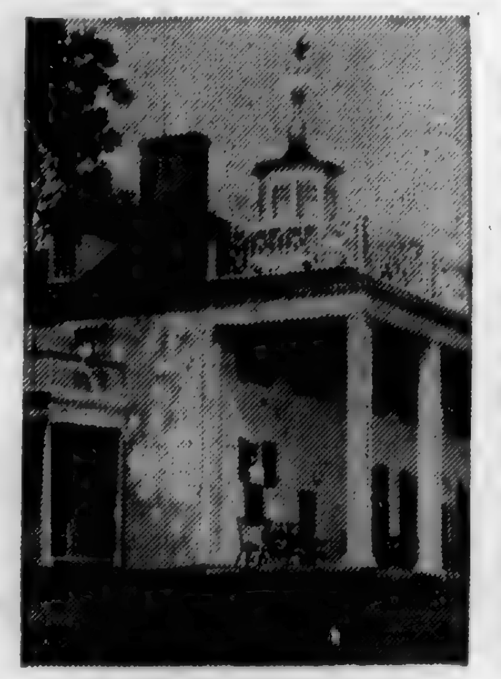
In 1858 the organization she had formed as the Mount Vernon Ladies' association of the Union contracted to buy the mansion and the patriotic appeal of the women and the efforts of Senator Edward Everett of Massachusetts, who toured the country and raised $68,294.50, Mount Vernon was actually purchased in 1860 for a shrine. Then the Washington family left the estate.

With breaking out of the Civil war, Miss Cunningham appealed to the commanders of both armies to preserve Mount Vernon. As both General Scott and General Lee gave orders that no armed man should enter the estate, the shrine was self-protected, the only neutral spot in the United States.

For several years members of at least four families of the Mt. Vernon slaves remained to care for the place, in the employ of the association. Some of the children grew up there and a few of the adults stayed long enough to gain the title of "aunty" or "uncle," which was a typical Southern respect for an aged negro.

For a while after the war visitors to Mount Vernon are said to have practiced such vandalism that they wrote their names over its walls and ceilings. Plaster was removed by those who cut pieces of laths as souvenirs, and even glass was broken in the cupola by those who wished to take away pieces of the famous home.

Today Mount Vernon, a national shrine, is a perfectly preserved plantation with mansion, greenhouse, kitchen, servant's quarters, coach house, smoke house, dairy, spinning house, carpenter's house, gardener's house and plantation office.



Washington's Colonial Home Now a National Shrine.

Perhaps the estate's closest touch with Washington are the beautiful trees in the grounds near the mansion which were planted either by General Washington or by his direction.

If the ancient ashes, beeches, buckeyes, hemlocks, coffee beans, elms, lindens, mulberry and the many venerable holly trees could speak, they would tell much about George Washington's life as a country gentleman.

America's most famous home, Mount Vernon, underwent not one but two major enlargements during the ownership of the First American who believed apparently, that the first duty of an American citizen to his family was to provide a comfortable home, according to a writer in the Washington Post.

When first built, about 1743, the Virginia home was an unpretentious plantation house of one and one-half stories, comprising the central section of the present mansion.

Just before his marriage to Martha Custis in 1759, Washington "renovized" the dwelling into a house of two and one-half stories by adding one complete story, but did not increase the floor area.

Doctor Townsend Says......

A FEW days ago I saw a newspaper cartoon showing an old hen labeled "the public" looking with question at a china doorknob, labeled Social Security, in her nest. The caption line read "Fooled—The Egg That Will Never Hatch!"

We were fooled from the start on Social Security. And now, just as we are beginning to awaken to the humbug, the Social Security Board announces it will begin paying pensions to those who have reached 65 since the Act became law. So that we are not fooled again it would be well to analyse how so much can be paid out to people who have paid in so little. It can be done only because the Treasury is drawing on the reserve fund. How long can the reserve last under this manipulation?

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"In politics," says thick-skinned Paul McNutt, "you have to learn to take it."

And McNutt knows whereof he speaks, for no other man in recent political history has been forced to "take it" in such large and damaging doses as the self-styled Hoosier Man of Destiny.

Eight months ago Paul McNutt was on top of the world. He had just returned from the Philippines to take over the choicest job in the New Deal —the post of Federal Security Administrator.

Basking in the warmth of the Presidential blessing, his stock soared upward as he announced that he would be a candidate for President "if Roosevelt does not seek a third term."

For the next few weeks every mark of New Deal favor appeared to beam brightly on McNutt as Roosevelt's man-of-the-hour and likely successor.

"Nothing," said beefy Frank McHale, as he carried the glad tidings to the boys in Indiana, "can stop us now. It's all over but the shouting."

Then it happened. The axe fell. There can be no doubt about it.

SECRETARY ICKES, chief hatchet man for the New Deal, took the measure of McNutt's neck and let 'er go. Ridiculing the suggestion that Roosevelt ever had any idea of supporting the Hoosier Adonis, he announced emphatically that no member of the party's liberal faction would or could support McNutt.

It was a clean job, performed with more than ordinary finesse. Those who knew intimately of Ickes' role in past hatchetings did not doubt for a moment that it had Roosevelt's sanction.

McNutt shares on the market fell so sharply that many read him abruptly out of the race. Certainly, if properly interpreted, it left Middle-of-the-Road McNutt out on a limb—with the New Dealers clamoring for his scalp on the one hand, and the conservatives laying for him on the other.

McNutt had committed the unpardonable sin of driving his bandwagon too far and too fast.

IF THE ICKES BLAST had been only a voice in the wilderness the damage might have been overcome. But it proved to be the opening gun of a concerted and systematic campaign to Stop McNutt.

There followed in rapid order (1) the Treasury Department probe of the income tax returns of McNutt's Indiana cohorts, (2) growing criticism from the White House inner circle, (3) the John L. Lewis blast at Columbus, (4) Presidential repudiation in the form of a veto of a bill to reimburse Ohio pension funds, which McNutt favored, and (5) damaging comment by unfriendly newspaper columnists (General Johnson, Pearson and Allen, Alsop and Kintner.)

And always in the background, threatening to upset the McNutt bandwagon was (1) the undercover opposition of Jim Farley and his friends, (2) his association with the malodorous Two Per Cent Club, (3) his dictatorial record as Governor of Indiana, (4) the Terre Haute strike incident, and (5) strong hints from the White House that Secretary Hull is the favored candidate.

A GREAT DEAL of the McNutt criticism has taken the form of mild razzing of the type engaged in at Gridiron dinners. Some of it has been good-natured and harmless, touching on his unfortunate name, his too-handsome profile, his obvious vanity and his lack of any vestige of modesty. But much of it has bordered on the unpleasant.

For example, McNutt underwent an unmerciful roasting at the Indiana Society dinner in Chicago. A special edition of The Bloomington Star, announcing McNutt's election as President, was circulated among the guests. The newspaper quoted McNutt as saying:

"This means a New Year. As soon as I am inaugurated I will issue an order to revise the calendar, making the day of my inauguration January 1. I shall do this for the benefit of future historians, who will look upon my entry into the White House as the beginning of the most sensational era of all time."

The MOST DAMAGING newspaper criticism has come from Columnists Alsop and Kintner, whose bitterly frank comment on McNutt, McHale, Bo Elder and other Two Percenters has plagued the McNutt candidacy from the beginning. Typical was their recent syndicated release, which stated:

The ardors of a presidential candidacy are hideously illustrated by the recent career of Paul Vories McNutt. The McNutt boom turned out to be a rather faint pop. The McNutt 'green light from the White House,' so loudly touted, ended by convincing no one but the incurably color blind. The McNutt talents for self-explanation were put to a severe test by John L. Lewis' remarks on the use of troops in the Terre Haute strike. Yet the McNutt campaign goes on."

To which Mr. McNutt replies, with a wry smile: "In politics you have to learn to take it."

AUBURN LIVESTOCK MARKET REPORT

Furnished by
Ward Jackman, Sec.-Treas.

Receipts of slaughter hogs were slightly lower than last week and in spite of active bidding at higher prices there were unfilled orders at the close of the sale. 160 to 220lb weights were taken freely at $5.45 to $5.80 not only was this fully 10c per cwt. above competitive markets but two weight grades were included in this price range. Heavy hogs were taken actively at prices in line with top grades. Fat sows $3.75 to $4.30. Stags, $3.00. Boars, $1.60 to $2.00.

There were 37 more veals on sale than were offered last week. A few selects established a top of $12.90 which was a $1.90 per cwt. above the highest competitive market and as much as $2.40 above some in this locality. Good and fair calves sold on very liberal sorts at $11.00 to $11.60. Both our Toledo buyers went home without calves, giving place to Floyd Landel, of Waldron, Michigan, who buys for the Detroit market. The light calves were taken by Fred Borrman, of Gary.

There were not enough fat lambs to establish a market but stock ewes sold from $6.00 to $8.00 per head and slaughter ewes from 50c per cwt. above last week. The steers in the offering were of common quality and were taken by local butchers at $6.10 to $7.80, slightly higher quality heifers $6.60 to $7.10. Best fat cows in the offering $5.00 to $5.35. Cutter cows $3.50 to $4.75. Bulls, $6.10 to $7.60.

Withdraws New Trial Motion

The defendant in the suit of John Kelly against Roscoe Freeman has withdrawn his motion for a new trial in the DeKalb Circuit Court. The complaint involved the sale of a horse by the defendant to the plaintiff, the latter contending the animal was not sound. A jury that heard the evidence last November found for the plaintiff in the sum of $110.

GEORGE WASHINGTON WAS A DOCTOR

NOT well known, but authentic, is the fact that George Washington was really a physician. His knowledge of medicine prepared him to treat the illnesses of slaves on his own plantation. During his final illness, before other doctors were called in, he directed his own treatment, says a writer in Hygeia, the Health Magazine. As was customary at the time, he ordered himself bled. Shortly before he died, his breathing became easier and he withdrew his hand from a friend's and felt his own pulse. Washington thus evidently realized that the end had come and gave up hope; for immediately a great change came over his countenance and his hand fell lifeless to his side.

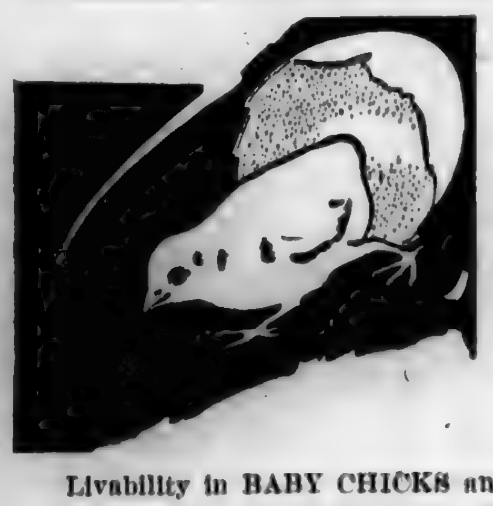
QUALITY PAYS DIVIDENDS



QUALITY in Baby Chicks is as important, or perhaps more important, than in any other one commodity or article. Farmers are always concerned with quality in farm machinery, stock, in seed, automobiles, in fact in everything pertaining to farm life. If this is the case, QUALITY IN BABY CHICKS and in LAYING HENS goes double.

Livability in BABY CHICKS and "EGGABILITY" in hens do not just happen—they are bred there. The days of "a chick's a chick and a hen's a hen" are past. Concentrated breeding has raised egg production considerably in the last few years. A hen can lay no more eggs than is bred into her through her ancestors. Likewise with livability. A hen that lays 50 or 60 eggs a year costs as much to keep as one laying from 250 to 300 eggs. When you invest your good money in Baby Chicks, make sure of getting stock that will live as well as lay. A reported loss of less than 1% on all chicks sold by us last season speaks volumes. A number of reports on our flocks which boast 50% average, even through the sub-zero weather experienced in the last month, also speaks highly for our breeding.

All our flocks are Blood-tested and all Chicks are fumigated at hatching time. We have this year enlarged our quarters and capacity and are better able to serve you. We also carry an enlarged stock of Supplies, Feeds, Brooders, and Remedies. Stop and talk over your Poultry Problems.

See for Yourself What It's Like to Cultivate with the "70"

Don't take anybody's say-so about what a great job the Oliver Row Crop "70" does with its centrally mounted cultivator. Drive the "70" and see for yourself how it has everything, does everything and is a beauty to handle as well as in looks.

See the shovels working in plain sight right in front of you, as you roll straight down the row, at 4⅓ m.p.h. on Tip Toe Wheels that tread so lightly that they actually cultivate the soil. You draw close up to the fence... a second's pause, up come the gangs as you whip the wheel around and the automatic steering brakes come into play . . . you're on line, the brakes release, down come the gangs and away you go down the rows with a running start.

That's cultivating as only the Row Crop "70" cultivator does it. That's smooth, lively 6-cylinder power under finger-tip control from the comfortable driver's seat—automotive steering with steering-braking on turns—the Oliver Variable Speed Governor Control that enables you to use only the fuel needed to do the work—speed that gets cultivating done when it will do the most good.

The "70" is built in two fuel types: the "70" HC with high compression engine for gasoline and the "70" KD with engine designed for kerosene or distillate. Pick your fuel and your "70" and get modern low-cost tractor power. See us about a demonstration today.

INSTRUCTIONS ARE GIVEN TO ASSESSORS

Speaking before the DeKalb County group of township assessors and their deputies at the court house in Auburn Thursday, John Rothrock, of South Bend, a special representative of the state board of tax commissioners, revealed that the board has ordered a general reappraisement of real estate in 1941.

This general assessment, the first since 1932, will be made unless the legislature next Winter decrees otherwise, which is deemed unlikely. Real estate owners may have their properties reappraised this year by filing petitions with County Assessor Chas. E. Miser by March 1.

Mr. Rothrock explained the new personal property forms to the local assessors. While only one form was used before, now there are three, one being for business houses, one for farms and the third for household goods and automobiles. Heretofore a supplementary information form has been used for business houses and also a corporation statement. These have been combined into one form this year. The purpose of the changes is to reduce confusion, the board states.

All the local assessors were present for the meeting Thursday excepting Dode Houlton of Franklin township, who is ill, and Eugene D. Webster, of Stafford township, who was in Florida. The other township assessors are the following: Union, Elmer O. Likens; Keyser, S. D. Johnston; Butler, Russell W. Housel; Jackson, Lewis E. Freeman; Concord, Samuel Mumaw; Spencer, Clyde Rectenwall; Newville, Romeo E. Richards; Wilmington, Walter Mutzfeld; Richland, Jay W. De Witt; Fairfield, Ora E. Rowe; Smithfield, Lee R. Wise; Troy, Byron Campbell, and Grant, Fern A. Morr.

The assessors will again call at the court house Wednesday, February 29, when they will secure their supplies in readiness to begin their canvass March 1.

SELLING MILK BY THE YARD

The Irishman's eyes twinkled with mischief as he entered a shop where a notice was displayed saying that everything there was sold by the yard.

"I'll take a yard of milk," he said to the shopman.

Wrinkling his brow for a moment, the shopman dipped his fingers in a bowl of milk and drew a line a yard long on the counter. By this time several other persons had come in and all watched the proceedings with keen interest, wondering what Mike would do. Without moving a muscle, he asked the price.

"Five cents," said the shopman, confidently.

"All roight, sor. Roll it up and Oi'll take it."

The Twenty-Second of February

PALE is the February sky,
  And brief the midday's sunny hours;
The windswept forest seems to sigh
  For the sweet time of leaves and flowers.

Yet has no month a prouder day,
  Not even when the summer broods
O'er meadows in their fresh array,
  Or autumn tints the glowing woods.

For this chill season now again
  Brings, in its annual round, the morn
When, greatest of the sons of men,
  Our glorious Washington was born.

Lo, where beneath an icy shield,
  Calmly the mighty Hudson flows!
By snowclad fell and frozen field,
  Broadening, the lordly river goes.

The wildest storm that sweeps through space
  And rends the oak with sudden force,
Can raise no ripple on his face,
  Or slacken his majestic course.

Thus, 'mid the wreck of thrones shall live
  Unmarred, undimmed, our hero's fame,
And years succeeding years shall give
  Increase of honors to his name.

—William Cullen Bryant.

During the morning Henry Ford dropped in and stayed for three hours.

The most challenging opportunity for achievement facing American farmers of today is to rear a generation of children who will be a credit to them and to the land from whence they came.

Safetygrams

BY FRED W. BRAUN
© The Safety Man

Many of us drive along at 60 miles an hour feeling perfectly safe and assured that nothing can happen. If weather and traffic conditions are favorable, and the vehicle is in the best possible condition, this does not present such an unusual problem.

However, inattention to traffic conditions, recklessness or thoughtlessness in driving, and the many other driving faults we all have, make 60 miles an hour too fast a speed.

Let us remember this: When you hit a stone wall or other immovable object when driving at 60 miles an hour, the force of the impact is as great as if you were to drive off the top of a ten story building. Can you imagine that shock?

It's Smart to Drive Carefully!

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

About one third of the Spring pigs farrowed on Indiana farms are lost from farrowing to the time of weaning, states John Schwab, Purdue University hog man. Every good pig lost means the loss of approximately 70 pounds of feed as on the average it requires about this amount of feed per pig born to feed the sows during the gestation period.

Excessive losses of Spring pigs can often be prevented by giving the sows comfortably warm farrowing quarters which are free from drafts. The floors should be dry and the bedding kept as comfortable as possible by frequent changes.

Sows overlaying pigs is the leading cause of loss. Overlaying can be largely prevented by using guard rails in the farrowing pens securely fastened 10 to 12 inches from the wall and 10 inches above the floor. Also a pig cradle or hover saves many pigs and costs very little. It is made of two 1x10 inch boards, each 3 feet long, nailed together edgewise at ends to form a right angle. Make a tight cover of boards and straw. Provide plenty of clean, dry bedding under hover where pigs may sleep, starting at one to two days old.

The first point in economical hog production is to raise a large average number of pigs per litter. The average number raised in Indiana in 1939 was 6.7 per litter. Each year more farmers in Indiana are raising an average of nine to more than 10 pigs per litter, weighing a ton or more in six months.

A PROPHECY

(From "Lincoln's Grave.")

Old soldiers true, ah, them all men can trust,
Who fought, with conscience clear, on either side;
Who bearded death and thought their cause was just;
Their stainless honor can not be denied;
Ring it and sing it up and down the land,
And let no voice dare answer it with sneers,
Or shut its meaning out;
Ring it and sing it, we go hand in hand,
Old infantry, old cavalry, old cannoneers.

And if Virginia's vales shall ring again
To battle-yell of Moseby or Mahone,
If Wilder's wild brigade or Morgan's men
Once more wheel into lines; or all alone
A Sheridan shall ride, a Cleburne fall—
There will not be two flags above them flying,
But both in one, welded in that pure flame
Upflaring in us all,
When kindred unto kindred, loudly crying,
Rally and cheer in freedoms' holy name!

—Maurice Thompson.

DeKALB COUNTY FEDERATION OF CLUBS TO MEET APRIL 26

Allen county, April 24.
Whitley county, April 25.
DeKalb county, April 26.

The county presidents will arrange for convention dates.

The fine arts festival of the district will be held at LaGrange Friday, March 26, with Mrs. H. E. Tribolet, of Fort Wayne, the district chairman, in charge.

The state convention will take place at the Spink Arms hotel, Lake Wawasee, June 4, 5 and 6. Each club in universal membership is entitled to two delegates.

The district convention will be held at the Methodist Church in Ligonier next Fall, but the state organization has not set the date.

TO ASSESS LIVE STOCK— GRAIN AT 80% MARKET VALUE

The state tax board has announced the adoption of a regulation under which farm live stock, grain and produce will be assessed March 1 at only 80 per cent of their market value. Commissioner C. R. Benjamin said farm assessments long have been looked upon as "inequitable" and that the new plan is an attempt to strike a balance with merchandise assessments. Store stocks are assessed at cost instead of retail value, he pointed out. Heretofore farm assessments have been made at full market value except for small deductions for the estimated cost of hauling to market. Nearest-market prices on March 1 are to be used by assessors in making the 80 per cent evaluations on grain and produce.

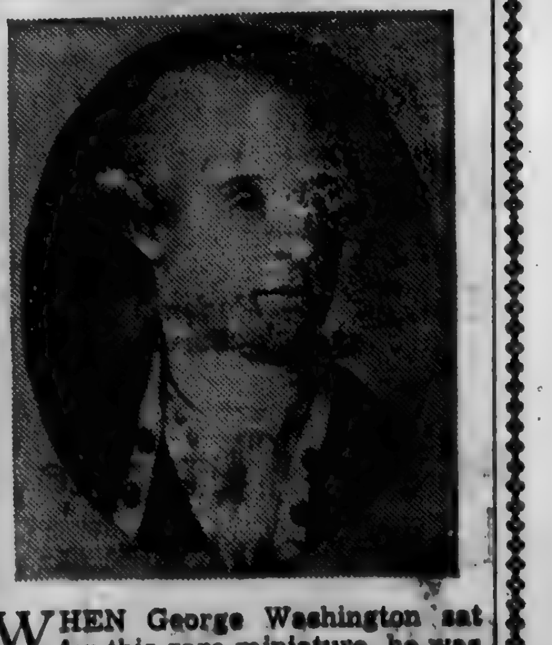
Washington at 25



WHEN George Washington sat for this rare miniature, he was only twenty-five but he was already well on the way toward becoming Virginia's first citizen. His marriage to Martha, the wealthy widow of Daniel Custis, in 1759 and the death of his half brother, Lawrence, made George at twenty-nine perhaps the richest man in Virginia and certainly one of the richest in America. But before that—in his early twenties—he had made his mark as a soldier who could combine reckless courage with thoughtful purpose.

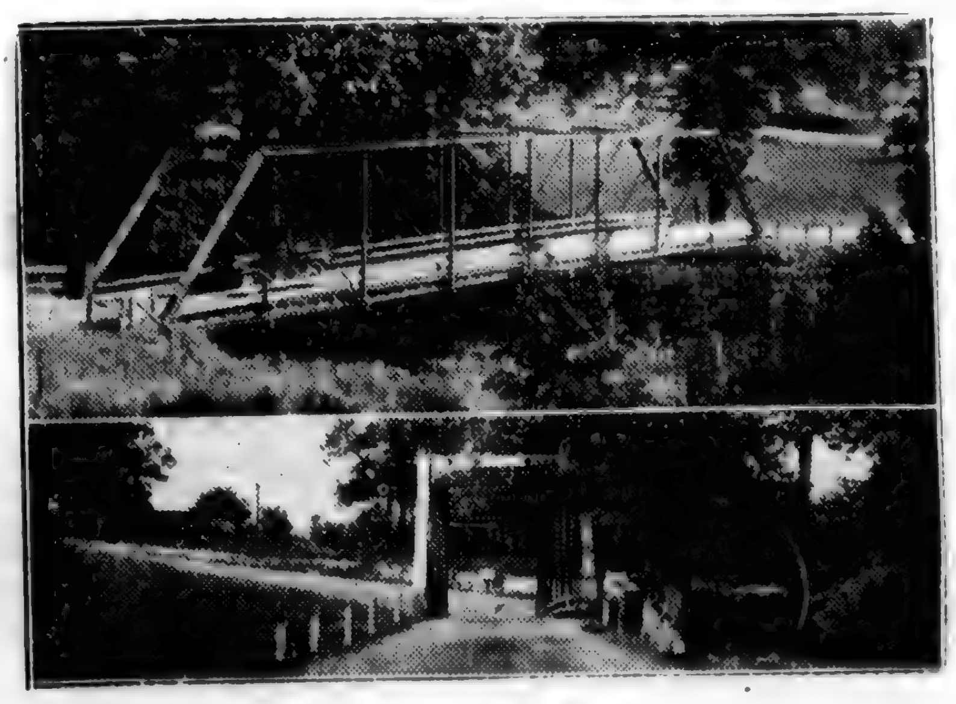
Replace Narrow Bridges on State Highways for Increased Safety



One of the Bridges to be Replaced

Replacement of bridges with narrow roadways and limited load-carrying capacity is one of the important contributions to increased motoring safety being made by the State Highway Commission, T. A. Dicus, chairman, pointed out today.

While funds available do not permit a large-scale program for the elimination of such structures on the state highway system, steady progress is being made in removing these hazards to the safety of motorists using the roads on which they are located. Bids will be taken February 27 on the construction of fifteen bridges, many of which will replace structures which have narrow roadways, limited load-carrying capacity, and frequently are located so that the motorist must make one or more sharp curves.

A survey of the state highway system, made in co-operation with the Public Roads Administration, showed that 56 per cent of the bridges had a roadway of twenty feet or less. One-fourth of all bridges on the state system had a roadway of sixteen feet or less. Eighteen per cent of the bridges had a load-carrying capacity of ten tons or less.

For the most part, these structures —a hazard to the safety of motorists using the roads—were constructed a number of years ago when roadway width was not as important as today with an increased volume of traffic and the higher speeds at which traffic moves. It has been estimated by highway engineers that replacement of all the bridges and culverts having narrow roadways and limited load-carrying capacity, would cost approximately twenty million dollars.

Replacement of these structures, in addition to being a contribution to motoring safety, is an important part of the highway modernization program which has been sponsored by the State Highway Commission with the support of motorists and organizations interested in the future of Indiana roads.

The Commission maintains a complete record of every bridge on the state highway sytsem and these structures are inspected frequently to check upon their condition and suitability for the traffic which moves over the road of which they are a part. This record provides data enabling the Commission to select for replacement bridges which are major traffic hazards or are unsuited for further use.

A COOK IS AS GOOD AS THE FOOD PRODUCED

To most children, a cook is as good as the dessert she produces. Not that children won't do justice to well-cooked food of any kind, but dishes such as "Mom's pies or her shortcakes," are the ones that they boast about.

Both from the enutritional angle and from the standpoint of tempting flavor and attractiveness, some of the best material for desserts is fruit, explained Mary Lenore Moore, Home Demonstration Agent. Everyone in the family, says Miss Moore, might well have five or more servings of vegetables and fruit every day, because of the minerals, vitamins and bulk that these foods contribute to the diet. One of these five servings could be fruit for breakfast, another could be a fruit dessert at lunch or dinner.

Fruit desserts may vary with the tastes of the family and change with the calendar. Fruit sauces are always standard. Pies, puddings and dumplings are more popular in the colder weather. Now, too, with fewer fresh fruits available, homemakers are using more of the canned, dried and frozen kinds.

No cook can go wrong making sauce from fresh fruits if she remembers to be sparing with the water, add sugar at the right time, and puts in a dash of salt to bring out the flavor of fruit. Cook the fruit until soft, add only enough water in cooking to keep the fruit from scorching, add sugar to taste, during the last few minutes of cooking.

Dried fruits, like fresh ones, are served most often as sauce. And aside from the preliminary soaking, their preparation is much the same. Always wash fruits in hot water before soaking them. Then use the soaking water to cook the fruit, in order to get all of the good flavor.

Most dried apricots need no soaking. Put them directly into boiling water and simmer for thirty minutes. Prunes generally are best dropped in boiling water, left there for an hour to become plump, then simmered for half an hour until they are tender.

Summer, Winter, Spring, Fall—a final course of fruit served with no preparation but a thorough washing is always welcome. This lends variety. Moreover, providing such a dessert takes little of the homemaker's time. She has merely to consult her purse, then pick and choose from the year-round procession of fresh fruits as they come to market.

ELECtricity in the HEN HOUSE is a PROFITABLE INVESTMENT . . .

YOU will be more successful in your poultry raising when you apply modern electrical methods. Electric brooders provide the pure air so necessary to growing chicks. Electricity assures pure heat with no fumes, and there is no open flame to use up the oxygen in the air, so essential to life and growth. A properly designed electric brooder gives automatic, well distributed heat regardless of the weather.

The use of electric lights in the hen house to lengthen winter days to about thirteen hours increases egg production in the months when prices are highest. Electrified experimental farms have demonstrated that the cost of electricity in poultry houses for large flocks, as well as the provision of electrically heated drinking water, amounts to about 2 cents a year for each hen.

Electricity will work for you . . . Give it a chance in your Hen House!

CANNING PROGRAM MEANS BALANCED MENUS FOR MANY INDIANA FAMILIES

If their records are any indication, members of the Hoosier Garden Club, a state-wide project sponsored by the Indiana Vegetable Growers' Association and the Purdue Univeristy Agricultural Extension Service should be enjoying the Winter months with plenty of good things to eat from the vegetables, fruits, and meats they canned last Summer.

Of the 82 co-operating Indiana counties, 76 reported to W. B. Ward, Purdue Extension horticulturist in charge of the project, that during 1939 their membership canned a total of 2,320,092 quarts of fruits, vegetables, and meats. If these jars of home canned food were placed end to end, they probably would reach more than 250 miles.

The significance of this canning record becomes impressive, says Ward, when it is remembered that 1,732,938 quarts of the grand total represent the surplus of Hoosier home gardens and orchards. That is, the co-operating families canned this food after using all the fresh vegetables and fruits needed during the Summer months. Besides the canning, the rural families stored 118,001 bushels of fruits and vegetables, putting nearly 1,000 pounds in cold storage lockers, now situated in many parts of the state. More than 16,000 pounds of meats were placed in cold storage. The canning and storage figures are the largest in the history of the project.

The state average for the 8,484 co-operating families was 273.47 cans of food per family. The average size family was 3.64 persons or a total of 29,897 persons.

The best county record in the state was again made by Fulton county with 431 reports, showing 140,926 quarts canned and 8,199 bushels stored. The county will receive a special certificate for its achievement, having won a similar award last year.

Gold pin awards for the three highest records will be presented to: Mrs. Agnes Weimer, Winchester, who canned an average of 334 quarts for each member of her family; Mrs. Ella Kounty, Osgood, who canned 324 quarts for each member of her family, and Mrs. Carl E. Pfeil, Crown Point, who canned 319 quatrs per family member. Their respective counties will receive certificates also. There were 516 bronze pin winners, who canned an average of 60 quarts of vegetables and 49 quarts of fruit or more per person in their families. Last year there were 428 bronze pin winners.

HORSE SENSE

Heating poultry houses under Indiana conditions have not proved profitable.

Dry celery leaves and place them in a glass jar. They may be used later as seasoning for soups.

Birds are more than twice as numerous in unburned and unpastured woods as in grazed woodlots.

Pastures absorb one-third to one-twentieth as much rainfall as forests, says the Purdue extension soil conservationist.

During zero weather, for limited service, the tractor transmission lubricant may be diluted with ten per cent kerosene, so that it will lubricate properly.

To be well pleased with the produce of any hybrid, the buyer should know the type of corn it produces, whether one or two ear type and other stalk or ear characteristics in which he may be interested.

Lining the wood box with cardboard will prevent many splinters in the fingers.

Two essentials for a good lamb crop that will make profits, are plenty of legume hay and lots of exercise for pregnant and suckling ewes.

SCHOOL NOTES

Tourney Tickets on Sale

Season tickets for the Sectional tournament to be held Thursday evening, Friday and Saturday at the Butler gymnasium are on sale at the office in the high school. The doors are open to season ticket holders 30 minutes before general admission. The amount of money drawn by the athletic association from the tournament receipts depends partly upon the number of season tickets sold here.

St. Joe meets Fremont on Thursday evening.

Following is a list of players certified to play in the tournament:

Hubert Bleeks, Fr., Donald Cook, Jr., Frank Curie, Jr., Richard Davis, Jr., Walter Fetters, Fr., Junior Freeburn, So., Jack Goodwin, Jr., Robert Harter, Sr., Marcel Pugsley, Jr., Burl Rude, Sr. Alternates: Eugene Baker, Fr., Richard Reed, So.

The high school band made two appearances last week. They furnished part of the music for the P. T. A. meeting. On Saturday morning they were well received when they played two numbers at the February meeting of the DeKalb County Teachers Institute. The band brought much credit both to themselves and to their director in their playing of Chanson Triste by Tschaikowsky and Zenith Overture by Bennett.

At the afternoon session of the institute, the verse choir persented an interesting program. The sacred number given at the Christmas program was followed by two numbers by a smaller group. These numbers, Have You Been a Good Girl? and In the Dark, both by A. A. Milne were given to show what can be done with choric reading in the lower grades.

The Senior Class of the St. Joe High School had the privilege last Thursday of attending the third of a series of lectures sponsored by the Hicksville Rotary Club for the convocation program at Hicksville High School. The lectures are made possible through the Intsitute for International Understanding. The speaker, Mr. H. Canfield Cook, is a Canadian by birth and American by adoption, an aviator with World War experience and was recently made a member of National Areonautics Association. He gave a brief but picturesque history of aviation to the present time, and made predictions about the future of aviation. He discussed the possibilities of aviation as a vocation and explained the best means of getting into the various branches, piloting, mechanics, airplane design, and airline hostess. In his closing statements he discussed aviation as a means of making the world into a world community and suggested the need of the nations of the world to learn to live peacefully together, not necessarily all with the same form of government, but each having a respect for the rights of its national neighbor.

At the close of the talk a number of worth while questions asked by the students were answered fully by Mr. Cook.

The Seniors appreciate the opportunity of attending the meeting and the hospitality of the school officials and members of the student body who took them on a tour of the new building.

GRAND RUSH TO OBTAIN MARRIAGE LICENSES

Matrimonally bound couples took advantage Saturday of an opportunity to secure marriage licenses at the office of County Clerk Carl Walter before the blood test law becomes effective Friday of this week.

Twenty-five permits were granted in Auburn Saturday, most of them to out-of-state applicants. The number was about the same the previous Saturday. They came here, chiefly from Ohio and Michigan to avoid the laws in their states requiring five days' notice. It is expected the health law in Indiana will practically eliminate applications from other states. Illinois also requires such examinations.

The new law requiring tests for syphilis by marriage license applicants will go into effect tomorrow, March 1st.

Applicants will go to their family physician to obtain blood specimens and he in turn will send said specimen to approved laboratory. The reports are held confidential and in private and are not available for public inspection.

HOME BUREAU

For their February meeting the Concord Township Home Bureau met at the home of their president, Mrs. Millie Shull to celebrate the 17th anniversary of the club. The collect read by the club, followed by a group of songs led by the chorister, Mrs. Mary Krise. A paper prepared by Mrs. Hattie Widney Stone, who could not be present, was given by Mrs. Anna Tustison.

The club was organized March 1, 1923 with seventeen members, at the close of the year they had a membership of 54. They chose for their motto, To co-operate with others for the common ends of a more abundant and efficient home and comunity life. Another paper presented by Mary Krise also gave interesting facts, 15 of the 54 members enrolled the first year still retain their membership. One of the important factors of the talks given during the afternoon revealed the same friendliness which existed during the first years of the club still exists. Other charter members who gave interesting talks were Mrs. Beulah Coburn and Mrs. Borthwic. Each presenting some outstanding work done by the club. Mrs. Iva Yeiser gave a very interesting report of her trip to Purdue Conference. Response to roll call, Why I Like the Club.

The club voted to accept an invitation to visit the WOWO Broadcasting station at Fort Wayne June 4.

The hostess and her committee, Laura Washler, Minnie Ulm and Kathryn Haller, served cake, salad, candy, coffee. Two new members were received into the club. Next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Ray Reasoner, March 15th.

Mother, thou art gone before us, and thy saintly soul hath flown
Where the tears are wiped from every eye, and sorrow is unknown;
From the burdens of the flesh, and from care and fear released,
Where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

The toilsome way thou'st traveled o'er,
and born the heavy load;
But Christ hath taught thy languid feet to reach His bles't abode.
Thou art sleeping now, like Lazarus,
upon his Father's breast,
Where the wicked cease from trobling
and the weary are at rest.

Earth to earth, and dust to dust, the solemn priest hath said;
So we lay the terf above thee now,
and seal thy narrow bed.
But thy spirit, Mother, soars away among the faithful bles't,
Where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

And when the Lord shall summon us,
whom thou hast left behind,
May we untainted by the world,
as sure a welcome find.
May each, like thee, depart in peace,
to be a glorious guest,
Where the wicked cease from troubling
and the weary are at rest.

CAR DRIVEN INTO FAST WABASH FREIGHT

What can really be considered a miracle, resulted Monday night about 11 o'clock, when Dick Kelley and a young Brown of Jackson township, were returning home from Spencerville basket ball practice, ran deliberately into a fast Wabash freight train going east, resulting in their Ford coach being completely demolished, making at a miracle that the young men escaped with their lives, let alone without injury, save a few cuts and bruises.

The boys say they did not see the train because of the blinding snow, until too close to stop. They headed the auto to the left when they discovered the train, and when they hit, the car engine was driven down under the car getting the full force of the train. The crossing sign at the right was broken off and carried up the track about 40 feet, and the car was thrown to the right of the crossing, and the hood was carried to the front of the depot.

When the boys picked themselves up and found that neither was seriously hurt, they started back toward Spencerville and stopped at the Delbert Furnish home where they called Dr. Shook. He came and dressed their wounds and took them home. Insurance on the Kelley car covered only on public liability and property damage.

Due to Kelley being one of the main men on the basketball team, his absence will cripple the team at the tourney at Butler this week.

SIXTY-FIRST ANNIVERSARY NEXT MONDAY, MARCH 4

Next Monday, Mr. and Mrs. Jósephus R. Shilling, will observe their sixty-first wedding anniversary in a very quiet way with their children, and possibly a few close friends as callers. Due to the ill health of Mr. Shilling, the famiy thought best not to observe open house.

Mr. Shilling is 88 and Mrs. Shilling is 80 years of age. They have lived in this community all these years, having been born and raised just two miles west of St. Joe.

Mrs. Shilling came from a family of six children and she is the only survivor, while Mr. Shilling came from a family of twelve children and he is survived by a brother and sister.

They have a vast circle of friends who will extend congratulations no doubt by sending them greetings on this rare occasion.

"HOGG FOR GOVERNOR CAMPAIGN OPENS MONDAY

The campaign of David Hogg, of Fort Wayne, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, will get under way in earnest March 4, when a "Hogg for Governor" caravan leaves Fort Wayne to cover the state.

The caravan, which will be featured by an Indiana-made automobile and trailer, and a display of foreign products competing with those grown and manufactured in Indiana, will proceed to Akron, where Mr. Hogg will address a meeting of Fulton county Republicans in the evening. The theme of Mr. Hogg's campaign is that by developing the resources of Indiana, and eliminating graft and waste in state government, 150,000 jobs in private enterprise will be created.

During next week, the caravan will cover central Indiana, and on the evening of March 11, Mr. Hogg will make a major address in Indianapolis before the Irvington Republican club.

As an added attraction, the caravan will include the Stevens Troubadours, a male quartet from Whitley county. Hogg's managers say his campaign will be carried into every town and city in the state, except in his opponent's counties.

The members of the St. Joe Townsend Club will go to Butler on Friday night of next week to sit in on their regular meeting and to return their visit to this club. At the meeting last Thursday night at the Town Hall, 25 were present and everyone enjoyed the meeting also the cherry pie and coffee served.

Mrs. Janet Gillie, 88, of Fort Wayne, the mother of Dr. George W. Gillie, congressman from the fourth district, died while visiting a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Pearson, in St. Paul, Minn., Monday afternoon, several hours after suffering a stroke of apoplexy. Born in Perth, Scotland, Mrs. Gillie had been a resident of Allen county and Ft. Wayne approximately 58 years. Her husband, the late James Gillie, who died in 1911, operate a farm and dairy plant for many years in St. Joe township, Allen county.

OLIVER DAY WAS A REAL SUCCESS FRIDAY

Oliver Day was largely attended at the Zonker sales room in St. Joe, Friday. Oliver field men were present all day explaining the new features of their farm tractor and pieces of machinery on display, and of course, answering questions for those who were interested in new machinery for their use this Spring.

Motion pictures were shown in the afternoon. Lunch was furnished to the farmer folk who spent the day here, and peanuts were given as a treat to others.

Mr. Zonker will be glad to talk to any of the farmers who are contemplating new machinery this Spring and he is able to make it worth their while to come to St. Joe and see the famous Oliver line of farm implements.

"Our public debt—national, state, and local—now averages $430 for every man, woman and child in the country. The present generation has placed a mortgage on all the people and on the property of all the people in order to prime the pump for the present generation."—Harry Flood Byrd, U. S. Senator from Virginia. This is a nice present to hand to unborn generations. What will they think of the intelligence of their forefathers?

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

Editor's note: This is one of a series of "Gilt Glimpses" of the presidential candidates.)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Several months ago this column went out on a limb and predicted that two native Midwesterners from just across the Indiana border — Thomas E. Dewey and Arthur H. Vandenberg—would be the candidates to watch in the 1940 Republican National Convention.

That convention is now less than four months away, and your correspondent still has no regrets. We'll even go further out on the limb and predict that one of these gentlemen will be the next occupant of the White House—with the odds on the lucky one about even.

Last week we revealed in some detail the activities of the hatchet men who are out to stop McNutt. This week we turn our attention to the Dewey Debunkers, who claim that there's nothing more behind the Pride of Owosso than a gang-busting record and an engaging personality.

THESE DEBUNKERS have viewed Mr. Dewey from the first as part inexperienced interloper and part reformist politician, with nothing more to recommend him than his vim, vigor and vitality. They have predicted sourly that his poll-leading fame will soon die out and that his candidacy will flop along with it.

Those who know Dewey personally, however, are convinced that there's something behind that short, bustling figure, those protruding ears and the 38 years of youth his Hitler moustache fails to hide.

There's a throat, schooled for radio magic in the best Roosevelt manner—a larynx that lost him one career and found him another—a voice that swayed trial juries and now falls soothingly on the ears of dial spinners.

And behind that voice there's some thinking, both his own and the combined work of the latest in Republican brain trusts, which searched vulnerable chinks in the New Deal economic and fiscal policies, and struck home.

DEWEY is not one to lose sleep over the activities of his debunkers. He cocks his head at an impertinent angle, bubbles new confidence and moves in to take command with an assertive air that gets in the hair of some elders. It was that way before he ran Governor Lehman the race of his life in the New York elections in 1938.

It was that way before he came into New York District Attorney Medalie's office as chief assistant in 1931, a youth of 29, without previous experience.

Now he has a long string of triumphs to bolster that seeming overconfidence as he parries thrusts with the New Deal.

DEWEY'S debunkers have made much of his youth and his newness on the national political scene. But the fact that practically nothing is known of his political, economic and social opinions has advantages that tend to offset this.

At the Philadelphia convention next June he will go up against candidates like Vandenberg, Taft and Bridges, who have spread on the Senate record their views on every national issue, vote by vote and bill by bill, for all to approve or shoot at.

This may clarify matters for the voter, but it builds up a great body of opposition among those who see matters differently.

Which is probably the reason why Dtwey's speeches are "too general" to suit his debunkers, and why he has approached controversial issues gingerly.

SON of an Owosso, Mich., weekly newspaper publisher, Dewey in his younger days was divided on music or journalism as a career. Work on the town sheet prepared him for the latter; his baritone voice urged him to the former.

At the University of Michigan he played at both, on the glee club and on the college paper, but after winning a singing contest he came to New York for voice training.

He sang in a church choir for expense money, studied law nights "just in case." When something went wrong with his vocal chords, he shifted to law in earnest. And when he took a job in a big law office, he found the voice training had not been wasted. His diction was good and he could control those overtones.

ASSOCIATION with Medalie as trial counsel on a case was the break that won him public recognition. When President Hoover made Medalie U. S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York, Dewey went along as his assistant.

There began his epic rise to fame as a racket smasher. He aimed at the "big shots" and protected the "little people" who brought him information; by this means he crushed whole mobs. In quick succession, as special prosecutor and finally as district attorney, he jailed Dutch Schultz, Waxy Gordon, Lucky Luciano and—to top it off—Jimmy Hines. Dewey's exploits made him famous in every home in America, as his quick rise to the top in public opinion polls shows.

Having glorified law enforcement, having linked crime and politics, having demonstrated political "oomph" by his race against Lehman, Dewey is again on the rampage. He doesn't profess modesty and nothing less than the Presidency will suffice.

TOWNSEND PLAN AT A GLANCE

Far from being merely a pension program, the Townsend Plan will bring prosperity to America on a scale never dreamed of during the "boom years" of 1926-29. It will do this by creating jobs for all the unemployed at good pay.

There are now nearly ten million unemployed in the United States. Most of these, it is true, are among the age group of 20 to 55. However there are just about an equal number (ten million) who are past the age of 60.

Jobs for Ten Million.

The Townsend Plan will take the ten million now over 60 and retire them for gainful employment. This will leave jobs open for all the ten million now unemployed; thus, everyone except those in the age group past 60 will go to work.

A transactions tax of 2 per cent will be levied on all business in the Nation. Every time a dollar changes hands in a transaction, two cents of it will be collected by the Government for distribution among the aged, those ten million past sixty.

The aged will not be permitted to save this money, but will be compelled to place it back in circulation within thirty days of receipt.

In putting it in circulation, they will buy necessities and luxuries. Thus instead of ten million persons not engaged in monetary transactions, as at present, everyone in America will engage in numerous monetary transaction each thirty days.

Revenue from the transactions tax levy will increase as transactions increase. Simultaneous with increase in revenue will come the increase in prorata shares from the transactions tax fund, which will be distributed each month among those past 60.

It is a revolving plan which, by placing a great deal more money in circulation each month for necessities and luxuries, will result in factories running full blast and rising wages.

The whole Nation will benefit incalculably from the Townsend Plan.

Mrs. Sewelin lived alone. Her son, Ernest Sewelin, came down from Kalamazoo, Michigan, each weekend. When he drove up to the house Friday evening at about 7:15 o'clock, he went first to the back of the house and knocked. After getting no response, he went to the front door. He then looked in a window and noticed that the dial light was still on in the radio, and after entering the home he found his mother dead in her rocking chair.

Early Fermented Beverages

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley says that wine is the oldest and most important of fermented beverages. He says: "It could not escape early discovery, because fruits of all kinds, when crushed and left to natural causes, undergo the alcoholic fermentation. Primitive man must, therefore, have been acquainted with the properties of the fermented juice of fruits, especially of grapes. Wine was known in the remotest historical times, as evidenced by reference to it in the earliest preserved literatures."

HELP! HELP!

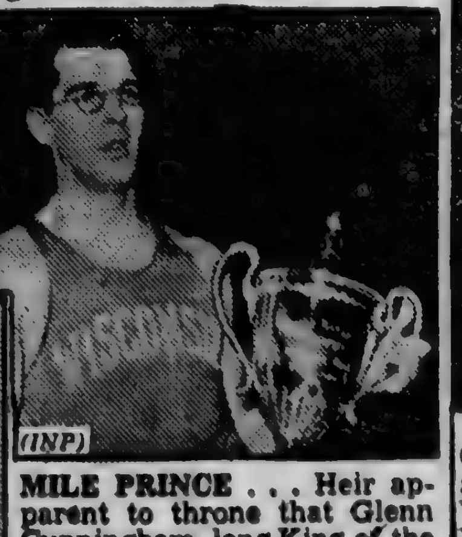
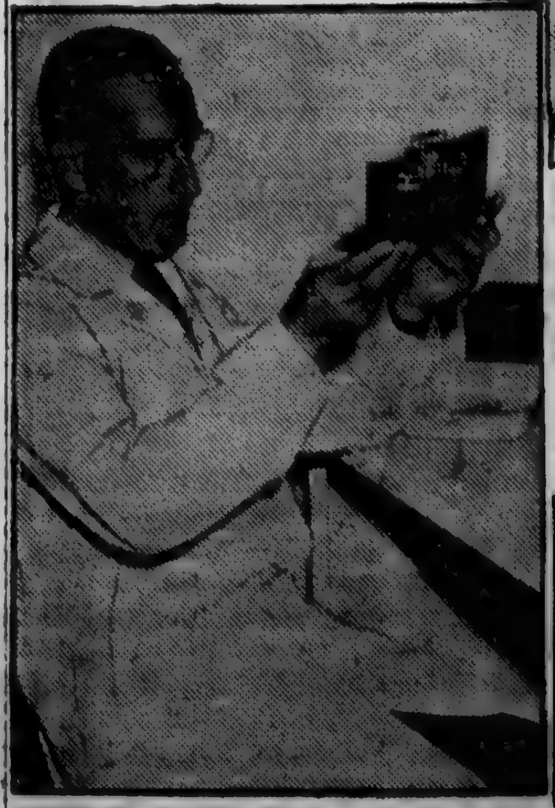
NEAT TURNOVER . . . Part of the brim of this smart gray felt hat, new spring number, doubles back through slot in crown to form a trimming edged with scarlet. It's distinctly a profile type.

BREAD AND SNOW . . . Finnish soldiers, themselves trained on black bread, help themselves to "imported" Russian variety by truckloads after Finn troops had cut off and captured a long Soviet supply column.



MILE PRINCE . . . Heir apparent to throne that Glenn Cunningham, long King of the Milers, is abdicating at end of this season is Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin, most persistent upsetter of the Kansan. He is shown with Wanamaker trophy after beating Glenn in fastest mile (4:07.4) in Madison Square Garden history.

COMFORT REIGNS . . . Coat-of-arms of new "Sartorial Liberties Union" as displayed by Tony Williams, noted men's stylist, symbolizes group's fight for more comfort in men's styles. It includes rubber heels and sleeveless sweaters (replacing vests) which, along with lower collars and generally less rigid and confining clothes, are recommended for those who would emulate nation's nattiest dressers.



OYSTER OKAY-ER . . . Science has finally caught up with famed, if anonymous, "hero who first ate an oyster," with this device adopted by largest food chain to protect customers by proving, via test-tube, oyster goodness. Special chemicals show by reactions to juice whether sample is good or bad.

Safetygrams
BY FRED W. BRAUN
The Safety Man

The pedestrian has been mentioned often in this column. It is necessary to continually remind readers of the fact that the pedestrian problem in traffic safety is one of the most acute in this country.

More than forty per cent of the automobile fatalities in 1939 were pedestrians. Why don't we, then, pay more attention to our walking habits.

The pedestrian should cross only at the intersection and in the crosswalk, and not between intersections. Motorists are required to observe due caution in exercising their right-of-way between intersections; so should the pedestrian be required to exercise similar caution in proceding on his right-of-way in the crosswalk. Keep to the right on crosswalks. Do not meander all over the intersection.

It's Smart to Walk Carefully!

VOL. LV (55 YEARS) (In the St. Joe Valley) ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1940 NUMBER 10

The People's Column!

OUR ONLY WAY OUT OF THE DEPRESSION

During the past few years the common people of this nation have commenced to think and wonder about the reasons for the present economic depression which has continued from 1929.

The problems of unemployment, low parity prices for farm products, with the consequent lack of purchasing power, creating as it does, a widespread paucity of exchange of goods in all industry, are still unsolved.

These problems constitute the three major conditions of this economic depression and they make a vicious circle surrounding all business and labor.

There can be no recovery and escape from this vicious circle of economics until the correct solution is recognized by tht majority of our citizens.

There is only one correct SOLUTION TO THE THREE MAJOR PROBLEMS of this nation. It is so simple, plain and obvious that any one who cares to think about it will recognize it.

Prosperity in this country means PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION CONSTANTLY TO THE PEOPLE. And since our present money system rules our present economic system, the lack of money in circulation effects lack of Distribution and consequent Production, which creates the present condition in this country commonly known as the "DEPRESSION."

Any farmer, any business man and any employed man knows, if he cares to think, that his farm, his business and his job is maintained by constant production and distribution.

The lack of CONSTANT CIRCULATION OF MONEY in all distributive channels of commerce, factories, shops to home, is the sole and single cause of this depression and all other depressions in the past and the challenge is made to any so called financial expert and economist in this country, including the babbling Mr. Babson, of Boston, to refute his statement.

There is only ONE THING in the economic condition of our nation today that can effect prosperous conditions and the maintenance of our modern standards of living, and that is, the constant circlation of money, effecting the constant exchange of goods and their consequent distribution to the people.

All business of this nation today, whether farm, factory or shop and all labor, whether doctor, dentist, skilled or unskilled worker is maintained in a prosperous condition only if there is a free and constant cicrulation of money.

And so the SOLUTION is simple, Let Congress provide a self financing plan for the constant circulation of money.

A Plan of this nature is before Congress now.

In addition to the economic problems, there is one major social problem before this country, that is, security for old age, and it is proposed under the plan before Congress now to provide for the CONSTANT CIRCULATION OF MONEY by the creation of an old age pension fund, financed by a tax on business transactions, with the provision that each eligible person over 60 years of age, spend the amount of the pension each 30 days, thus forcing the CONSTANT CIRCULATION OF MONEY, which is the only solution to this depression.

Money is not a commodity. Money is nothing but a medium of exchange. The very root of all depression is the lack of a free and easy circulating medium of exchange. The Panic of 1907 was caused by the lack of money in circulation, which was prearranged so that all banks in this country would not cash checks nor pay money to their depositors beyond a nominal sum.

THE FARM PROBLEM, THE LABOR PROBLEM, THE CONSUMER DEMAND PROBLEM, are bound together and CANNOT BE SOLVED SEPARATELY. Any attempt by any administration will fail and cause trouble.

The attempt to RECOVER PROSPERITY without providing a base for that prosperity, the constant circulation of money among all of the people in this country, will be futile and a wasted effort.

War, defense, foreign trade and other affairs are minor factors compared with the immediate solution of this depression.

Congress should at once create an old age pension fund by a self financing plan with a forced circulation of the money so obtained. This is the only solution.

Of course, I am aware and know that men like Willie Peglar, the writer of columns and columns, and admits he sings for his supper, and the babbling broker of Boston, Mr. Babson, who says that he has the pulse of the nation in his hand, will haul a few of their choice stock of adjectives at any Proposed Plan, but after all, Peglar and Babson, are hired hands and they eat at the second table.

As for myself, I am just an old American business man, from a pioneer grist mill to a modern handle factory. My father farmed the old William Amassey Jackson place, which is now a part of Lakeside in Fort Wayne. I have seen many depressions in other parts of this nation in the past and they are all the same, caused by the lack of a freely circulating medium of excahnge.

I believe in the capitalistic system and the preservation of the American Standard of Living, and if these are to be maintained, the people of this nation through Congress must devise a medium of exchange that will effect the equal and constant distribution of our modern system of mass production, made possible by the new and continued inventions of labor saving machinery. The horse and buggy era is gone, the modern stream lined labor saving machine mass production is here. We have solved the problem of Production in this country, but we have not solved the problem of Consumption. We are still trying to effect the exchange of an enormous Production to an equal enormous potential Consumption on an old worn out system of money, based upon the silly savage idea that gold is wealth.

The solution of this depression rests upon Congress now.

With the forced circulation of money constantly by the plan of old age pensions before Congress now, the problem of Consumption will be solved.

Until this problem is solved there will be no peace and prosperity for the common people of this nation.

George B. Wilson.

MORTUARY

KIRST

Mrs. Rebecca Cecilia Kirst was born March 21, 1850 in Berks County, Pennsylvania, and departed this life at her home in Spencerville, Indiana, on February 29, 1940, at the age of 89 years, 11 months, and 8 days. She was baptized May 20, 1850 and at the time of her death was a member of the Spencerville Methodist Church.

She was united in marriage to Thomas H. Kirst, which union was severed by death in 1896. In the same year the only child, Ida Kate, also entered the life eternal.

Those who survive her passing include three sisters and two brothers: Mrs. Emma Zern, of Garrett; Mrs. Kate Welch, of Phoenix, Arizona; Mrs. Permilla Galley, of Mechanicsburg, Pa.; Edward Batdorf, of Auburn, Indiana, and Asoph Batdorf, of Harrison Valley, Pa. Also one grandchild, Dolphy E. Kimes, of Ann Arbor, Michigan; three great grandchidren, Miss Dorothy Keller, who lived with Mrs. Kirst and tenderly cared for her during her last illness; James and Mary Keller, of Fort Wayne, and many other relatives and friends. The funeral was held at the Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock with the Rev. L. E. Clayton officiating. Interment in White City Cemetery. Roscoe Walter in charge.

Mrs. Dora Morr spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Morr and family.

ST. JOE HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE SATURDAY EVENING

A $2,300 residential fire loss was suffered by Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Wise, Saturday night at about 8:30, or about 30 minutes after they had left their home for Coldwater, Michigan, to be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hamm, over Sunday.

When the fire was discovered by Glen Kinsey, the fire department was called and D. B. Ridgway, fire chief, stated that the fire spread over the attic rapidly. Holes were cut in the roof but were uanble to control the flames.

Butler department responded to a call and were instrumental in helping to keep the fire from spreading to the Neiland home on the north, which was only about fifteen feet away.

Much of the furniture was removed from the downstairs and was carried to the Kinsey and Coburn homes across the street and into the Wise garage.

At a late hour Saturday night, word had finally reached the Wise family, by his brother, Harold Wise, who lives west of Auburn. Sunday noon Mr. Wise and his family returned to St. Joe to look after their belongings and on Monday moved them by truck to the home of his brother.

Hollis is employed at Auburn and on Tuesday evening a committee of employees were in St. Joe to see what aid they might render to the Wise family.

St. Joe regrets this loss to the owners and also the loss of the home, as houses are scarce in St. Joe, and this is one less. We are unable to state whether it will be rebuilt or not, but let us hope that it will.

REMOVE PAINT

To remove old varnish or paint, apply a thick coat of turpentine. After half an hour wipe this off and cover furniture with coat of thick soap suds made in water and washing soda and applied with a brush. When this dries remove it with a stiff brush and scrape off any leftover varnish with a knife.

CANDIDATAES TO FILE STARTING THURSDAY

Blanks for declarations of intention and petitions are awaiting aspirants to county offices at the office of County Clerk Carl Walter, ready for the official opening of the candidate season Thursday.

The candidates have thirty days to file. Those wanting to be precinct committeemen need to submit only declarations of intention, but other candidates are required to attach to their declarations petitions signed by qualified voters. The number of signers necessary must equal one-half of one percent of the votes cast at the last general election for the party's candidate of secretary of state.

Thus the Republican candidates need at least thirty-three signers and the Democratic candidates twenty-eight signers. The signers must be registered voters and members of the same party as the candidate. Carl Walter recommends that each candidate get more than the necessary number in order to be certain of meeting the legal requirements. Persons other than candidates may circulate petitions, but they must certify to the clerk that they secured the names.

Officers to be elected this year include president, governor, United States senator, congressman, judge, joint state senator, state representative, prosecuting attorney, county clerk, county treasurer, sheriff, county surveyor, coroner, county commissioner north and county commissioner southeast.

Clayton M. Bailey, of Garrett, Democratic county chairman, has reappointed Winthrop W. Ketcham, of Auburn, as a member of the county board of election commissioners. It is expected that Capt. H. C. Springer, of Butler, Republican county chairman, will announce his appointment soon after he returns from Florida the first of next week. The county clerk serves as the third member by virtue of his office.

The time for filing of declarations of candidacy continues for thirty days. Clerk Walter reports that only a few voters have taken advantage of the opportunity to register or re-register. Registration of voters who failed to vote in two consecutive elections are void and re-registration is necessary. Voters who have moved from one precinct to another since the last election must re-register. New voters who will reach the age of twenty-one years by the date of the general election in November are entitled to vote at the primary if they register.

Voters have only until a month from now to register.

Salt and Pepper

Have picnic shoulder boned and sewed on two sides at the market. This leaves one side open for inserting the stuffing. Season pork shoulder inside and out with salt and pepper. Fill cavity with bread stuffing and sew or skewer edges together. Place shoulder fat side up on a rack in an open roasting pan and roast in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until done. Allow 40 to 45 minutes per pound for roasting a boned pork shoulder.

PORK TENDERLOIN IN CREAM

1 pork tenderloin
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons lard
1 cup cream
Flour
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Have pork tenderloin cut into pieces for serving. Season with salt and pepper and brown in hot lard. Add cream and cook very slowly for about 40 minutes or until meat is done. Remove tenderloin to a hot platter, thicken the liquid with flour and bring to the boiling point. Remove from the heat, add lemon juice, and pour over the meat. Serve immediately.

PORK APPLE SALAD (Used as main dish in meals)

2 cups diced cooked pork
1 cup diced celery
1½ cups diced apple
1½ cups grated carrots
1 green pepper, shredded
Mayonnaise

Mix well and toss into enough mayonnaise to coat well. A good way to use left-over pork.

Many a radio singer has a slogan of "High C or Bust."

It looks to readers of The News that Germany is going to need a new Spring shirt.

According to Earl Kinsey, girls are too biased. It is always "buy us this" and "buy us that."

There isn't a man in St. Joe whose wife didn't think, at some time or another, that he was a wonder.

They tell us young folks fret about the future, but you wouldn't think so when you see a crowd of them together.

Nobody has had any word from the fellow who swore he was going to sleep all Winter with his windows wide open.

It is still a bit too early to hear of plans to celebrate the Glorious Fourth!

John Crothers says he hasn't heard of anybody in Europe crying "Uncle" yet.

Remember it is just as necessary to love your country when it is cloudy as when the sun shines.

To say that life is a whirlpool is more refined than saying we are all nuts.

Why is it you can remember who fought in the War of the Roses, and forget your best friend's name when performing an introduction?

A BAD MONTH

Between January and April comes the peak of influenza cases and the month of March is a splendid time for us to pick up the germs that puzzle medical minds. We are aware of the increase of heart cases and often forget the number of hours and days lost in work due to demon cold. There has been no serious influenza epidemic this Winter, but the present weather is not without its possibilities. Guard against the possibility of cold, grippe or flu. Where one leaves off and the next one starts we do not know, only to use common sense against all of them we do know.

FAIR PLAY

The older we grow the wiser we become and this holds true of accepting criticism. Those individuals who enter public office must endure the criticism of the voters. This is understood and generally accepted. Whether it be constructive or destructive, it comes to all candidates. Many men in public affairs realize that too much criticism is often helpful to their cause, for too much of it begins to look like plain fault-finding. With political aspirants flitting here and there talk of elections will be prominent in St. Joe conversations. Let our criticism be founded on facts, truth and fairness.

BUSY FINGERS

Students seldom sit at their typewriters here in St. Joe School and meditate about the wonder of it as they strike each key. Their hurry interfers with their appreciation of the mechanism that makes typing possible. This cry about machines putting people out of work does not apply to the typewriter which employs millions of hands. It was first invented in 1868 when few women worked in offices. The machines made jobs for women brave enough to enter a man's world and these women made jobs for men who manufacture typewriters. The number of men and women who use typewriters today are an argument in favor of the machine age.

A LAST PERFORMANCE

One of the saddest of recent news stories was that dealing with a fire that swept through the Winter quarters of a circus outfit where choice tigers, lions, zebras, monkeys and bears were burned to death in their iron cages. Dut to the danger to the townspeople they could not be released as were the horses, camels and elephants. The cries of the animals were pitiful to hear as the flames, swept by a high wind and fed by many bales of hay, licked their way to the poor creatures.

The circus has held its spot in the heart of St. Joe from early years. The parades down many a Main Street have thrilled the youngest and grayest with big red wagons, gayly bedecked horses and brightly uniformed riders, the clop-clop of camels and elephants, the spangles and glitter, the bands and call of the calliope, hit us to the marrow. The sound of it all dies in the cry of those imprisoned beasts as they threw themselves against the bars. When comes Spring comes the circus and the show will go on. The fire did not mean the end of the act. The parade marches on but we salute the lost and hope they do not miss the sawdust and peanuts too much.

A FOREBODING

Spring is coming! They tell us the sap has started to run in Ohio. Winter is giving us just about all that she has left after a season of surprises. Some of the birds are trying to get tuned up for a preliminary concert even though the accompaniment is the scraping of a coal shovel. But according to indications, Spring is coming! This should be a happy season for any land, a hopeful sign for all people. The fact that statesmen who have been studying the foreign situation tell us that Spring will bring the "big push" when nations will take advantage of the change in weather to destroy, this fact destroys the joy of Spring. We only pray that our American envoy can talk peace terms to the belligerents, can work it out for a peaceful Spring.

Buds will sprout, we hope the guns will not spout. The sap has started to run, we pray the blood will not flow as freely. England and France have been awaiting the Spring for slaughter they tell us. And Spring stands for new life and new hope. It means rebirth and peace. Spring is coming!

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

Useful phrases are among the many footprints left by Presidents on the sands of time. General Grant said: "Let us have peace," and Mr. Coolidge did not choose to run." Theodore Roosevelt's remark that his hat was in the ring, is the most serviceable at the present time. To Mr. Franklin Roosevelt's head gear, being brushed up perhaps but not yet tossed, and to the ample lid of Mr. Garner, has been added the hat of Speaker Bankhead, of Alabama. While by no means dependent on family prestige for his ability and usefulness, his brother is Senator, his father held that office, and last but not least, there is his daughter, Tallulah Bankhead, of the stage. He has learned much during a Congressional tenure of almost a quarter-century. Who can say that he may not have as good a chance for Democratic nomination as most of the other favorite sons?

The action of the House in assigning twenty million dollars to Finland for non-military purposes, produced comment of a wide variety. It is alleged that the distressed country is being given powder puffs and beans where bullets are needed. On the other hand, an appropriation coupled with a non-military limitation is all that the Finns should reasonably expect, it is said. The bill was a legislative grist, ground out between the upper millstone of sympathy for the Finns and the lower millstone of a desire to keep the United States out of war. The motives of all concerned in Congress are above reproach.

With the Russians sprinkling bombs all over Finalnd, and with an army of conquest slowly but surely assembling in units that can be reckoned by the thousand, it must be admitted that the outlook for the smaller land is not bright. It is hoped that supplies may arrive before they are no more than a prize for the invaders. Amid the complicated conditions of the war, nobody knows what to expect or prophesy.

In ancient times, Saul said to David: "Thou art not able to go against this Philistine to fight with him; for thou art but a youth, and he a man of war from his youth." And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone and slang it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone sunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth." Events yet may provide an effective Finnish pebble and slingshot.

When the House took care of the War Department Supply Bill a few days ago, funds for bombproof locks for the Panama Canal were left out. There is sound judgment behind the move that would end objectionable war propaganda, but it does seem as though an attack-proof canal is something that its badly needed. The difficulty encountered in the construction of the great ditch is still remembered. Extensive repairs would be equally trying. During the Spanish-American War, a battleship of the United States was able to make itself useful by a sprint around the Horn. The time has passed when such long-arriving aid would count for much. An obstructed Panama Canal today might turn victory into defeat for Uncle Sam.

An approaching national census always gives rise to resentment. After all, it is something of a snoop. The ire of the average citizen is inclined to rise when intimate personal questions are asked by a stranger, with the assurance that it is a case of answer or serve a term on the rock pile. Just now, one of the irritating barbs is an inquiry about "money wages or salary received," which is explained as meaning "wages or salary in money" and not "money or wages or salary." An effort to probe in too many spots, and too deeply, may defeat the entire undertaking, since, as a Senator pointed out, satisfactory census results cannot be obtained in the face of widespread vexation and a desire to conceal.

BIDDY, I SHO' HAVE YO' WHIPPED WHEN IT COMES TO RAISING CHICKS!
ELEC

A Better Mother Than THE HEN-ELECTRICITY!

INCUBATION methods that are inefficient, expensive or out of date, handicap your entire season's operation. You never realize what they cost untill it is too late. For low first cost when getting started in the chicken business, there is nothing cheaper than the hen. But long ago the hen as a brooder for raising chicks was found to be costly and inefficient.

Successful poultry raisers recommend ELECTRIC BROODING. The cost is low, the fire hazard is absolutely eliminated, no auxiliary heating is necessary even during the coldest weather, and stronger, sturdier chicks, with greater resistance to disease, are developed.

You Can Get More Money Raising QUALITY CHICKS!

THE POULTRYMAN who wisely purchases our quality baby chicks will find that he has, indeed, purchased wisely. These chicks are from the best egg strains in each variety, and each year we add new blood from the best breeders to improve the vigor and egg ability in the selection of our breeding birds.

While we make high production of puality eggs absolutely essential, large size, standard pualities and vigor are also given careful attention in the selection of our breeding birds.

YOU WILL frequently find two hens side by side with absolutely the same feed and care, one of which may lay 200 or more eggs in the year and the other 50 eggs. What causes this difference in egg yield? It is simply that one came from prepotent, heavy laying ancestry and the other did not! Take most of the guess work out of poultry raising by investing wisely in our quality baby chicks from prepotent, heavy laying hens.

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—If one were to inquire into the daily schedule of any of the 435 members of Congress, he would readily concede that representing a Congressional District involves a great deal more than merely attending the daily sessions, speaking on the floor, voting on legislative proposals, listening to debate, and giving attention to matters included in parliamentary procedure.

Rep. George W. Gillie, who represents the Fourth Indiana District in Congress, is a member of the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, the special Republican Committee for the Study of Agriculture and several other official and semi-official groups in Washington.

Membership on these groups, and the same is true of other Congressmen serving on other committees, frequently requires attendance at morning sessions prior to the opening of the daily session of the House at noon.

THE FIRST ITEM on Rep. Gillie's daily schedule is giving personal attention to letters, telegrams and messages from residents of the Fourth District and others. Communications often total into hundreds each day, especially during periods when legislation of national interest is under consideration in the House of Representatives.

A particular instance of this was the neutrality debate during the Special Session of Congress last Fall, when approximately 15,000 messages were received by Rep. Gillie in the short period of a few days.

Rep. Gillis, as have most Congressmen, has established a policy of answering all communications from constituents, what ever their nature, and this often requires working late at night.

OTHER TIME must be devoted daily to meeting constituents who may be in Washington on pleasure trips or on business missions. Special Courtesy cards to the House and Senate galleries, the White House, the Supreme Court, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and other points of interest are given to all visitors.

When time will permit, Rep. Gillie likes to personally escort visitors through the Capitol Building and explain the intricate workings of Congress.

TIME MUST also be given to conferring with officials of various administrative departments on behalf of interested constituents having a wide range of problems requiring some executive action.

Veterans' matters involve extensive departmental contact both in Washington and Indianapolis.

Immigration and naturalization questions are frequent in these days of troubled times throughout the world and often require much correspondence with foreign service agents and personal calls on the Department of State or resident representatives of foreign governments in Washington.

Much time also is devoted to the study of legislation pending before the House and this receives Rep. Gillie's personal attention. Reference research on proposed laws and on matters concerning the public interest almost daily falls within the Congressional office schedule.

AGRICULTURAL yearbooks, farm bulletins, and many other government publications are distributed through Rep. Gillie's office, as well as through other Congressional offices, and during the peak period of the year much secretarial work is devoted to this service. The number of persons served in this manner runs into the thousands annually.

Because of the greatly increased volume of governmental affairs demanding attention in Congressional offices, routine duties are referred to the secretarial staff to be performed in accordance with the personal direction of the Congressman.

In all classes, however, mail is personally read by Rep. Gillie, and replies are dictated to all except routine letters. The waste basket is reserved for the flood of outright propaganda letters which pour from the mimeograph machines of Washington lobbyists.

NEWS FROM COUNTY AGENT

The first week after farrowing is the most critical period in feeding brood sows. Improper feeding at this time often causes the loss of many Spring pigs, explains John Schwab, Purdue University hog man.

During the first three to four days after farrowing, ground oats or wheat bran fed dry will make a good ration. Also provide clean drinking water three or four times daily.

After this starting period begin to feed the regular ration. The following is a good feed mixture: One bushel shelled corn, one bushel whole oats and 10 pounds meat scraps or tankage. The corn and oats may be coarsely ground and mixed with 20 pounds of ground wheat or flour middlings and 10 pounds of meat scraps. The protein feed mixtures have been found to be successful at the Purdue University Experimental Swine Farm, In either mixture feeders may replace meat scraps or tankage, pound for pound, with 50 pounds meat scraps or tankage and 50 pounds soybean oilmeal or 20 pounds meat scraps, 20 pounds fish meal, 40 pounds soybean oilmeal, 10 pounds cottonseed meal and 10 pounds alfalfa leaf meal.

When the young pigs start eating grain, feed the suckling sows literally also. The self-feeder method of feeding may be used very successfully from this period until the pigs are weaned at eight to nine weeks of age.

HULL

Clarence Henry, second son of Henry and Sarah (Widney) Hull, was born in Concord Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, about three miles north of what is now St. Joe, on December 9, 1864. Henry Hull had answered his country's call to help preserve the Union and it was while he was discharging his duty that little Clarence was born, nor did his father see him until he was nearly nine months old. Clarence grew to manhood on the farm his father had cleared and lived his entire life there.

On April 10, 1892 he was united in marriage to Emma Kaellner, daughter of Charles and Margaret (Shoup) Kaellner. To this union was born one daughter, Alta Mae. In 1919 he became a member of St. Joe Lodge No. 400, K. of P., and was a faithful and devoted member of the Order as long as he was able to attend, often walking the three miles or more to attend lodge and help keep it going, and holding almost every official position in the lodge. He was also a member of the Wittenberg Brotherhood. Politically he upheld the traditions of his forefathers and was a lifelong, loyal, Democrat.

"Doc" as most of his friends called him, was a good neighbor, an understanding friend, a cautious and wise citizen, with a smile and cheery word for all. But his work on earth was done and on Friday, March 8, 1940 at the age of 75 years, 2 months and 29 days, the Supreme Ruler of the Universe called him Home to that great Lodge on High where trials and tribulations are forgotten and peace reigns supreme.

He leaves to mourn his departure his wife, Emma, daughter, Alta Mae Freeburn, and nine grandchildren—Lola Wittwer, of Berne, and Clarence, Violet, Lewis, Donald, Carmen, Eugene, Carl, and Betty Freeburn, of Ray, Indiana, and one brother, Delbert L. Hull, of Colorado Springs, Colorado, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Lutheran Church, Rev. Frank Stevenson, officiating. Burial in Riverside Cemetery.

We shall meet but we shall miss him,
There will be one vacant chair;
We shall linger to caress him,
When we breathe our evening paryer.

Card of Thanks

The family desires to thank all their many friends, who have expressed in so many ways their friendship, during the sickness and death of our husband and father.

Mrs. Emma Hull and Family.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT FROM ST. JOE LODGE No. 400 K. of P.

Resolved, that we bow in humble submisison to Him who doeth all things well. May he prove to us all another link in the invisible chain which will draw our hearts nearer our Heavenly Home until we too are permitted to enter through the gates into the City.

Resolved that we extend to the bereaved wife and family of our departer Brother, our sincere condolence and sympathy, be it further,

Resolved that as a token of respect for his memory, our charter be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days.

Resolved that these resolutions be spread upon the mintues of the lodge, a copy be transmitted to the family of our deceased Brother, and the same be furnished to the local paper for publication.

HE'S HOME!

Ho! Ho! Everybody, this monring
I glanced out the window to see
My robin, my red-breasted robin
In the willow, his own special tree.

His tree where each season he's nested
For the rent is easy to pay,
And his babes will be safe in the branches
That soft Summer breezes will away.

No hawk can espy them a nesting,
No fear from the wrath of the gale,
There is food, worms and bugs, for the taking,
No cats can their safety assail.

My robin? course he's my robin!
But how can I tell him, you say,
Well no other robin's so lovely,
And none sing so lovely a lay.

Yes, even his notes are distinctive,
He's off like a flash on the wing,
Oh, no other robin is like him,
He heralds the coming of Spring.

His songs greet each day at the dawning,
With music his day is well spent,
For the songs that he sings through the morning,
I receipt every night for his rent.

This morning he's tired of the journey
From the far away South whence he came,
But he's resting content in the willow
As he greets me from there by my name.

But my name? Oh, the name is our secret,
And I'll never tell, nor will he,
But he calls me each year, when he gets here,
From the top of the old willow tree.

A name that he sets to his music,
A name from a far away day,
That he learned from a swing neath the branches,
From the lips of the children at play.

Gertrude Borthwick.

Only one vice president since John Adams, the one-termer who succeeded George Washington, has been elected under his own steam without first having been moved into the White House by death of his running mate. That was Martin Van Buren, the New Yorker whom Andrew Jackson favored for the succession early in Jackson's first term.

Frank Lawhead, 63, who lives in the West, was in town Thursday calling on boyhood acquaintances with Orva Engle of Garrett. He will be remembered by older residents as the son of Samuel Lawhead and was raised just north of the Widney orchard, on the west side of the road and opposite of what is known as the old Hiram Reasoner farm. He was a school chum of S. W. Armstrong, but not having seen each other since they were ten years old, they had to be told who they were.

Recipes for Using Pork

Variation in meal dishes is something the family especially likes. A new meat dish that looks attractive and tastes even better is always welcome. Mary Lenore Moore, Home Demonstrator Agent suggests that they might try glazed ham loaf or stuffed sausage rolls.

GLAZED HAM LOAF

1 pound ground smoked pork
1 ½ lbs. ground fresh pork
1 cup bread crumbs
1 cup milk
2 eggs
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup dilute vinegar

Have smoked ham and fresh pork ground together. Combine with bread crumbs and moisten with milk and slightly beaten eggs. Shape into a loaf in a dripping uan. Make a sauce of brown sugar, dry mustard and dilute with vinegar. Pour over loaf. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degree) until loaf is done, about one and a half hours. Baste frequently with the sauce.

STUFFED SAUSAGE ROLL

2 lb bulk sausage
2 cups diced raw apples
2 cups bread crumbs
2 small onions, diced

Pat the sausage on waxed paper into a flat rectangular shape about ½ inch thick. Mix the apples, onions and bread crumbs and spread spread over the meat. Roll like jelly roll, tucking the edges in. Then place i nbaking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until done, about 45 minutes.

JUDGE ENDICOTT WILL ASK RENOMINATION FOR OFFICE

Judge Wm. P. Endicott announced Saturday that he will, within a few days, file his declaration and petition in the office of County Clerk Carl Walter for renominatinn on the Republican ticket at the May primary.

Judge Endicott has been elected to the office for three times—once without opposition. He is a native of Cass county, Ind., and attended the law school of Indiana University. He came to DeKalb county in 1909 and taught school at Butler before being admitted to the bar in 1910. He became judge November 20, 1922, and was re-elected in 1928 and 1934. He is well known throughout the state.

Of course there will be no opposition in the primary, and The News can predict his election also because of the satisfaction of his administration of office, that many Democrats will support his candidacy without a question, in the Fall election.

WASHINGTON CURRENT COMMENT

When the European journey of Undersecretary of State Welles was begun, there was considerable speculation as to the purpose of it. The pointed question was asked: What information is desired, or is obtainable, that cannot be secured through diplomatic representatives in the countries to be visited? The nature of the material collected continues a secret, and probably will remain such for some time, perhaps for the duration of the war.

Following a process of elimination, it appears that Mr. Welles is in no sense a tale-bearer from one European foreign office to another, or a self-appointed envoy carrying peace proposals around the war circuit. As a matter of fact, the belligerent powers have nothing to offer along that line. Germany is convinced that she is engaged in a holy conflict for self preservation. England and France are quite as certain of the righteousness of their cause, and have announced that the war must go on until there is decisive victory, one way or the other. As things now stand, peace is possible only if both sides win, and the futility of attempting to lay a peace basis at this time is recognized nowhere more definitely than in the mind of Mr. Welles and in the State Department at Washington.

The powers are ditsinctly war-minded. The immediate effect of the tour will be to goad them to more positive declarations of purpose, and to strengthen their determination that there shall be no compromise. Yet in the long run, the knowledge gained by Mr. Welles' round of the foreign centers of disturbance, may enable the United States to offer better advice and counsel than would be possible otherwise. For our own welfare, in any event, it is wise to be thoroughly posted. The political significance attributed in some quarters to the mission is not for discussion in this column.

The commentator on the probable choices of the National convention may endeavor to tread the safe path of strict neutraility, but it is hard to keep the foot out of ankle-turning holes. Indication of a party preference is bad. Anything that may be construed as an inter-party preference is doubly deadly. Nevertheless, the question will not down, and nothing can be done saving to write about it, with the most innocent of intentions, and stand the gaff if need be.

As to the President, there is a mildly growing opinion that he is out of the contest, a view that as yet lacks either confirmation or repudiation in the particular quarter where the most trustworthy information is available. "Cotton Ed" Smith points to Secretary of State Hull as being as nearly a real American as anyone in public life. The standing and popularity of other candidates is known and of record.

On the Republican side, most space is accorded in the papers at this time to Senator Vandenburg and Mr. Dewey, the friends of the gentleman last named averring that he is the only man of whom the Democrats are afraid. As a mark of political significance and of purely historical interest, he comes into the field with a swing that reminds one of the dash of Mr. Bryan at the height of his vigor.

One of the few surviving Civil War veterans in Washington offered a few days ago the comment that the contest "over there" was the most oddly fought war that he had ever heard about. No doubt he had in mind the slaughter at Gettysburg and Cold Harbor, and took little interest in such steps as the English impounding of the Italian coal ships.

The war does seem, so far, to be chiefly a matter of jockeying for the advantages of pantry and warehouse. It would be well indeed if it would be fought to a conclusion along that line. Years ago, when a prominent man was challenged to a duel, he chose potatoes as the weapons. The British are to be commended for carrying on on offensive having similar characteristics.

Bodine, Secretary of the Indiana 'fish, game and forrest league' was present and gave a very interesting and instructive talk on fish and game.

"Through the efforts of Mr. Bodine an organization known as The St. Joe Fish and Game Protective Association was formed. The first Friday night in each month was the night decided upon as the night on which to hold the meeting was to be held at the town hall. Dues were set at 25c per year.

RALPH SECHLER, Secy.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL ITEMS

Mrs. Lela Northrup ate Sunday dinner with Mrs. Pluma Hamilton.

School was dismissed on Wednesday due to the heavy ice, making it dangerous for school busses.

Announcement of the reappointment of Ralph Sechler, of St. Joe, as a member of the county welfare board and also of the appointment of Mrs. Clara L. MrCague, of two miles west of Butler, as a new member was made Tuesday by Judge Endicott.

County welfare departments thru out the state are now taking applications for the second 1940 enrollment in the Civilian Conservation Corps. The selection period extends from Apirl 1 to April 20. Young men interested in CCC work are urged to make early application at their local welfare office so that necessary certification and investigation may be taken care of before the close of the enrollment period.

GILT OFF THE DOME

By CHARLES BAIRD

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Sen. Sherman (Shay) Minton, stepchild and champion of the Two Per Cent Club, the McNutt machine and the Indiana State House gang, killed all chances of being re-elected last week when he led the unpopular fight against the Hatch Pure Politics Bill in the U. S. Senate.

This is not our prediction but the prediction of the powerful Scripps-Howard newspaper chain, whose sympathies normally are with the Democratic Party. Said Scripps-Howard editors, in a caustic editorial appearing in newspapers in Washington, Indianapolis, Cleveland and several other U. S. cities:

"Every time Mr. Minton opens his mouth against the Hatch proposal he loses a thousand non-partisan votes in Indiana . . . and he can be counted upon to talk himself right back into private life."

Which confirms what Indiana Republicans have thought all along, and what Indiana Democarts have feared since Ray Willis was counted out in the contested Senate election in 1938.

SENATOR MINTON'S reasons for opposing the Hatch Bill are obvious. The measure would prohibit employes of state agencies supported by Federal funds from contributing to campaign funds under pressure or taking active part in political campaigns. This would seriously cripple the Two Per Cent Club, which Minton counts on to return him to the Senate.

In the words of Scripps-Howard editorial:

"If the measure passes it will mean that Indiana's highway workers, its old-age pension agents and its employes in the division of unemployment compensation—whose salaries are paid in part by Federal funds—cannot be compelled to get out and hustle votes for Mr. Minton or be coerced into giving two per cent of their salaries to the campaign war chest."

Mr. Minton is up a tree. No matter what disposition is finally made of the Hatch proposal he stands to lose. He already has lost thousands of independent votes by his opposition to the measure, and he faces the prospect of going into the campaign next Summer with his political machine badly weakened if the Hatch Bill becomes a law.

HARNESS OUT: Rep. Forrest Harness, Kokomo Republican, effectively spiked rumors that he will be a candidate for the Senate the other evening when he was host to a dinner here in honor of Glenn Hillis, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. Harness and Hillis are fellow townsmen, and it would be politically impossible for both of them to be nominated in the State Convention.

Guests at the dinner, held in the swank Army-Navy Club, were Joseph Martin, Jr., House minority leader and potential darkhorse Presidential candidate; Representatives Halleck, Gillie, Springer, Landis and Johnson, all of Indiana, and four Hoosier Washington correspondeAts.

BEER FOR McNUTT: Paul V. McNutt, speaking at the Penn Athletic Club in Philadelphia, complained of President Roosevelt's indecision about backing him for the Presidency.

After the meeting he met Tony Galento, the two-ton prizefighter, who invited him to come over to his beer joint for a drink. "A beer will fix you up," Tony perdicted.

"What makes you think it will fix me up," McNutt inquired. "In my racket," Galento replied, "it hepled me knock the champ down. Maybe it'll do the same for you."

SIDELIGHTS: Census takers take heed: The current issue of the Farm Journal recalls that Represenetative Gillie, while serving as a meat and dairy inspector in Indiana 30 years ago, was chased with a horse whip by a farmer who objected to having his cattle tested . . . Classic comment of candidate, irked by the antics of an opponent: "Fleas don't really hurt, but nobody likes to have them.' . . . Representative Grant, of South Bend, spent last week-end with his wife in Florida—without missing a single session of Congress . . . They flew there with Rep. Fred Bradley, of Michigan, in Bradley's private plane . . . Watch for early developments in the Indiana income tax probe . . Insiders say (1) that the investigators have been called off (2) that indictments may be expected momentarily . . . take your choice . . . Results of the special elections in Ohio and Iowa bouyed GOP hopes of carrying Indiana next Fall . . . Republican goal is a clean sweep of the 12 Congressional districts, including the First, Eighth, Ninth, Eleventh, and Twelfth, now controlled by the Democrats . . . A five per cent swing to the GOP is all that is needed for the Republicans to win four of these districts . . . The shift across the border in Ohio, based on the special elections, was seven per cent.

The markings of a tool said, "Guilty!"

A financially-embarrassed citizen planned to have his Massachusetts property burn when he would be in Florida. Streamers of waxed paper led to pails of alcohol from large lighted candles held erect by 1-inch holes bored in the floor. The police were in time to nip the fire. They suspected the owner, but how to prove his guilt? Among his tools, which he had shipped away, was a 1-inch bit. Chips still in the tool were of the same type of wood as the flooring . . . and the microscopic markings of the bit matched those of the holes!
